Dear NWSA 2001 Conference Participants:

As the Mayor of Minneapolis, I would like to extend a special welcome to all the conference participants at the NWSA 2001 Conference. Welcome to the City of Minneapolis. I am especially pleased that the Department of Women's Studies at University of Minnesota has taken on the task of hosting this conference, which may prove to be a momentous occasion for reflecting upon and envisioning the future of Women's Studies, both nationally and internationally. For those of us involved in the political work of city politics, where the issues of gender, race, class, disability, and sexual preference are deep in the heart of our contemporary struggles, it is good to know that there is a field of study in higher education, and hopefully more and more in secondary education, that educates students about the history and meaning of these issues. Education is the key to political conscience and Women's Studies is definitely part of the solution.

On behalf of the City of Minneapolis and the local communities of diversity, we hope that you will enjoy NWSA's 22nd conference and your visit to the Twin Cities.

Sincerely,

Sharon Sayles Belton
Mayor
May 15, 2001

Dear Conference Participants:

Welcome to the University of Minnesota. It is a great honor for us to host such a progressive event as the National Women's Studies Association Conference. The title of the conference, “2001.Womens.Studies.Com?,” raises a number of issues related to intellectual stewardship in this new century. Indeed, these times challenge us to develop a broadly based understanding of our new technological world. In the increasingly diverse and globalized communities of our new tech future, Women's Studies must continue to engage, question, and challenge. The field of women’s studies has always imagined the future and worked to create a more socially just world. I hope that this conference will advance this work.

We are very proud of our faculty members in the Department of Women's Studies in the College of Liberal Arts. They come from a variety of disciplinary fields—including philosophy, geography, literature, biology, cultural studies, psychology, social science, and the arts with specific expertise in the areas of U.S. diversity, international studies, Latin America, India, and Africa. It has taken time and foresight to build this Department and its wide interdisciplinary connections with many more faculty and students across the university. We cherish the radiance and intellectual challenge Women's Studies brings to the academy, and we hope that Women's Studies will always have a voice in the years that lie ahead of us.

I want to thank the faculty and students in the Department of Women's Studies and in our regional sister institutions who have devoted almost two years to the site planning for this conference. On behalf of the University of Minnesota, we wish all of the conference participants well in your four-day meeting and hope that the ideas emerging from NWSA 2001 will continue to flourish in the long road ahead.

With best wishes, I am

Sincerely yours,

Mark G. Yudof
President

Dear NWSA 2001 Participants:

I am very pleased to welcome you to the University of Minnesota and to this conference, which is both a celebration of the phenomenal success of women's studies as an academic discipline and an occasion to revisit issues and questions, ask some new questions, and share stories and wisdom across generations of feminist scholars and across institutional and cultural boundaries.

Higher education has come a long way since the days when study of women's scholarly, artistic, and literary works and accomplishments was relegated to "special topics" courses. Women's studies not only has come into its own as a distinct interdisciplinary but has become a force to be reckoned with across the academy.

Women's studies has transformed higher education. It has taken enormous risks. It has challenged orthodoxies, tweaked sacred cows, and toppled canonical hierarchies and academic houses of cards. It has revisited all of the academic disciplines and rewritten their time-honored scripts. It has helped realign those disciplines and attenuated the boundaries between them. It has changed how we see the world, what cultural artifacts we consider worth studying and teaching, who our "heroes" and leaders are, and how we understand everything from literature and the arts to health care, human relationships, power, "culture," national boundaries, and the global economy.

It has helped us to reimagine, rewrite, and repopulate historical narratives and to understand that there are many ways of knowing and seeing, many lenses and discourses, and many different understandings. Thanks to the courage and vision of women's studies founders and the passion and commitment of successive generations of feminist scholars, women's studies has taken its legitimate place in the classrooms, laboratories, textbooks, and journals of the academy. Indeed, women's studies has transformed not only the academy but also the world surrounding it.

This is truly cause for celebration. The work that you will do over the next few days is exceedingly important: You and your colleagues will be helping to shape the future of women's studies and discussing from all points of view its place in this very complex, unpredictable, and often perplexing new age. You will be asking large and momentous questions, and doing what we do best, working together to seek answers and discover collaborative new paths. I welcome you to Minnesota and to this very significant gathering in the College of Liberal Arts at the University of Minnesota.

Best wishes,

Steven Rosenstone, Dean
College of Liberal Arts
Dear Conference Participants:

Greetings as we embark upon the 22nd annual NWSA Conference. The theme, 2001.WOMEN’S STUDIES.COM?, addresses the effects, challenges, and benefits of technology. In addition we will explore the future of women’s studies. Jacquelyn Zita and her hardworking regional committee have prepared many new venues such as poster sessions and research cafes to add to our regular conference features.

We owe our gratitude to Jacquelyn Zita, Chair of Women’s Studies at the University of Minnesota, and her office staff, Jodi Horne, Kati Medvedev, and Kim Surkan, for their tireless efforts in putting together this conference at the site. Special thanks go to organizers of conference events: Dawn Rae Davis for the Writer’s Series, Marwa Hassoun for the CD-ROM project, Sidney Matrix for the Professional Development Center, Kati Medvedev for the film series, Kathryn Lanier for the book exhibit, Patty Finstad for childcare, Terri Hawthorne for the Smartmart, Pat Darling for local outreach and publicity, Judith Roy for fundraising and the undergraduate student lunch, and Kathleen Laughlin, Peg O’Connor and Jacquelyn Zita for the embedded conference.

Sincere appreciation goes to Bea Thompson, NWSA Conference Coordinator, for the conference website and for putting together the program book. Thanks to Ellen Cronan Rose, NWSA Conference Chair, and her committee for conference scheduling. Thank you to Diana Scully, NWSA Treasurer, for her many hours overseeing financial negotiations and serving as institutional memory. We are eternally grateful to Loretta Younger, NWSA Executive Administrator, and the staff in the national office for all their hard work in support of the conference. Thank you to my plenary committee for their assistance in selecting speakers.

We are deeply appreciative of the financial support for the conference given by the University of Minnesota. Thank you to President Mark G. Yudof, the College of Liberal Arts, the Office for University Women, the Center for Advanced Feminist Studies, and the Department of Women’s Studies for their generous support.

These are a few of the people and groups who have contributed to making this conference what we hope will be an invigorating and intellectually challenging experience. Enjoy!

Annette Van Dyke, 2000-01 President
Dear Conference Participants,

The Department of Women’s Studies and the College of Liberal Arts at the University of Minnesota extend a deep and sincere welcome to all of the conference participants at NWSA 2001. We are delighted that NWSA selected our location for the conference and have certainly learned an enormous amount about conference planning, production, and surprising pleasure in our collective work as the Site-Coordination Team, the Regional Steering Committee, and the Embedded Conference Planning Committee.

I want to thank especially the graduate students in our Feminist Studies Ph.D. Program for their helpful contributions: Jodi Horne, Kataline Medvedev, Sidney Matrix, Dawn Rae Davis, and Marwa Hassoun. Kim Surkan, joined our site team in the last stretch, but she was absolutely essential in the final moments of Program Book production, along with the extraordinary Bea Thompson, NWSA 2001 Conference Coordinator in Chicago, who coordinated the thousands of e-mails we received informing the production of all the materials for this multifaceted conference. Together with Bea, Loretta Younger, Reba Davis, and Meunda Williams in the national NWSA Office in Maryland deserve more than our thanks for their hard work on this conference. Locally, the success of our regional effort was only made possible because of the steady commitment of faculty from neighboring institutions: Judith Roy (Century College), Kathleen Laughlin (Metropolitan State University, Minneapolis), Maria Bevacqua (Minnesota State University, Mankato), Beth Bartlett (University of Minnesota in Duluth), Terri Hawthorne (Metropolitan State University, St. Paul) and Peg O’Connor (Gustavus Adolphus College, St. Peter, Minnesota). I also want to thank Steven Rosenstone, Dean of the College of Liberal Arts, for the financial support the College provided for the conference and his commendable personal support for the Department of Women’s Studies. We deeply appreciate the additional assistance we received from the Office for University Women, the Schochet Center for Gay, Lesbian, Bisexual, and Transgender Studies, the Minnesota Women’s Center, the Tucker Center for Research on Girls and Women in Sport, the Center for Advanced Feminist Studies, and the President’s Office at Gustavus Adolphus College. Special thanks is also given to Annette Van Dyke, our NWSA President, Diana Scully, Bette Tallen, and Ellen Cronan Rose whose leadership proved indispensable at critical moments in the birthing of NWSA 2001.

The Department of Women’s Studies at the University of Minnesota is more than a quarter century old, maintaining a thriving undergraduate program and a Ph.D. program in Feminist Studies, now entering its fourth year of existence. As a faculty, staff, and student effort, we are committed to the field of Women’s Studies as an interdisciplinary, multicultural, and transnational research-based, educational, and political project which strives for the production of new knowledge, new scholars, new curricular developments, and renewed activism ready for a future and more socially just world. This is why we wanted NWSA 2001 to address the future of our field and to provide a national forum for discussing issues for those who care about Women’s Studies to think, talk, and dream collectively together in all our diversity and from all of our locations.

We hope that you will find your hopes and dreams rekindled at this conference. We encourage thinking out loud and acting on the future, immediately.

In Solidarity,

Jacquelyn N. Zita

Conference 2001 - Special Event, The Women’s SmartMart

THE WOMEN’S SMARTMART
Open: Friday, June 15 and Saturday, June 16
Hours: 9:00 AM - 6:00 PM
Location: Radisson Hotel, Hubert Humphrey Room

THE WOMEN’S SMARTMART is a new and exciting concept for the NWSA Conference. It features an International Arts and Crafts Fair, a Women’s Studies Graduate Programs Showcase, a Women’s Studies Professional Development Center and Job Fair, special CD ROM Project: What Can You Do With a Women’s Studies Degree?, and Networking Tables with all kinds of Women’s Studies-related information.

SMARTMART INTERNATIONAL ARTS AND CRAFTS FAIR features women artists and crafters in a retail environment where they can showcase and sell their work. The selection criteria for exhibitors emphasized multicultural and global artists and/or artists whose work features a social action focus. Clothing, artwork, jewelry, crafts, and cards will be available. There will be hand-dyed batik fabric clothing, nature-based artwork and dolls, metal and rock jewelry, and oils and watercolors. This will be a visually stimulating environment with music, artwork and fabrics from many countries. There will be an open microphone where artists and organizations can talk about their work. A daily sign up sheet will be provided. A portion of the open microphone time will be devoted to a poetry exchange organized by Marilyn Cuneo from the Women’s International League for Peace and Freedom. Bring a favorite poem to read or write one on the spot. The goal of the Women’s SmartMart is to connect NWSA scholars and feminist artists and activists. The presence of individual artists and social action community organizations will enrich and enhance the conference and provide educational opportunities for NWSA members. This event is sponsored by Metropolitan State University Women Services and co-sponsored by the University of Minnesota Department of Women’s Studies.

Exhibitors include:
- Agitu Wodajo, Director of the International Women’s Self Reliance Center and the Ethiopian Women’s Self Reliance Center. SMARTMART CD-ROM PROJECT

What Can You Do With A Women's Studies Degree?

This is a special CD-ROM project developed by students and faculty at the University of Minnesota. The project serves as a reply to the frequently asked question, “What can you do with a Women’s Studies degree?” Each CD-ROM includes information about Women’s Studies alumni from programs across the country. A valuable resource for program administrators, advisors, career services officers, and students considering a major in Women’s Studies, this electronic directory documents the paths graduates in the field have taken after finishing their degrees, as well as their advice to those still in school. Stop by the CD-ROM Project Table conveniently located in the SmartMart to purchase your copy for 2001, and sign up to make your institution part of next year’s electronic directory. There you will find information forms for Women’s Studies Alumni interested in contributing to the project at the CD-ROM Project Table.

