Q1. As you may know, there are currently five permanent members of the United Nations Security Council, and any one of them can veto (block) any resolution. Some people have proposed that this should be changed so that if a decision was supported by all the other members, no one member [,if Permanent 5 member (i.e., China, France, Russia, Britain, or United States) add "not even [COUNTRY,]"] could veto the decision. Would you favor or oppose this change?