The SMARTMART PROFESSIONAL DEVELOPMENT CENTER features the WOMEN’S STUDIES JOB FAIR, where employment notices will be posted for faculty, post doc, and visiting scholar positions, and internship opportunities for Women’s Studies students will be advertised. The Development Center also includes the GRADUATE PROGRAMS SHOWCASE, where informational brochures from institutions offering graduate degrees and certificates in Women’s Studies are available. In addition, you can pick up information about funding opportunities and resources for feminist research, publishing, activism, travel and program development. In conjunction with the Professional Development Center, NWSA participants are especially invited to attend the double session on “Pathways to Publishing: Getting Your Feminist/Womanist Scholarship in Print” (Amundson Hall 240, Friday 2:00 - 4:45) facilitated by journal editors and editorial board members. Journal editors invite all NWSA 2001 participants to the Editorial Fête in the Book Exhibit in the University Room in the Radisson, Friday 4:00 pm - 5:00 pm for libation and discussion on journal publication questions and focal concerns for specific journals.

Embedded Conference - Special Sessions, Saturday, June 16, 2001

Programs on the Future of the Field

One special feature of the Embedded Conference is a series of Workshops and Discipline Review Panels considering the future of the field. Each Workshop focuses on a contemporary issue emerging in women's studies. Discipline Review Panels consider the intersections between feminist scholarship in the disciplines and women's studies. The Workshop discussions will be based on an assigned reading. Pre-registration is required. Space is limited. Copies of the assigned article(s) will be in your registration packet for registered participants. Please read the article(s) before attending the workshop.

NWSA accomplishes its work through the efforts of member volunteers, with the able paid support of an executive administrator and her part-time staff in the national office, and a half-time Conference Coordinator who manages the conference program data base, the website and other work associated with the conferences. Responsibility for projects, including programming for the national conference, falls to elected officers and governing council members, committee chairs and members, and other volunteers from various constituencies within NWSA. What this means is that NWSA is all of us, and we need people to volunteer - for committee membership, to strengthen regional associations, to join and energize sub-groups within NWSA. In addition, we would like more members to run for office, to encourage their programs and departments to pay for an institutional membership in NWSA, and to give consideration to hosting the national conference.

The Governing Council and NWSA’s Mission

The officers and members of the Governing Council welcome suggestions, financial support, constructive criticism, and offers to help with the work of the association. The volunteers who make NWSA possible are committed, in the words of the Constitution ratified in the spring of 1999, “to further the social, political, and professional development of Women’s Studies throughout the country and the world, at every educational level and in every educational setting.” This is a large and even global mission, and it only becomes a reality when members volunteer for service in NWSA. The Constitution continues, “To this end, this organization is committed to being a forum conducive to dialogue and collective action dedicated to feminist education and change.” NWSA members from different identity groups and disciplinary backgrounds work in coalition with each other in order to ensure a future for Women’s Studies both in the academy and in the community.

Regional Women’s Studies Associations

Regional women’s studies associations exist to strengthen networks among the approximately 900 women’s studies programs, departments, women’s centers and their affiliated community organizations. At the regional sessions you will elect your regional representative who goes to the Constituency Council and also have an opportunity to network with neighboring regional colleagues, students and activists. Regions meet Friday, June 15, 2001, 8:00 - 9:15 A.M. in the locations listed below. If you do not know the region to which you belong, see the following list.

Regions of NWSA

Great Lakes: Illinois, Michigan, Wisconsin – Radisson - Coffman
Mid-Atlantic: Delaware, District of Columbia Maryland, New Jersey, Pennsylvania – Radisson - Campus
Midwest: Iowa, Kansas, Missouri, Nebraska – Radisson - Rotary
North Central: Indiana, Kentucky, Ohio, West Virginia – Ford Hall 115
Pacific Southwest: California, Hawaii – Ford Hall 130
Rocky Mountain/Southwest: Arizona, Colorado, Nevada, New Mexico, Utah, Wyoming – Ford Hall 150
South Central: Arkansas, Louisiana, Oklahoma, Texas – Radisson - Presidents
Southeast: Alabama, Florida, Georgia, Mississippi, North Carolina, South Carolina, Tennessee, Virginia – Ford Hall 151
Upper Midwest: Minnesota, North Dakota, South Dakota – Radisson - Alumni

Caucuses and Task Forces

Caucuses have a long history in NWSA, beginning with the founding conference in 1977; they reflect the desire of some NWSA members to affiliate in sub-groups which reflect our diversity of identities. According to the 1999 revised Constitution and Bylaws, CAUCUSES designate groups that are under-represented within society or NWSA as an organization. TASK FORCES are oriented towards an issue or problem that can be solved through action. AREA INTEREST GROUPS are oriented toward those who wish to meet around a common scholarly interest. NWSA has acted from the beginning on the belief that members whose identities, voices, and points of view may be numerically under-represented within NWSA might not find an organizational base or be able to make themselves heard without caucus representation. Task Forces, however, do not require representation within the governance structure, and can accomplish their projects without its intervention. Area Interest Groups accomplish their goals primarily through the development of regular conference programming. Currently active caucuses, task forces, area interest groups, and any groups that specifically asked for time to discuss formalizing an area interest group or task force have scheduled meetings at this conference. If your group does not already have a time and place and wishes to have a meeting, contact the NWSA desk and we will try to accommodate your request. Forms for recognition of an area interest group or task force can be obtained at the registration desk and presented at the Membership
National Women's Studies Association - Conference 2001

Assembly on Sunday Morning. Completed forms must be returned to the registration desk by Friday, June 15 at 4:00 PM.

Governance Structure: Governing Council, Constituency Council, and the Membership Assembly

The Governing Council (GC) is comprised of the elected officers, 3 elected Members-at-Large, 5 elected Representatives by/from the Constituency Council (including the Chairs of the Women of Color and Lesbian Caucuses), and Chairs of the Standing Committees. The GC meets twice a year (in January, and in June before and after the conference) to establish policy for NWSA; between GC meetings, the Executive Committee (comprised of the elected officers and Conference Chair) is authorized to make decisions on behalf of the GC and NWSA.

The Constituency Council (CC) is composed of the elected representatives of the caucuses and regions. It is chaired by the NWSA President Elect, Magdalena Garcia-Pinto. The CC elects three members of its body to the GC at a meeting that takes place after all contributing groups have met. The Constituency Council meets Saturday, June 16, 2001 at 5:30 - 6:45 PM in Ford Hall, Room 150.

The Membership Assembly (MA) meets annually at the conference to hear reports from the officers and other members of the GC, to vote on any constitutional amendments that have been proposed and duly circulated, and to consider approving recommendations and resolutions from the membership or from regions, caucuses, task forces, or interest groups directed to the Governing Council. Members of record 60 days prior to the meeting may participate in, and vote at, the meeting. The Membership Assembly meets Sunday, June 17, 2001 at 8:30 - 10:15 A.M. in the Radisson - Hubert Humphrey Room

How to Submit Recommendations and Resolutions at the Membership Assembly

Recommendations and resolutions, if approved by the Membership Assembly, are addressed to the Governing Council for further endorsement or implementation; the GC takes up recommendations and resolutions at its meeting immediately following the close of the conference.

- A recommendation is an expression of concern or principle; it does not require action on the part of NWSA, although it may recommend writing a letter, sending a telegram, or making a similar educational gesture, endorsing the substance of the recommendation.

- A resolution urges the Governing Council to develop and/or implement policies, procedures, or plans of action; a resolution involves a commitment of the Association's resources, either in money or time of the officers of the organization. Sponsors of recommendations and resolutions should consider and include in the proposal the following categories as appropriate: cost (and source of funding); responsibility for implementation (and to what extent the sponsors are willing to do the work); timetable (and who is responsible for meeting deadlines); and specifics (names, addresses, e-mail, phone numbers, etc.). Recommendation/Resolution Forms are available at the Conference Registration Desk throughout the conference. Completed forms must be returned to the registration desk by Friday, June 15 at 4:00 PM.

Membership Information

Membership in NWSA is open to anyone interested in promoting women's studies education in the community, schools, colleges and universities. Membership dues range from $25 for student, community activist, or low income members to $95 for individual membership to $1200 for a life membership. Institutional membership ranges from $70 to $200 to $800 for a five-year membership.

NOTE: NWSA is a 501 (c)3 organization as classified by the IRS. This means that in order to keep our status as a tax-exempt, non-profit organization, we are prohibited from engaging in political activities. While it is far from certain that NWSA members and the IRS would agree on the meaning of the phrase “political activity,” NWSA must restrict its external advocacy or actions to those that clearly fall within the rubric of our educational mission. Although NWSA itself may be prohibited from engaging in political activity, this does not restrict the speech or action of NWSA’s membership. Persons or groups wishing to enlist the advocacy of NWSA’s membership may circulate petitions at the conference and/or may purchase mailing labels from the national office in order to communicate directly with members. Persons or groups outside of NWSA may not solicit conference attendees for financial support.

Ceremonies and Celebrations
The Jewish Caucus is issuing a special invitation to all women, Jewish and non-Jewish, to attend Shabbat, Friday, June 15, 6:30 - 7:30 PM in the Radisson - Regents.

On Saturday, June 16, 7:00 - 8:00 PM the Spirituality Task Force will sponsor a Summer Solstice Ritual (corner of Beacon and Harvard Streets - behind the Radisson).

NWSA Annual Saturday Night Dance
The NWSA 2001 Saturday night dance will take place in Radisson - Hubert Humphrey Room and will feature well-known (and really hot!!) Twin Cities DJ, Catherine Azora-Minda, who plays an eclectic mix of music highlighting women artists - from Aretha Franklin to the Dixie Chicks, Tina Turner to Jill Sobule. Musical requests are encouraged. A cash bar will be available at the dance. This indoor event is smoke-free and air-conditioned. Please observe the no-scent policy in accordance with NWSA's commitment to disability access. The event is free for NWSA conference participants with a $5.00 recommended donation for those not registered for the conference. Plan to dance the night away.

Film Series
Films will be shown in the Murphy Hall 100, Hegen Room. A schedule, description of films, and list of film distributors are included in this program.

Social Security Workshop
You are invited to a special session by a Social Security Administration representative addressing the issues facing women in planning for their financial future, Thursday, 12:30 – 1:45 pm, Radisson Coffee Lounge, Second Floor.

Press and Media Representatives
Members of the press and media representatives with appropriate identification should come to the Conference Registration Desk to receive a press pass and information concerning how to contact officers, conference speakers, and NWSA representatives.

Special Ribbons
Members of the Governing Council will be wearing red ribbons attached to their name tags; conference volunteers will be wearing green ribbons. If you need assistance or directions, please look for someone wearing a green or red ribbon. Plenary speakers will be wearing white ribbons, and NWSA life members will be wearing gold ribbons.
National Women's Studies Association - Conference 2001

Writers Series
On Thursday and Friday, readings by well-known regional and national writers will be held in the Faculty Room at the Radisson. These events are open to all conference registrants at no additional charge. See the Writers Series section in this program for detailed information.

Hotel - The Radisson Metrodome
The Radisson Metrodome (615 Washington Avenue S.E., Minneapolis) is the conference hotel and many events, including selected panel sessions, the Embedded Conference, Book Exhibit and Writer's Series, will take place at the Radisson. The Radisson Metrodome is situated on the University of Minnesota campus. It offers two restaurants and catering service, a lounge and exercise room, accessible rooms and restrooms. Occupants have complimentary use of the University of Minnesota's state-of-the-art recreation facility and aquatic center. Rooms are equipped with coffee makers, dual-line phones with voice-mail, and a modem hook-up.

Transportation
TAXI fare to or from the airport ranges from $25-$30 (one-way). Generally, you should be able to find a taxi outside the Radisson. You can also call for a taxi at the following numbers: Green & White: (612) 522-2222; Red & White: (612) 871-1600; Yellow Cab Co. (612) 824-4000/-4444; Rainbow Taxi: 612-332-1615. Rainbow Taxi has three wheelchair accessible vans and take advance reservations for long hauls, such as to and from the airport.

EXPRESS SHUTTLE COACHES run by the airport every half-hour from 6:30 a.m. to 11:00 p.m. and they will be supplying more coaches for the days of NWSA arrivals. One-way to any of the University hotels is $13.00 per person. Round trip is $20.00 per person. The return trip to the airport requires a reservation call 24 hours in advance: 612-827-7777. Bus schedules are available at information desks in the Radisson Hotel and in buses.

Fitness Programs
See registration folder for information.

Photocopying
Photocopying, printing, and computer services are available at Kinkos (612 Washington Ave, SE) across the street from the Radisson Metrodome, 612-379-2452, 24 hours.

Book Exhibit
The Book Exhibit is located in the University Ballroom at the Radisson Metrodome. As in previous years, publishers, book sellers and crafts people will exhibit feminist books, journals and other materials for purchase. Be sure to stop by the NWSA booth for conference memorabilia and much more!

Childcare
Childcare for conference 2001 will be provided by the University of Minnesota Child Care Center (UMCCC). UMCCC is accredited by the National Academy of Early Childhood Programs, a division of the National Association for the Education of Young Children and licensed by the State of Minnesota. The center is equipped and staffed to care for children between the ages of 17 months and 10 years with a curriculum that focuses on opportunities for learning in a non-sexist, multicultural, anti-bias, anti-violence environment. NWSA has selected three childcare packages to meet the various needs of conference participants. Parents may use the childcare services on an unlimited basis on the days for which parents register; however, the UMCCC strongly recommends that parents NOT leave their children at the center for more than eight continuous hours each day.

Disability
NWSA is committed to providing reasonable accommodations for all conference participants who need assistance. If you have contacted NWSA prior to the conference to arrange assistance, please identify yourself to someone at the Conference Registration Desk. Persons with disabilities seeking accommodations while at the conference but who have not previously arranged for assistance also should identify their needs at the Conference Registration Desk. Every effort will be made to provide a reasonable accommodation.
Reminder to Participants and Presenters

Conference attendees are requested to refrain from wearing scented products that may trigger reactions in chemically-sensitive persons. NWSA requests that presenters provide large print copies of their presentation material and/or visual materials to assure access to all participants.

NWSA Women of Color Caucus Service Award

One objective of the National Women’s Studies Association Women of Color Caucus is to encourage and promote the work of Women of Color scholars and activists. To that end, we further the academic achievement of emerging scholars and activists of color by offering scholarships for scholarly work, which fosters an understanding of the issues and concerns of women and girls of color within the U.S. and abroad. One challenge we face is that of encouraging greater numbers of students of color across the racial ethnic spectrum to submit their scholarly work for consideration. We also face the larger challenge of making that work accessible to the National Women’s Studies Association and the broader academic community. This year’s Women of Color Service awards are dedicated to individuals and/or organizations who have made extraordinary contributions to helping the Caucus discover, celebrate and advance the work of scholar-activists of color.

Travel Grant Awards

Designed to make it possible for a broader range of new and continuing NWSA members to participate in the Annual Conference in Minneapolis, the Conference Travel Grant program reaffirms NWSA's commitment to promoting inclusivity. This year's program was funded by an allocation from the Governing Council of NWSA, made possible by the support of individual NWSA members. In particular, we received a most generous gift from the immediate past president of NWSA, Berenice Carroll. We are grateful for such generosity, and encourage others to follow that lead, either by supporting the travel costs to the conference for students from your home institutions, or by donating to NWSA, so that this program can continue. We are also grateful for the assistance of Ines Senna Shaw and Beatrice Thompson in the very difficult selection process.

Radical Teaching in the Feminist Classroom:
Women’s Writing, Translations and Difference

This year’s NWSA Writers Series is focused upon connections between women’s creative writing and radical feminist teaching in the Women’s Studies classroom. Writers will be reading from their creative works and discussing with audiences how they see their work in relation to Women’s Studies pedagogy.

Thursday June 14

Radisson - Faculty - 8:15-9:00 AM
Toni McNaron

Toni McNaron has taught at the University of Minnesota for 36 years and is retiring in June of 2001. Her research interests include a memoir, an ethnographic study of lesbian and gay faculty across the US, a book on famous sister pairs, a collection of writings by women recovering from incest, and pedagogical theory. McNaron was the first chair of Women’s Studies at the University of Minnesota and the first director of the Center for Advanced Feminist Studies. Currently she is the Academic Director of the Schochet Center for GLBT Studies and works with 44 high school English teachers to bring multi-cultural literature into their classrooms. When she is not working, she likes to garden, travel, and converse with her life partner.

Radisson - Faculty - 9:00-9:45 AM
Judith Katz

Judith Katz is the author of two novels, The Escape Artist (Firebrand Books 1997) to be published next year by Knaur in Germany, and Running Fiercely Toward a High Thin Sound (Firebrand Books 1992) which received a Lambda Literary Award for best lesbian fiction. Her work has been widely anthologized in such collections as A Woman Like That (Avon Books 1999), The Penguin Book of Women’s Humor (Penguin 1997), Tasting Life Twice (Avon Books 1995). She has received numerous awards including grants in fiction from the Minnesota State Arts Board (1996, 1988), the Bush Foundation (1991), and the National Endowment for the Arts (1991), and a Loft-McKnight Fellowship (1990). Katz currently teaches writing and cultural studies in Hamline University’s MAL/MFA program, at Minneapolis College of Art and Design, and in the MLS and Women’s Studies Programs at the University of Minnesota.
Susan Power

Susan Power is the author of The Grass Dancer, (Berkeley, 1995) and winner of the 1995 PEN/Hemingway Award. She is a graduate of Harvard College, Harvard Law School, and the Iowa Writers’ Workshop, and the recipient of a James Michener Fellowship, the Radcliffe Bunting Institute Fellowship, and the Princeton Hodder Fellowship. Her fiction has been collected in The Atlantic Monthly, The Paris Review, and Story magazine, among others, and she was selected for inclusion in The Best American Short Stories 1993. She is completing a second novel, War Bundles, and a collection of stories titled, Chicago Waters. Power currently resides in St. Paul, Minnesota, where she is this year’s Minnesota Mentor for the Loft Creative Writing Center.

LeAnne Howe

LeAnne Howe, an enrolled member of the Choctaw nation of Oklahoma, is an American Indian author, playwright, and scholar. She has also published legal essays, written film scripts for public television documentaries and traveled internationally as a lecturer. Ms. Howe was a recipient of writing fellowships at The MacDowell Colony, Ragdale Foundation, Atlantic Center for the Arts, and Virginia Center for Creative Arts. In 1993, she was awarded an Iowa Artist-In-Residence grant for Indian Radio Days, a play co-authored with Roxy Gordon, which has been staged in the Midwest and at the Mark Taper Forum, Los Angeles and The National Museum of the American Indian in New York City. She received fellowships for historical research on the Choctaw from the Smithsonian Institution and The Newberry Library in Chicago, and she is writing the text for the permanent exhibit about Choctaw creation stories for the Smithsonian’s National Museum for the American Indian, opening on the Mall in Washington, DC in 2003. Her fiction appears in numerous anthologies, including Spider Woman’s Granddaughters (Beacon Press), American Indian Literature, Revised Edition (University of Oklahoma Press), Earth Son, Sky Spirit: An Anthology of Native American Writers (Doubleday), to name a few. Her first novel, Shell Shaker, will appear in fall 2001 (Aunt Lute Books). She taught at Carleton College in Northfield, Minnesota, and currently teaches at Wake Forest University in Winston-Salem, North Carolina.

Radisson - Faculty - 4:15-5:00 PM
Jennifer Abod

Video Visions: A Workshop at the Edge of Each Other's Battles

Jennifer Abod, Ph.D., is an award winning feminist media producer, broadcaster and educator. She is currently teaching in the Women's Studies program at California State University, Long Beach. The Edge of Each Other's Battles: The Vision of Audre Lorde is Abod's first feature video documentary. Other Profile Productions include: A Radio Profile of Audre Lorde (1 hr., 1988 Lady Slipper), I Am Your Sister: Cultural Events Video (1 hr., 1990, Third World Newsreel). Abod's workshop includes discussion of issues of representation that had to be considered in creating the video The Edge and highlights relationships between Lorde's writing, feminist pedagogy, and activism.

NOTE: A special screening of Jennifer Abod's feature video, The Edge of Each Other's Battles: The Vision of Audre Lorde (the video on which her workshop is based) will be at 12:30-2:00 PM Thursday, June 14 in Room 2101 at the Basic Sciences and Biomedical Engineering Building (just a few blocks from the Radisson Hotel). The video is about poet Audre Lorde's broad social vision and the translation of that vision into a historic transnational conference, "I Am Your Sister: Forging Global Connections Across Differences" (October 1990, Boston) which used Lorde's work as the foundation of the conference, while celebrating her life.

Voices From the Gaps

Voices from the Gaps, a website for biographical, bibliographical and critical information about American minority women writers, offers more than just a resource of expandable data about these writers. This presentation examines ways in which the Voices site engages innovations in both teaching and research. We will focus on 1) classroom pedagogies which link humanities and technology, theory and practice; and 2) research questions which the site addresses regarding, for example, the qualities of on-line writing and issues of "minority" identity.

Radisson - Faculty - 9:00-9:45 AM
Indira Junghare
Indira Junghare, born in Neri in Nagpur district, Maharashtra, has been teaching at the University of Minnesota since 1971. She has received numerous awards for her scholarship and teaching, including a distinguished teaching award (UMN), a Gordon L. Starr award, an Outstanding Faculty award from the College of Liberal Arts, a Council of Asian-Pacific Minnesotans' Leadership award, and the University of Minnesota's Outstanding Community Service Award (2001). Her scholarly publications have been in the field of Indian linguistics, literature, and folk literature, and she has translated for publication several plays, novels, and short stories. Her first book of poetry, Kavita Sarovar: The Poetry Pond (1999) by Somaiya University Publications, includes original poems in marathi and their "transcreations" into English. She is presently working on her second book of English-Marathi poetry.

Radisson - Faculty - 2:45-3:30 PM
Diane Glancy
Diane Glancy is a Professor at Macalester College in St. Paul, where she teaches Native American Literature and Creative Writing. Her books include Pushing the Bear (a novel of the 1838 Cherokee Trail of Tears, Harvest Books), The Voice that Was in Travel (short stories, University of Oklahoma Press) and The Relief of America (poetry, Northwestern University Press). Forthcoming novels are Designs of the Night Sky (University of Nebraska Press) and The Man Who Heard the Land (Minnesota Historical Society Press). Glancy is of Cherokee and German/English heritage. She received her M.F.A. from the University of Iowa.
Radisson - Faculty - 3:30-4:15 PM
Barrie Jean Borich

Barrie Jean Borich is author of My Lesbian Husband: Landscapes of a Marriage (Graywolf Press), winner of an American Library Association GLBT Nonfiction Book Award and finalist for the Minnesota Book Award and the Lambda Literary Award. Robert Atwan selected her essay “What Kind of King,” first published in The Gettysburg Review, as a “Notable Essay of 1999.” Her first book, entitled Restoring the Color of Roses (Firebrand Books), is a memoir set in the Calument region of Chicago, where she grew up. She is the recipient of many literary prizes including a Bush Artist Fellowship and she was chosen by Rosellen Brown to receive a Loft McKnight Award of Distinction. Borich teaches creative writing at Hamline University, Minneapolis College of Art and Design and the University of Minnesota. She lives in south Minneapolis.

Radisson - Faculty - 4:15-5:00 PM
Ananya Chatterjea

Ananya Chatterjea is a dancer, choreographer, dance scholar, and educator who has worked with different dance styles in her attempts to understand how the body can be conceived and performed. Chatterjea has taught and performed widely and she is now Assistant Professor in the Department of Theatre Arts and Dance at the University of Minnesota, Minneapolis, where she teaches courses on dance history, dance writing, and the philosophy and politics of performance and aesthetics. Chatterjea has published her work widely in renowned journals such as Dance Research Journal, Asian Theatre Journal, and Women & Performance. She is also the winner of the 1999 Gertrude Lippincott Award, presented by the Society of Dance History Scholars for the best article published in English in Dance Studies in 1998. One of the main foci of Chatterjea’s research is the choreography of women of color, and she has written extensively on the work of Jawole Willa Jo Zollar and Chandralekha. Currently she is working on a book, Butting Out, which reads the cultural politics and the resistant aesthetic in the work of these two artists. Chatterjea is also the Artistic Director of Women In Motion, a company of South Asian women doing political theatre.

Film and Video Series - Schedule

Thursday, June 14

Flame (9:00am)
Directed by Ingrid Sinclair

Flame is perhaps the most controversial film ever made in Africa—certainly the only one to be seized by the police during editing on the grounds it was subversive and pornographic. Ingrid Sinclair’s moving tribute to women fighters in the Zimbabwean liberation struggle aroused the ire of war veterans and the military because it revealed that officers sometimes used female recruits as “comfort women.” Flame is also one of the most accurate and empathetic films on the role of women in guerrilla struggles and in the post-liberation societies that followed. The two main protagonists, Flame and Liberty, realize that for most women and many men independence alone has not brought the equality and opportunities for which they fought. California Newsreel, Library of African Cinema, Zimbabwe, 1996, 85 minutes

Women in Black (10:35am)
Directed by Claudia Sherwood

This provocative and often humorous video features interviews with former Catholic school students in the Fifties and Sixties who describe childhood experiences of physical and psychological punishment by Catholic nuns. Interviews with current and former nuns, blended with archival footage and clips from feature films, also examine the reasons for corporeal punishment employed in Catholic education and how the austere lives of nuns during that era may have influenced their behavior. The Cinema Guild’s Video Collection, 1999, color, 56 minutes

The Vanishing Housewife (11:40am)

The Vanishing Housewife examines the dwindling demographic of the stay-at-home mom. From the Industrial Revolution to the 1950s, we watch the housewife evolution. In the Sixties, we see the dissolution. Betty Friedan in her book, The Feminine Mystique, likened housework to slavery and launched a feminism that equated fulfillment with employment. Thirty years later, we meet today’s housewife, marginalized by tax laws and ousted as a role model by the new ideal of the superwoman. Kitchen Sink Entertainment Inc./Cadence Entertainment Inc. Distributed by Moving Images Distribution, 1998, 48 minutes

Macho (12:40am)
Directed by Lucinda Broadbent

Macho provides an in-depth profile of Men Against Violence and its ground-breaking work towards eliminating attitudes of male chauvinism that have perpetuated violent acts against women in Nicaragua and the rest of Latin America. The film strongly demonstrates that despite living in one of the most destitute countries in Latin America, this group has succeeded in providing a model that is used by men worldwide to discuss issues of violence and advocate for the rights of women. Macho offers a rare glimpse at the methods used by Men Against Violence to discuss the abuse of power and the damage it causes families and communities. It also is a powerful film that challenges assumptions about “machismo” and its continued application to Latino culture. Scotland/Nicaragua. Distributed by Women Make Movies, 2000, Color, 26 minutes

Caught in the Crossfire (A Question of Rights Series) (1:15pm)
Directed by Atu Emberson-Bain

Since the armed coup in 1987, Fiji has become a cauldron of ethnic persecution and human rights abuses. Male authority in Pacific culture is so deeply entrenched that women have no power to say “no” to sexual exploitation. Prostitution is a taboo subject in Fiji and is illegal, but it is the women and not the men who get prosecuted. Fiji, Bullfrog Films, 1998, 15 minutes

The Perfect Hero (1:40pm)
Directed by Barbara Doran

Is the tall, dark and handsome hero at the core of every romantic novel the kind of man most women actually want? From the “Mr. Romance” pageant aboard the cruise ship Celebration to the corridors of power in the Harlequin empire, the film reveals who writes romance novels, who reads them, and why. National Film Board of Canada, 1999, 51 minutes, 58 seconds

Asking Different Questions: Women and Science (2:40pm)
Directed by Gwynne Basen, Erna Buffie

How do women fare in the world of science? Is there such a thing as a “feminist science?” *Asking Different
Film and Video Series - Schedule

Questions explores the difficulties women scientists have faced in their fields, while going beyond the question of women's participation to reveal the kind of contributions women have brought to science. National Film Board of Canada, 1996, 51 minutes

Black Sheep (3:40pm)
Directed by Louise Glover
Lou Glover grew up in Western Australia repeating the same homophobic and racist taunts she heard around her. Though she was raised in a white family, she was dark-haired and dark-eyed, and was often asked if she was Aboriginal—a suggestion she vehemently denied. It wasn’t until she came out as a lesbian and left the racist and homophobic environment in which she was raised that she began to explore her ancestry. In this upbeat film from Australia, Lou Glover tells her own story as lesbian, one-time police officer, and recently discovered Aboriginal woman. Women Make Movies, Australia, 1999, 26 minutes

Of Hopscotch and Little Girls: Stolen Childhood (4:15pm)
Hopscotch embodies the spirit of childhood, and little girls all over the world play it. But all too often, particularly in non-industrialized nations, girls' childhoods are stolen, their dreams for the future shattered. Often denied access to education, girls are far more likely to assume household responsibilities, be conscripted into the workforce, be pushed into early marriages, and endure sexual abuse and, in some cases, mutilation. This provocative film features girls from around the globe who share their stories of abuse and neglect, and also their hopes and dreams in a world that too often considers them second-class citizens. Films for the Humanities and Sciences, 1999, 52 minutes

Searching for Hawa’s Secret (5:15pm)
Directed by Larry Krotz
 Searching for Hawa’s Secret tells the remarkable story of the scientific quest to find preventive treatment rather than a cure: a difficult endeavor when vaccine research gets only 1% of AIDS research funding globally. Despite funding inequities, the work in Nairobi has shifted the paradigm of AIDS research and has scientists across the globe seeking and finding similar groups with the natural immunity. It is also the human story of an unlikely partnership between a Canadian doctor and a Kenyan prostitute. First Run/Icarus Films, produced for the National Film Board of Canada, 1999, 47 minutes

Gender Biology: Men and Women Really are Different (6:10pm)
Apart from the reproductive system, how else are women anatomically different from men? And how do physiological differences influence how the female body reacts to diseases and medications? Enhanced by 3-D graphics, this program explores the emerging field of gender-based biology. Officers of the Society for the Advancement of Women’s Health Research and the Partnership for Women’s Health at Columbia discuss the possibility of gender-specific medications, new studies being done on heart disease and osteoporosis, and other topics. The Women’s Health Initiative, a pathophysiological study of postmenopausal women, is also featured. Films for the Humanities and Sciences, 2000, 22 minutes

Women of Guatemala (6:35pm)
Directed by Joanne Burke
 Women of Guatemala is a compelling portrait of Maria Del Carmen Chavajay and Micaela Chavajay, part of the new generation of Mayan women. They head the Health Promoter Group of San Pedro La Laguna, a group of seventy-five women that provides health education and tackles the grave social and economic injustices facing Mayan women in Guatemala. In a region where doctors are few or non-existent and where the cost of medical care is prohibitively high, these dedicated women share the aspirations, insights and experiences that underscore the important contributions of Mayan women—and their roles as future leaders—in Guatemalan women’s struggle for empowerment. Women Make Movies, 2000, 30 minutes

I Witness (7:07pm)
Directed by Janet Goldwater and Barbara Attie
This film portrays religious terrorism in Pensacola, Florida, the epicenter of the national debate over abortion, including a 1984 clinic bombing, the 1993 murder of a clinic physician, and the 1994 murder of a clinic physician and his escort. The video combines “found” footage with interviews with a diverse group of civic and religious leaders who discuss the religious fervor and violence which characterized this conservative community. The Cinema Guild, 1998, 56 minutes

Packing Heat (9:00am)
Directed by Wendy Rowland

In a culture of fear, where women are assaulted by images of themselves as victims, the idea of picking up a gun and getting even is tempting. Women who carry firearms don’t fit the stereotypes: they can be soft-spoken liberals, doctoral students or nurses. They see the right to pack a gun as an issue of women’s empowerment. Packing Heat features women of this emerging gun culture. Most of the women featured in the film say they feel safer armed. This lively documentary looks at why women want to carry firearms, and at the ethical and practical implications of a gun in every purse. National Film Board of Canada, 1997, 49 minutes, 43 seconds

Beyond Killing Us Softly: The Strength to Resist (10:00am)
Directed by Margaret Lazarus and Renner Wunderlich

Beyond Killing Us Softly is a documentary about the fight against the toxic and degrading messages to girls and women that dominate the media. This documentary movingly presents the ideas of many leading authorities in the fields of psychology of women and girls, eating disorders, violence against women, and media literacy, all focusing on long-term solutions. The film features: Catherine Steiner Adair, Valerie Batts, Jamilla Capitman, Gail Dines, Carol Gilligan, Gloria Steinem, Amy Richards and Girls Inc. Cambridge Documentary Films, Inc. 2000, 33 minutes

A Female Cabby in Sidi Bel-Abbes (10:50am)
Directed by Belkacem Hadjadj

At the death of her husband, Soumitha, mother of three children, has to earn a living and becomes the only woman taxi driver in Sidi Bel-Abbes (Algeria). The film shows her working conditions in a job normally reserved for men, and a city where violence rages. Soumitha takes us around her city, introducing us to the many contradictory aspects of this society. She acquaints us, in the course of her travels, with other women who, like herself, are struggling for more freedoms. First Run/Icarus Films, 2000, 52 minutes

The Venus of Cook Street (11:50am)
Directed by Christine Moulson

Quiet animation evokes the sensation of being an outsider. Images of beautiful people appear before an unseen woman as she silently carries on with her affairs. When the woman’s reflection appears in a window, revealing her large physical size, viewers are left to contemplate. Moving Images Distribution, 1995, 6 minutes

Legacy (12:10pm)
Directed by Tod Lending

Legacy is a stunning chronicle of three generations of African American women as they struggle to free themselves from welfare and poverty. It offers a raw and ultimately inspirational portrait of an inner-city family experiencing dramatic changes over a five-year period. Legacy demonstrates the need for a holistic, long-term approach simultaneously addressing a range of issues, such as drugs, violence, teen pregnancy, as well as race and gender discrimination. Nomadic Pictures Ltd., California Newsreel, 2000, 90 minutes

The Petticoat Expeditions (1:50pm)
Directed by Pepita Ferrari. Narrated by Helena Bonham-Carter.

The Petticoat Expeditions recounts the captivating stories of three British women whose pioneering spirits led them to travel in 19th century Canada. Author Anna Jameson, painter Frances Hopkins, and social activist Lady Ishbel Aberdeen chronicled their journeys from perspectives as unique as the women themselves. Using dramatization, breathtaking cinematography and their own words, photos, and works of art, this film paints an inspiring portrait of these extraordinary women who would not be constrained by the conventions of their times. National Film Board of Canada, 1997, 52 minutes

A Boy Named Sue (2:55pm)
Directed by Julie Wyman

This compelling documentary chronicles the transformation of a transsexual named Theo from a woman to a man over the course of six years. The film successfully captures Theo’s physiological and psychological changes during the process, as well as their effects on his lesbian lover and community of close friends. Wyman carefully composes a moving story about gender identity, relationships, and how even things that seem permanent can change. Women Make Movies, 2000, 57 minutes
Paulina (4:05pm)
Directed by Victoria Funari
In the 1950’s, when Paulina was a child in a rural Mexican village, her parents traded her away for land rights. The villagers ostracized her and the town boss raped her, keeping her as his unwilling mistress throughout much of her adolescence. At 15, she took control of her destiny and escaped to Mexico City to begin a new life. Now middle-aged, Paulina returns to her village to confront her family about what happened and encounters a web of intrigue and denial. Paulina interweaves documentary and fiction styles to explore the characters’ radically different perspectives and memories of this vital, resilient woman. First Run/Icarus Films, 1997, 88 minutes

Nobody Knows My Name (5:50pm)
Directed by Rachel Raimist
This film tells the story of women who are connected by their love for hip-hop music. Despite the fact that these talented female artists exist within a culture that revolves around self-expression, the subjects of this documentary must struggle to be heard. The documentarian Raimist explores a fascinating and diverse feminist community, which yearns to find a place in a male-dominated subculture that is marginalized. Ultimately, Raimist succeeds in empowering these self-actualized women by giving them the voice for which they struggle. Women Make Movies, 1999, 58 minutes

Tillie Olsen: “I Stand Here Ironing” (6:55pm)
“Can you imagine? That woman went on for pages just about ironing. Standing there ironing!” said an unimaginative judge about Tillie Olsen’s well-known short story, submitted in a competition for a fellowship at Stanford University. Olsen credits that fellowship (which she won) as the catalyst that transformed her back into a professional writer after 20 years of motherhood. Tillie Olsen—known for her powerful writings about the inner lives of the working poor, women, and minorities—discusses her autobiographical Help Her to Believe, serendipitously renamed I Stand Here Ironing. Films for the Humanities and Sciences, 1999, 18 minutes

Subrosa (7:20pm)
Directed by Helen Lee
Subrosa traces a young woman’s journey to Korea, the land of her birth, to find the mother she’s never known. This exquisitely crafted drama probes the idealized, often false constructions of cultural and maternal identities. Subrosa tracks the unnamed heroine from a sterile adoption agency office to seedy bars and motel rooms on neon strips, then to a stark U. S. army camp town and the bustling flower markets of Seoul. Her path to self-destruction and ultimate self-revelation ironically and tragically mirrors that of her imagined biological mother. Originally shot on digital video, the film captures the grit and garishness of an alien urban landscape while plumbing the melancholy dream space where the character retreats even as she searches for her very life. Women Make Movies Canada/Korea, 2000, 22 minutes

Hat (7:50pm)
Directed by Michele Cournoyer
A young woman works as an exotic dancer in a bar. She recalls an incident from her childhood when she was physically abused by a male visitor. This inner journey brings back painful memories, including the obsessive image of a hat. Black-ink drawings, spare and rapidly executed, flow together in a succession of troubling and striking metamorphoses. Hat is a tough, visceral experience and a beautifully rendered and imaginative look at the violence that is ever present in women’s lives. Women Make Movies, 2000, 6 minutes

Remembering Memory: Cixous on Cixous (9:00am)
Known as a leading proponent of feminism and for her innovative use of language as a writer, Hélène Cixous is one of the world’s most intriguing modern theorists, critics, and authors. Inspired by Cixous’ autobiographical writings, this intimate program explores her literary universe by tracing her genealogy, beginning with her family’s immigration to colonial Algeria and ending with her own immigration to France as a teenager. Reflections on her life and work by Hélène; her mother, Eve Klein; her brother, Pierre; Jacques Derrida; and others are enhanced by readings from her oeuvre and excerpts from her plays. Films for the Humanities and Sciences 1997, 54 minutes

Marriage: Diary of a Lesbian (10:10am)
In 1920, British historians broke the code in Anne Lister’s 18th- and early 19th-century journal, and were shocked to discover within its 6,600 pages the first pre-20th-century written account of a sexual relationship between women. In this dramatization, Anne (quoting directly from the journal) tells the story of her protracted relationship with a local married woman, with whom Anne, too, considered herself married. This film contains explicit scenes and should be previewed before showing in classrooms. Films for the Humanities and Sciences, BBC production, 1997, 30 minutes

Grrlyshow (10:50am)
Directed by Kara Herold
Grrlyshow is a powerful and rebellious message from new voices often left unheard. Filmmaker Kara Herold examines the girly zine revolution and culture in such a way that the film intellectually and stylistically addresses anyone’s question concerning whether or not feminism has reached its 3rd wave. By interweaving headshot interviews, clips from the zines and 1950’s television-esque vignettes, Herold clearly illustrates feminism’s ability to exist subversively within a system that generally doesn’t give women their own voice. Women Make Movies, 2000, 18 minutes

Till Death Us Do Part (Triumph Over Terror Series) (11:20am)
Directed by Ihrina Enakimio and Sandra Mbanefo Obiago
In Nigeria a married man cannot die of natural causes; his wife must have had a hand in his death. In both urban and rural areas, widows are made to suffer for their husbands’ death. As a first rite, her head is forcibly shaven, she is forbidden to bathe, and made to sit on the bare floor for at least a month. Even if the deceased had made a will, his family moves in immediately to take over his possessions, and a widow’s own older children must be on guard to make sure she comes to no harm. This film looks at the problem in three different areas of the country, and explores the way denial of inheritance and property rights is forcing a growing number of widows to join the ranks of the homeless in the shantytowns of major cities like Lagos. Bullfrog Films, 1999, 27 minutes 43 seconds

Phallacies (11:55am)
Directed by Vishnu Mathur
The penis. Does size really matter? Is the male organ simply a tool for sex, or is it a phallic symbol worthy of deification? To what extent is men’s preoccupation with their penises responsible for the aggressive, militaristic, and violent nature of our society? These are some of the questions the film covers. Anthropologists and historians find the phallus at the center of many ancient traditions and cultures. Greeks and Romans once adorned their pottery and other household items with images of the penis, regarding it as a potent symbol of fertility and longevity. In India today, we visit an old Hindu temple whose walls are sculpted in explicit scenes of erotic arts, with the penis prevalent. The film brings the penis front and center for an unfettered study of the male organ’s place in history, art, religion, and contemporary life. Bullfrog Films, CBS, 1999, 52 minutes

Where Is Grandma Zheng’s Homeland? (1:00pm)
Directed by Zhong-yi Ban
During World War II thousands of Korean and Chinese women were taken from their villages and forced to serve Japanese servicemen as “comfort women.” One such woman was Grandma Zheng Shunyi, who at the age of 17 was tricked into leaving her town in Korea and taken to the Hunan Province in China. At the Japanese surrender in August 1945, Grandma Zheng was released from “service.” Eventually, she met Wang Lichao and fell in love. They married and built a family together, but she never forgot Korea. When China and Korea normalized diplomatic relations, Zheng was finally allowed to visit her birthplace. Thus, 54 years later, the 70-year-old Zheng returned to her “home” in Korea. First Run/Icarus Films, 2000, 90 minutes

Western Eyes (2:40pm)
Directed by Ann Shin
Imagine looking in the mirror and seeing another face staring back at you. How much do your looks have to do with who you are? Western Eyes examines the search for beauty and self-acceptance through the experiences of Maria Estante and Sharon Kim. Both of Asian descent, they believe their appearance, specifically their eyes, affects the way they are perceived by others. Troubled by their relationships with their mothers, their ancestry and their physical appearance, both Maria and Sharon feel somewhat unsettled in Western society. Shin captures the pain that almost always lies behind the desire for plastic surgery. First Run/Icarus Films, 2000, 40 minutes
900 Women (3:30pm)
Directed by Laleh Khadivi
The Louisiana Correctional Institute is located in the swamps of southern Louisiana in the small town of St. Gabriel. Built in 1970 to house an increasing population of female convicts, today it houses the state's most dangerous female prisoners and often exceeds its population capacity of 900. 75% of these are mothers and one fourth of them are serving sentences of fifteen years or more. Filmmaker Khadivi delivers a striking, sensitive portrait of life in this deceptively peaceful atmosphere, which is filled with stories of life on the streets, abuse, freedom, childbirth and motherhood. Six women were brave enough to share their frustrations and hopes. Women Make Movies, 2000, 72 minutes

Seven Hours to Burn (4:50pm)
Directed by Shanti Thakur
This film is an expressive personal documentary that explores a family history. The filmmaker explores her mixed Indian and European heritage through a moving narrative that begins with the experiences of her mother and father as adolescents in two war-torn countries. While her mother lives under the Nazis in Denmark during World War II, her father is confronted with the religious riots that accompanied India's newly-found independence. Thakur follows their lives through a mixture of archival footage, body imagery, and her own narrative to present a story of two refugees from intolerance. Women Make Movies, 1999, 9 minutes

The Day You Love Me (5:10pm)
Directed by Florence Jaugey
This film takes one into the daily life of policewomen and social workers in one of the Police Commissaries for Women and Children in Managua, Nicaragua. Actively engaged in the life of the community around the Commissary, the policewomen and social workers demonstrate their responsiveness and skill in dealing with a range of situations and abuses. In the course of documenting their day, this important film introduces an innovative model for dealing with domestic violence. Women Make Movies, 1999, 61 minutes

Breaking the Ice, The Story of Mary Ann Shadd (6:20pm)
Directed by Sylvia Sweeney
This film sheds new light on the remarkable, little known story of the abolitionist, suffragette and integrationist Mary Ann Shadd. Shadd believed that separate churches, schools and communities would ultimately undermine the search for freedom. Integration would require self-sufficiency, but it also meant living and working in cooperation with others. Mary Ann Shadd's fight for education and equality for Blacks led her to study law. Graduating from Howard University, she began practicing at the age of 60. The legacy of her efforts in law, publishing and education are a testament to her refusal to accept the socially imposed limits of Blacks and whites. Using interviews with Shadd's familial and ideological descendents, the film recreates the experiences of the early Black community in Canada, while opening an engaging chapter on Black Canadian and African American history. First Run/Icarus Films, 1999, 23 minutes

The Wash: A Cleaning Story (5:50pm)
Directed by Eve Sandler
The Wash is an autobiographical video narrative by internationally acclaimed multimedia artist Eve Sandler. This painterly work closely studies the landscapes of the artist's body and memory for scars and survival of childhood sexual abuse. A visually arresting inquiry into female relationships and secrets within the artist's own African American family, The Wash explores complex themes of incest, family denial, silence, and love. THE FUTURE OF WOMEN'S STUDIES ADMINISTRATION
June 13, 2001 - Radisson Hotel Metrodome

All directors, chairs, and coordinators of women's studies programs/departments are welcome to attend the Program Administrator Pre-Conference. The program for the Pre-Conference has been organized by members of the Program Administration and Development Advisory Council and is designed to meet the needs and interests of women's studies program administrators. The elected members of the PA&D Advisory Council will report on the projects they are working on at the business meeting at the end of the day's conference, where new initiatives will also be discussed and new members elected to serve on the Advisory Council. The Program Administration and Development Committee and its Advisory Council are designed to represent the needs and interests of women's studies program administrators and assist NWSA in meeting these concerns. Only program administrators from member institutions are eligible to vote at the Committee's business meeting. We encourage all program administrators attending the Pre-Conference and the business meeting to initiate or renew your NWSA institutional membership.

This year we will continue the highly successful Women of Color Leadership Project. We ask that administrators invite, both to our Pre-Conference and to the larger NWSA Conference, a woman of color from their campuses who has interest in becoming a women's studies director. These guests will be guests of NWSA. No registration fees for either conference will be charged. NWSA will offer a one year's free membership in the association and a subscription to the NWSA Journal. (NWSA does not provide travel costs or room and board). The only requirement is that your guest be registered along with you. Please help make this a second successful year for this project. It is a wonderful opportunity to make a concerted effort to bring more of the leadership of Women of Color to women's studies programs and to NWSA.

Practicing What We Teach: Activism and Institutional Imperatives
Radisson - Campus
- Julia Balen, University of Arizona
  Administering a program is rarely viewed as an activist project—except, perhaps, in terms of maintaining a program within the institution at all. Mere survival too often defines our practices, constraining decisions and undermining the impulse for social change that invigorates our field. How do we keep this impulse active?

Handbook for Women's Studies Directors: Topics, Suggestions, Responses to Draft, Volunteer Entry Writers
Radisson - Alumni
- Eloise Buker, Denison University
- Valerie Lee, Ohio State University
A production workshop for program administrators from long-standing programs, especially programs with graduate studies components. Double session, part one.

Planting the Seeds: Starting a Woman's Studies Program
Radisson - Rotary
- Betsy Eudey, University of South Carolina, Spartanburg
- Jill Bystydzienski, Iowa State University
- Shirley Parry, Anne Arundel Community College
  Panelists describe their experiences developing women's studies programs, and share thoughts on such topics as curricular development, faculty issues, and sources of support and policy issues. This session is intended to be highly interactive as all in attendance share their experiences and needs.

New Program Directors: Leaders & Managers
Radisson - Northrop
- Susan Borwick, Wake Forest University, for the PA&D Leadership/Mentorship Committee
  Designed for new program directors, this session addresses how directors lead with vision and manage an interdisciplinary program from day to day. Experienced directors will offer suggestions, provide models, and answer questions.

Women's Studies in One University But on Three Campuses: Collaboration or Competition?
Radisson - Collegiate
- Joy Ritchie, University of Nebraska, Lincoln
- Karen Falconer Al-Hindi, University of Nebraska, Omaha
- Diane K. Wysocki, University of Nebraska, Kearney
  This panel invites conversations about how women's studies programs in three very different contexts within a state university system can develop strategies for building collaborative relations that help meet the needs of and strengthen each of the programs: a comprehensive metropolitan university, a smaller state college in a conservative rural setting, and a large research university.

Women of Color in Women's Studies Administration
Radisson - Presidents

WoSt Retirement Communities and NWSA Networks

The Women’s Studies Major: What Should it Look Like?
Radisson - Northrop
  • Elizabeth Hackett, Agnes Scott College
  • Isa Williams, Agnes Scott College
The purpose of this roundtable is to take stock of the Women’s Studies major. While we hope most of the session will involve discussion among attendees, we will prime the pump by sketching and critiquing three or four major-designs that are in wide use, describing the design we find most attractive.

  • Linda Fox, Indiana University - Purdue University
  • Ann Froines, University of Massachusetts
  • Barb Howe, West Virginia University
  • Deborah Barker, University of Mississippi
  • Kathe Davis, Kent State University
  • Mary Lou Wylie, James Madison University
While getting Women's Studies programs established on a campus is hard work, expanding upon the initial program can be equally difficult. Panelists share their experiences enhancing the curricular options and scope of their Women’s Studies programs, and address issues raised by session participants.

Women’s Studies and Feminist Community on the Black Women’s Campus: Issues, Challenges, and Successes

The Future of Progress: Women, Technology and the Soul

Fabulous Reception at the Radisson (all invited)
9:00 – 11:00 PM
Susan Griffin is a well-known writer and poet who lectures widely both in the U.S. and abroad. She recently joined the faculty at the California Institute of Integral Studies in the Philosophy, Cosmology and Consciousness program, which addresses “the complex relations between philosophy, religion, and science.” Her publications include Woman and Nature, Pornography & Silence: Culture’s Revenge Against Nature, A Chorus of Stones, What Her Body Thought, The Eros of Everyday Life, Unremembered Country (poetry), and Bending Home: Poems Selected and New 1967-1998. Her poetry has won the California Commonwealth Silver Medal (1987). A Chorus of Stones was a jury finalist for both the Pulitzer Prize and the National Book Critics Circle Award and it won the Bay Area Book Reviewers Award. Woman and Nature is a classic work now recognized as a major inspiration for eco-feminism, and the book has been reissued this year in a new edition by Sierra Club Books. In it, Griffin ponders the place and role of women in a predominantly patriarchal society, exposing the hypocrisy of standard assumptions about gender and the environment. Griffin is the recipient of an NEA grant, a MacArthur Grant for Peace, and an Emmy award for her play, Voices. She is presently at work on The Book of Courtesans, A Catalog of Their Virtues, a prose work to be published by Broadway Books in October; a sequence of poems called Canto; and a novel.

The Future of Progress: Women, Technology and the Soul

Where is the ceaseless march toward progress taking us? Often described as materialistic, the idea of an infinitely expanding technological prowess shares a set of unexamined values with traditional European religions, particularly Christianity. Contemporary technologies erase the body and the full range of both sensual experience and knowledge. The constant use of these technologies reshapes the mind in the same way that a dam reshapes a watershed area, creating many changes, small and large, with monumental consequences. Modern technology not only supports but even causes the centralization of power and with this the collapse of inner authority. The traditional knowledge that women once held, partly the result of oppressive divisions of labor, preserves different epistemologies, values and practices, as have other traditions both within and outside European culture. In this light, what are the questions, both practical and spiritual, that we should be asking at this crucial moment in human history? What will the fate of the soul be in the future?

Life Itself
Amy Lee
Charlene Spretnak
Starhawk

In seeking paths to heal broken spirits, toxic environments, and conflicts that lead to war, feminists are developing transformative spiritualities and exploring new strategies to bring about peace, sustainable environments, and social justice. This plenary will include visionary scholars/researchers/activists whose work provides clear mandates and analysis necessary for creating cultural transformation.

AmyLee

AmyLee, an Aboriginal American of Iroquois descent, is an inventor, herbalist, artist, and writer. As the last in her lineage of Medicine Women, she is a speaker and educator in spiritual and political activism. She was the founder of the Women’s Rights Association and a campus/community chapter of Friends of the Earth at Kent State University, where she served as Director of the American Indian Rights Association from 1970-1984. At Kent State, AmyLee taught courses on Native American values, and she has diligently worked to preserve Iroquois culture and values through educating teachers. She is an advisor to TALON (Teaching A Love of Nature) and is on the Board of Directors for Earth Spirit. AmyLee has made a lifetime commitment to the preservation of wildlife. Her 20 year-old wildlife rehabilitation sanctuary, Hawk Hollow, is licensed both by the state and the federal government, and sanctioned by Spirit. Twelve years ago, AmyLee opened the Gates of the Sisterhood of the Dancing Shields, perhaps the Earth’s oldest running “Women’s Studies Program” to women of all cultures!

Life Itself - In a Nutshell

As Gate-Keeper to the Star Sisterhood of the Dancing Shields, I am continually honored to midwife the personal transformations of Women on this Female Planet. The Hawk’s eye view of this, of course, is the Global Transformation, aka “The Earth Changes.” As the perpetual pendulum of Power swings back into our care, we become all too aware of the resistance to Female Energy - in all its forms. The external signs are blatant: gender wage disparity, violence rates against women, under-representation in government... If the Wisdom of my Elders, the Women of the Iroquois Matriarchy, still sings true, then, all these external offenses on Female Energy are reflections of the internal scripts being played out in our own mind-action dramas. It matters not, which came first. In the Whole-of-it, even the roles of Victim and Perpetrator are rendered irrelevant. What matters, wherever we find ourselves, is the ability to stop the old pattern, and align with the new one. A simple shift of perception sets off the most radical change. We are each capable of such revolutionary impact via the slightest alteration in our thinking! It begins with our thoughts, then flows into our language, and wherever the language changes - the impact is profound!
Charlene Spretnak

Charlene Spretnak is the author of Lost Goddesses of Early Greece: A Collection of Pre-Hellenic Myths, The Spiritual Dimension of Green Politics, States of Grace: The Recovery of Meaning in the Post Modern Age, and The Resurgence of the Real: Body, Nature, and Place in a Hypermodern World. She is also co-author of Green Politics: The Global Promise and editor of an anthology, The Politics of Women's Spirituality: Essays on the Rise of the Spiritual Power Within the Feminist Movement. She holds degrees from St. Louis University and the University of California at Berkeley. She is a professor in the philosophy and religion program at the California Institute of Integral Studies, a graduate institute in San Francisco. In May 1996 she delivered a keynote address to an international conference on development, sponsored by the World Council of Churches, in Geneva. The Resurgence of the Real, which is especially relevant to her presentation here, was named one of the Best Books of 1997 by the Los Angeles Times. She currently is completing a book on Mary and modernity, a consideration of the split in the Catholic Church over the meaning and status of the Virgin Mary. She is also working on a book about the spiritual dimension of modern art.

Re-Searching the Female

In The Ethics of Sexual Difference, the philosopher Luce Irigaray urges women to find our true voices and language in order to express our actual experience, analyses, values, and vision. Deep work was done on that quest in the U.S. in the 1970s (the “white heat” of feminism), especially in the women’s spirituality branch of the feminist movement, but that energy has long since ebbed. Such explorations were largely banned in academia in the 1980s and early 1990s as “essentialism,” replaced with the belief/ideology that any difference between females and males is strictly the result of social construction. The past five years, however, have seen a renewal of attention to various realities inherent in our species’ sexual dimorphism. This presentation will consider some of those physiological realities and their implications for Women’s Studies. It will also link current challenges mounted by women around the world against the crises of modernity to the processes of articulating and asserting perspectives that reflect the ethics of sexual difference.
Plenary Session, Thursday, June 14, 2001, 10:00 - 12:00 P.M.

Starhawk

A feminist and peace activist, Starhawk is one of the foremost voices of ecofeminism. She holds an M.A. in psychology from Antioch West University and is the author of The Fifth Sacred Thing, which won the Lambda award for best Gay and Lesbian Science Fiction in 1994. Her book, The Spiral Dance: A Rebirth of the Ancient Religion of the Great Goddess, inspired the contemporary Wiccan movement. She is also the author of Dreaming the Dark: Magic, Sex & Politics, Truth or Dare: Encounters with Power, Authority and Mystery, is a major contributor to The Pagan Book of Living and Dying, and co-wrote Circle Round: Raising Children in the Goddess Tradition and Twelve Wild Swans: Journeys Into Magic, Healing and Action. Her focus for the last year has been the antiglobalization movement, training for and taking part in the anti-WTO action in Seattle, the anti-IMF/World Bank April actions in Washington, D.C., and the recent actions in Quebec City. Starhawk works with Reclaiming, a network of people who bring together activism with earth-based spirituality and healing, offering classes, intensives, public rituals and training in the Goddess tradition and magical activism.

Weaving Another World: Women and Global Justice

In a time when every ecosystem and traditional culture on the planet is under assault, a new movement has arisen to counter the imposition of global corporate control. From Seattle to Quebec City, a new style of organizing and activism brings together culture, education and direct action. Starhawk has been deeply involved with organizing and training both women and men in this movement, drawing on her thirty years of experience as both an activist and a ritualist, to weave a politics informed by the insights of feminist spirituality. She describes the empowered learning model she uses in teaching both ritual and direct action, and explores ways it might influence our teaching in women’s studies. Women bear the brunt of globalization. How do we prepare women to make these issues visible, and to put forth their visions and insights to create a different web of connectedness and mutual care? How do we empower women to take action?
Mothering and Academia
Ford 130
This panel explores various points of intersection between mothering and academia. Motherhood as a topic of research and teaching will be considered, particularly in Women's Studies. The panel also examines experiences of feminist academics as mothers in various stages of their careers, including graduate studies.

- Cheryl Dobinson, York University, Panel Chair
- Jodi Vandenberg-Daves, University of Wisconsin, La Crosse

Teaching Motherhood and History: The Challenge of Private Experience in a Tradition of Public Narrative
This paper speaks about the problems and promises of a class on the history of motherhood in the U.S.

- Monica Bock, University of Connecticut

Maternal Exposure: Sculpture and Collaborative Installations
This slide show and talk addresses the impact of mothering on the authors' research and creative production in sculpture and installation.

- Laura Foley, University of Florida

Theories and Politics of Motherhood
The presenter describes the experience of teaching the course Theories and Politics of Motherhood and will talk about student responses to the texts, lectures and discussions of motherhood.

- Marion Gold, University of Toronto

A Space in the Academy for the Older Woman as Graduate Student
This presentation addresses issues of grandmotherhood as well as motherhood within the body of Women's Studies courses broadening the stream of this important area in research, learning and living.

Feminist Redefinitions of Publicity, Privacy and Politics: Grassroots Struggles in South Africa and India
Radisson - Rotary
Using case studies from South Africa and India, the panelists analyze the meanings embedded in feminist grassroots struggles around poverty, stigmatization, sexuality, and gender inequality.

- Amanda Lock Swarr, University of Minnesota

The Consequences of Inequality: HIV/AIDS in Contemporary South Africa
The author discusses HIV exposure in the context of South African politics focusing on the Treatment Action Campaign's activism for affordable treatment while addressing the public/private dichotomy, stigmatization, poverty, and gender inequality that characterize HIV/AIDS in South Africa.

- Susan Bullington, University of Minnesota

Fighting to be Heard: Tensions Among South African Gay and Lesbian Activists
This paper explores the friction between the National Coalition for Gay and Lesbian Equality, the body internationally recognized for securing the inclusion of sexual orientation in South Africa's final constitution, and its affiliates.

- Richa Nagar, University of Minnesota

Social Spaces and Feminist Redefinitions of Publicity, Privacy, and Politics in North India
This paper examines the linkages between women's activism, social spaces, and empowerment by focusing on two forms of rural women's activism in the Chitrakoot district of Uttar Pradesh (India).

Contemporary Feminist Dystopias
Radisson - Coffman
Contemporary feminist dystopias present nightmare visions extrapolated from present realities. But they also incorporate a critical dimension, suggesting sites of resistance to such horrific worlds. This panel examines the subversive uses of catachresis, irony, and seduction in works by Atwood, Butler, and others.

- Jennifer Wagner-Lawlor, University of Memphis

Irony as Resistance in The Handmaid's Tale
Atwood's handmaidens, for whom any deviation from officially approved forms of speech can mean death, have developed a complex sort of doublespeak that can be called "irony" as it denotes two meanings, at least, at one time. Through the careful use of a duplicitous, ironical speech, the handmaids identify potential allies and build a basis for resistance.

- Naomi Jacobs, University of Maine

The Horrors of Seduction in Octavia Butler's Xenogenesis
This paper focuses on the motifs of separation and penetrability in Butler's depictions of sexual and genetic mergings between the alien Oankali and the not-entirely-willing humans.
Interrogating the Cyborg: Feminist Understandings of Biotechnology
Ford 150

- Bradley Lewis, University of Pittsburgh

Articulating Feminist and Cultural Studies of Medicine and Biotechnology

In this posthuman world of global biotechnologies, the much-touted New World Order of “novelty” and “progress” is all too familiar and regressive in its political consequences. Feminist and critical scholars who counter these regressive forces would benefit from a common scaffold of critique from which to operate and analyze the details of these emergent biotech practices. This paper outlines such a scaffold.

- Joanne Rendell, University of Sheffield

AIDS, Others and the Possibilities of the Cyborg

This paper explores how “cyber-feminist” theories can clarify the potential of literary works to expose and resist the myths that underlie these powerful discourses.

- Karen Kapusta-Pofahl, Texas Woman’s University

Goddesses and Cyborgs: Gloria Anzaldúa’s New Mestiza and Donna Haraway’s Feminist Cyborg in Conversation

This paper analyzes Anzaldúa’s “new mestiza” and her similarity to Haraway’s cyborg. I argue that the goddess Coatlicue is an integral element of mestiza identity and in order to do justice to cyborg “women of color” Haraway must attend to Her. I question Haraway’s ironic alliance of a unified organic in opposition to partial cyborgs as problematically dualistic.

Queer Notions and Epistemological Difference
Ford 151

- Yvonne Keller, Miami University

Novel-Gazing: Vision as Lesbian Epistemology

The issue of voyeurism and lesbian representation is still a quite vexed, unresolved one for lesbian/queer theory, lesbian fictional texts, and lesbian readers/communities.

- Mary McDonald, Miami University

Queering White Femininity and Heterosexuality in Sport and Popular Culture

This paper seeks to “queer white femininity” in sport; that is, to critique meanings connected to particular bodies while also providing evidence for this sensibility from the expanding poststructuralist scholarship related to queer, critical race, and feminist scholarship.
Concurrent Sessions, Thursday, June 14, 2001 - 8:00 - 9:15 AM

- Alice Adams, Macalester College
  Making Theoretic Space: Psychoanalysis and Lesbian Sexual Difference
  This paper makes the divide between psychoanalytic insiders and outsiders permeable, so that the presenter can address that part of psychoanalytic theory of sexual difference and its implications for lesbian development and sexuality.

- Penny Rosenwasser, California Institute of Integral Studies
  Reclaiming OurSelves: Releasing Internalized Sexism
  In this workshop, we will explore how sexism has undermined our self-esteem, how we have limited OurSelves. By sharing stories and connecting with each other, we will strategize how to unlearn negative messages, enact our visions, and reclaim our joy and power as women.

- Wendelin Hume, University of North Dakota
  - Kathleen Brokke, University of North Dakota
  - Mary Cutler, University of North Dakota
  - Barbara Handy-Marchello, University of North Dakota
  - Kathleen King, University of North Dakota
  - Kay Mendick, University of North Dakota
  Country Talk: Rural Research and Pedagogies
  Geographic isolation provides its own challenges and opportunities for people doing Women's Studies research and teaching. Panelists will present and provide materials about specific projects that have worked well and will discuss the underlying principles they employ including research on rural lesbians, self-defense classes in a conservative culture, and radical pedagogies.

- Vicki Meyer, DePaul University
  Women's Life Cycle: Yours, Mine, or Theirs?
  Medicalized Menopause: Critique and Consequences
  The construction of menopause as a deficiency condition has an enormous impact on the health and well-being of women. After a brief critique of the medicalized perspective, the adverse consequences of defining all midlife and older women as deficient and in need of medical intervention will be explored.

- Carine Mardorossian, SUNY Buffalo
  Coaching Men, Laboring Women: Childbirth Classes and Hegemonic Masculinity
  In childbirth classes, men are increasingly taught to be birthing "coaches." This paper examines the ideological ramifications of this type of male involvement and argues that this practice does a disservice to both partners while reinscribing hegemonic masculinity.

- Catherie A. Warren, North Carolina State University
  From Menstruation to "Quenstruation": Pathologizing Menses in the New Millenium
  This paper looks critically at current mainstream media coverage of the health benefits of suppressing menstruation by using oral contraceptives and sorts through the multitude of contradictory messages presented. Is this medical media campaign old-fashioned pathologizing of the female body simply a new riff on a very old and tiresome theme?

- Tina Passman, University of Maine
  - Sandra Haggard, University of Maine
  Quantum Learning: Relational Pedagogy and Online Education
  Web-based, asynchronous education has the promise of delivering gender-neutral education in disciplines women have been traditionally excluded from such as classics and the biological sciences. We illustrate the promise and the "dark side" of computer-mediated education.

- Betsy Eudey, University of South Carolina, Spartanburg
  Adding On-line Components to Traditional Women's Studies Courses: Challenges and Benefits of Web-based Teaching
  Adding a web-based component to an introduction to Women's Studies course can enhance the classroom experience, but can also interfere with ease of instruction. Although not always easy to manage, WebCT proved a highly positive addition as an instructional tool and a means to increase student computer skills.

- Renae Bredin, California State University Fullerton
  Web-Based Case Studies: A Model for e-classes in Women's Studies
  This interactive paper and sample web-based case study proposes a new pedagogical model for Women's Studies. Combining the use of case studies that reflect women's issues and concerns with web-based training techniques provides an opportunity to test, evaluate, and analyze feminist theories in the context of actual events.

- Difficult Knowledges in Feminist Teaching and Learning
  Radisson - Northrop
  This session explores sexuality and race as difficult knowledges both within and for feminist teaching and learning. The term "difficult knowledge" signals the demands that learning from race and sexuality make not just upon the learner, but also upon the teachers, institutions and discourses of learning.
Concurrent Sessions, Thursday, June 14, 2001 - 8:00 - 9:15 AM

- Erica Meiners, Northeastern Illinois University
  Unlearning Family Values? Miscegenation, Homophobia, and Other Skeletons in the Family Closet
  This paper discusses the limitation of various discourses for “integrating” queer issues into schools.

- Susanne Luhmann, York University
  Difficult Knowledge in Women’s Studies: Learning and Teaching About/From Race and Sexuality
  Over the last 25 years teaching in Women’s Studies about issues of race and sexuality has been driven by a series of conceptual/analytical approaches to differences. This paper draws upon such debates and juxtaposes them with interviews conducted with Women’s Studies students and faculty.

Global Pedagogical Issues in the U.S. Women’s Studies Classroom
Ford 150
Three panelists examine the pedagogical issues they face in the women’s studies classroom as non-U.S. women of color teaching in U.S. classrooms at a variety of types of institutions. Sponsored by the editorial collective of the journal Feminist Teacher
• Gail Cohee, Feminist Teacher, Panel Chair
• Michiko Hase, University of Colorado, Boulder
Nationalism and First-World/Third-World Dynamics in the Global Classroom
  The author discusses the complexities inherent in a “global classroom” where students are from the U.S. and the instructor is a woman of color from outside the U.S.
• Asha Sen, University of Wisconsin, Eau Claire
Postcolonial Feminism in the U.S. Classroom
  The author discusses the challenges the teacher faces because students have so little exposure to foreign cultures and are often almost equally ignorant about issues of race and gender at home.
• Vaneeta Palecanda, College of Saint Rose
Alien Teacher: Passing as Woman/Mistaken for Color
  The author analyzes the ways that her gender and status as a non-U.S. woman of color complicates the responses she receives from students even in her introductory literature classes.

Is Honesty the Best Policy? Using the “Self” in Feminist Mentoring
Ford 155
• Marnie T. Evans, SUNY Empire State College
• Harilyn Rousso, Disabilities Unlimited Counseling Svcs
• Kathryn Brooks, University of Utah
• Linda Nathan Marks, The Crystal Quilt, Inc.
  Feminists involved in academic and community-based mentoring invite participants to discuss the use of the “self” in feminist mentoring. How does what we reveal or hide about ourselves affect the interaction? How do differences and similarities of age, class, race, dis/ability, sexual orientation, etc. shape self-disclosure in mentoring relationships?

Walking the Talk: Activist and Academic Terminology in Transnational Feminist Studies (International Task Force Roundtable #1)
Radisson - Regents
Sponsored by the International Task Force
• Sonita Sarker, Macalester College
• Anne Sisson Runyan, Wright State University
• Jigna Desai, University of Minnesota
• Karen Kapusta-Pofahl, Texas Woman’s University
• Pamela Thoma, Colby College
• Srimati Basu, DePauw University
  This roundtable investigates the values and ideologies attached to terms such as “national,” “international,” “transnational,” and “global.” It evaluates the pros and cons of these terms for feminist study and practice.

Care and the Elderly, Care and Our Aging Selves: Feminist Responses to the Crises in the Transitions of Aging
Ford 127
• Janet Trapp Slagter, California State University, Fresno
• Anne Wiltinger, Cooley Center
• Sharon Scherwitz, University of Wisconsin, La Crosse
  The question of care and treatment for the elderly, including our aging selves, is an increasingly serious problem for second wave feminists, given the abysmal ways our system fails. What is it like to cope with these realities, and what are the problems we see? Faced with difficult dilemmas, how do feminists make care choices?

Globalizing the Classroom: Pedagogy, Curriculum, and Resources
Radisson - Coffman
This session addresses the urgent challenge to globalize Women’s Studies focusing on curriculum and pedagogy. We will share our research about women’s resistance, feminism, and revolution in Africa and Latin America and offer successful and accessible pedagogical tools for scholars of women’s studies looking to (further) internationalize their classrooms.

• Donna Murdock, Emory University
Deciphering the “Local”: Accounting for Transnational Feminisms in the Women’s Studies Classroom
  Based on fifteen months of research in Colombia, the presenter discusses the social/cultural conditions that give feminism its shape in different parts of the world and explores how those differences can transform our understandings of feminist theory in the “globalized” classroom.
Concurrent Sessions, Thursday, June 14, 2001 - 12:30 - 1:45 PM

- Alicia C. Decker, Emory University
  Finding Africa at Home: How the “Culture of Fear” is Carried into Exile
  The author discusses fieldwork conducted with a recently resettled Somali family in Atlanta to discuss how issues of war, violence, and exile can be studied from home.

- Julie D. Shayne, Emory University
  Pedagogy is Global: Practical Tools for Teaching Women’s Studies
  The presenter offers concrete strategies and tools for teaching undergraduate Women’s Studies courses as well as mentoring graduate students in Women’s Studies who wish to address “global” issues. Teaching resources will be available at the panel discussion.

- Sarah Fergusson, Emory University
  The View From Down Under: An Undergraduate’s Perspective on Globalizing the Curriculum
  In emphasizing interdisciplinary strategies, the presenter offers a student’s view on some of the more effective (and ineffective) ways to globalize women’s issues from within the confines of the classroom.

- Berenice Carroll, Purdue University, Panel Chair
  • Banu Subramaniam, University of Arizona
    Transnational Nationalism: The Emergence of Hinduism Online
    This paper analyzes the vision of Hindu nationalism presented online.

- Loretta Kensinger, University of California, Fresno
  Plugged in Praxis: Feminist Political Activism on the Web
  This paper looks at the Internet as a place of political feminist political praxis, using the gender policies of the Taliban for specific examples.

- Priya A. Kurian, University of Waikato
  Terms of Empowerment: Women Networks, Knowledge Sharing, and the Demystification of Technology
  A cluster of “information villages” in southern India is experimenting with the potential of the Internet in socio-political knowledge-sharing through the use of low cost technology and a local web site. This paper offers a case study of information villages, exploring the extent to which impoverished women are able to make decisions and shape policy in the Western male-dominated knowledge economics of the 21st century.

- Pat Cramer, Panel Moderator
  • Laura Severin, North Carolina State University
    Reading Female Masculinity in Jackie Kay’s “Trumpet”
    This paper explores Jackie Kay’s use of female masculinity in her novel Trumpet which reinvents the story of transgender jazz musician Billie Tipton. Kay’s novel views female masculinity as a radical force but also warns of the limitations of all subversive significations.

- Larysa Mykyta, North Carolina State University
  Hidden in Plain Sight: Gender Construction/Gender Fluidity in Patricia Powell’s “The Pagoda”
  Powell’s The Pagoda explores the problems of gender fluidity within a frame that takes into account the effects of migration and national identities on gender construction. She addresses the issue of the intersections of feminist gender theories with global studies.

- Andrea L. Humphrey, Tufts University
  “Ascent Through the Cockpit Country”: The Sexual Politics of Post-Coloniality in Michelle Cliff’s “No Telephone to Heaven”
  This paper explores connections between the Cockpit Country in Jamaica, safe haven for 19th C Maroon resistance fighters; Clare’s education; and the history of the Cockpit, an elegant remnant of Whitehall palace and site of 18th C Privy Council meetings that determined the fate of “the king’s dominions,” like Jamaica.

- Carol Wolfe Konek, Wichita State University
  Writing Life: Radical Voices Contesting Academic Publishing
  Presenters reveal the ways in which their writing contests academic hierarchies of andocentric privileges and exclusion. They critique disciplinary divisions, peer review prestige, professionalization and acclaim alternative strategies for creating more interdisciplinary, inclusive, populist publishing opportunities. They share experiences of the hazards of working on the margins and encourage women to break their silence regarding academic and professional censorship.

• Suzanne C. Griffith, University of Wisconsin, Superior
• Dianna Hunter, University of Wisconsin, Superior
• Louise Root-Robbins, University of Wisconsin, Madison

The 1999 Wisconsin Status of Women Report provides an agenda for Women’s Studies in Wisconsin as change-agent team members reshaping the university environment to better meet the needs and lives of all its women. Panelists present coverage of the Report, campus responses, and the work in one campus.

The Journey of Producing “The Vagina Monologues”
Ford 130
• Candace Rypisi, Cornell University
• Janine Cavicchia, Western Illinois University
• Juli Parker, University of Massachusetts, Dartmouth
• Julie White, Rochester Institute of Technology

This panel explores the experiences of four women’s center directors through their journey of producing The Vagina Monologues. Topics include: assessing your campus climate, theatrical performance or staged reading, planning committees, casting, marketing strategies, organizing related events, backlash, and fundraising.

Disrupting White Privilege in NWSA Practices and Policies
Ford 110
Sponsored by the Anti-White Supremacy Taskforce
• Ann Russo, DePaul University
• Laurie Fuller, Northeastern Illinois University
• Erica Meiners, Northeastern Illinois University
• Njoki Kamau, University of Minnesota, Duluth

Roundtable discussion will focus on structural policies and practices within NWSA that perpetuate white supremacist and other forms of oppression. Beginning with a historical analysis of NWSA, the purpose of the session will be to generate strategies to disrupt privilege and re-prioritize anti-oppression work within NWSA, in terms of internal processes as well as public stances. Double session, part one.

The Making of Feminist Consciousness
Ford B15
• Susan Stocker, Goucher College
• Autumn Lennon, Goucher College
• Mel Lewis, Goucher College
• Shana Sabbath, Goucher College

By many different paths, we come to realize that we are oppressed by virtue of being women. We will discuss how it is that we came to feminist consciousness and what we did about it. Among other things, we founded a chapter of the Feminist Majority Leadership Alliance on campus.

• Elizabeth Hutchins, St. Olaf College
• Heidi Vardemann, St. Olaf College

Led by a Reference Librarian specializing in research on women, an English Professor/Director of Women’s Studies, and an Instructor in Women’s Studies who is also a Presbyterian pastor with a specialty in rhetoric, this workshop will present a successful model for a research paper for Introduction to Women’s Studies. Materials, assignments, research sources and approaches, and examples will be provided.

Research Café - Third Wave Theorizing the Third Wave
Radisson - Campus
• Emi Koyama, Portland State University
• Ednie Garrison, Washington State University

Presenters aim to provide a space for feminist scholars of all generations to exchange visions and ideas for third wave feminism in an environment where participants are able to interrogate its politics (generational and otherwise) and boundaries without dismissing or patronizing younger feminists.

Social Security: The Role It Plays in Women’s Lives: Will You Be Ready for Retirement?
Radisson - Coffee Lounge, Second Floor
• Maria Artista-Cuchna, Social Security Administration

You are invited to attend this special session addressing the issues facing women in planning for their financial future. This workshop will look at the Social Security benefits women need to be aware of in making the decisions that lie ahead.

POSTER SESSIONS
Held in the Radisson - Nolte 12:30 - 6:15 pm.
Presenters will be in attendance to discuss their work from 12:30 - 1:45 pm.

Women and Tragedy on the Farm: Responsibility, Risk, Retelling and Recovery
Radisson - Nolte
- Phyllis Scott Carlin, University of Northern Iowa
  Farm women's narratives, as told within their communities, expose risks involved in rural family life. This poster session focuses upon the stories farm women tell, their interpretation of those experiences, and their ways of transforming danger to responsible action for farm families.

Adolescents and Self-Worth: Cultural and Gendered Influences
Radisson - Nolte
- Tonia Caselman, Oklahoma State University
- Patricia A. Self, Oklahoma State University
  This study examines gender and cultural similarities/differences in self-perception and social support variables contributing to global self-worth among 280 American and Japanese adolescents. Gender differences were found across both cultures supporting feminist self-in-relation theory.

Grassroots Goes to the Polls: How Citizens' Initiatives Shape the Gay/Lesbian Movement
Radisson - Nolte
- Kimberly Simmons, University of Minnesota
  This research focuses on the impact that citizens' initiatives have had on the internal politics of the lesbian and gay movement in Maine. The author analyzes movement conflicts and culture, and challenges social movement theory to take seriously the thinking of activists about what it means to work in coalition.

Looking For a Few Good Moms: A Content Analysis of Mom Discourse
Radisson - Nolte
- Angela High-Pippert, University of St. Thomas
  Content analysis is used to examine the prevalence of "mom discourse" among women activists. This session compares the print media coverage of Million Mom March and National Organization for Women activists.

The Urban Influence on Women's Employment in 19th Century West Virginia
Radisson - Nolte
- Barbara J. Howe, West Virginia University
  Women, historically, have found more opportunities for employment in cities than in rural areas. This poster explores women's employment options in 19th century West Virginia cities. This is a story that has not ended, since this rural state has long had a low rate of employment for women.

One Women's Studies Student's Activism
Radisson - Nolte
- Jennifer M. Oravecz, Millersville University
  This poster session exhibits a variety of student activist ideas, specifically concerning feminist issues. Evidence of several projects will be presented, including samples of a feminist column featured in a school newspaper; pictures and description of participation in a protest demanding equality, and an end to poverty and violence; and explanation of a program benefiting the GLBT community.

The Effect of Involvement in Sports on a Woman's Body Image
Radisson - Nolte
- Elizabeth A. Steely, Millersville University
  The research question is, does a woman's participation in college athletics help her create a healthier body image? The study will compare the responses of Millersville University female athletes, from both intercollegiate and club teams, and non-athletes to ascertain if involvement in organized sports impacts their body image.
Pedagogies for Women’s Autobiography
Amundson 240

This panel offers four approaches to teaching autobiographical writing, emphasizing published work but also addressing students' own writing. In addition to examining ways of teaching women's autobiography, the participants address theoretical issues as they relate to the pedagogies.

- Kara Donaldson, Rutgers University
  "She Says I Protest Now About My Autobiography": Gertrude Stein and Alice B. Toklas in the Autobiography Classroom

  This presentation provides syllabi and briefly describes the techniques used in an autobiography class.

- Jane Olmsted, Western Kentucky University
  An Everyday Thing: Making Theory Accessible in the Autobiography Classroom

  This presentation addresses the challenge of introducing undergraduate students to theory about autobiography.

- Amy Wink
  Keys to Her Own Kingdom: Autobiography and the Power of Words

  This paper discusses the connections between women’s autobiography theory and the psychology of writing, and explores the consequences of teaching writing as an act of creative agency for contemporary young women.

- Barbara Powell, University of Regina
  Women’s Autobiography—Distance Education Course

  The presenter will guide participants through the features of the course, demonstrating how autobiography works on and through the web.

Taking Up Space: The Disabled Female Body in the World
Radisson - Rotary

Three scholars and activists with disabilities present a combination of autobiographical and critical discussion of how disability, sexual identity, and gender become entangled in contemporary culture. Along the way, we will visit lesbian bars, amputee-fetishist gatherings, and Abby and Britty Hensel, ten-year-old conjoined twins.

- Alison Kafer, Claremont Graduate School
  Resistant Desire: Female Amputees in the Devotee Community

  Relying on both feminist theory and disability studies literature, the author discusses ASCOTWorld’s (Amputees Support Coalition of the World) potential for resistance, comparing its construction of the disabled female body with those offered by society at large.

- Ellen Samuels, University of California, Berkeley
  The Girl With Two Heads: Visibility, Hidden Disability, and the Female Body

  This paper combines the personal narrative of my experience as a woman with a “hidden” disability with analysis of various ways in which the spectacle of the disabled female body is circulated in American culture.

- Emily J. Bender
  Lesbian Bars and Dykes With Disabilities: Where the Heterotopia Fails

  For queer women our main community space is the lesbian bar. Often, those of us who cannot go to bars simply “disappear,” or are viewed as boring, less radical, and less sexual. Since women with disabilities are so often viewed as asexual, dykes with disabilities are therefore doubly erased from lesbian, bisexual and trans community, and we are invisible as sexual beings.

Junior Faculty Concerns in Women’s Studies
Radisson - Coffman

- Lisa Weasel, Portland State University
  Junior Faculty Concerns in Women’s Studies

  This workshop focuses on tenure issues, the predominance of faculty of color in junior positions in Women’s Studies, workload, and interactions with senior faculty.
Concurrent Sessions, Thursday, June 14, 2001 - 2:00 - 3:15 PM

Exploring Current Issues of Equity and Equality for Women's Studies Faculty and Students
Radisson - Northrop
Sponsored by the Academic Discrimination Advisory Board

Panelists explore how Women's Studies faculty and students are mentored and equity for part-timers.
- Sharon Leder, Nassau Community College
- Barbara Horn, Nassau Community College
- Meta Plotnik, Nassau Community College

Imposition or Empowerment: Resolving the Tension Between Faculty and Student Collaboration in the Academic Hierarchy
- Florence Dee Boodakian, Marist College

Part-Timers and Full-Timers: Levelling the Playing Field in the Academy
- Sharon Leder, Nassau Community College

What is to be Done? Thinking Internationally About Feminist Activism
Radisson - Alumni

This panel examines the presuppositions of feminist activism. We ask, What counts as "doing," as activism?
- Inderpal Grewal, San Francisco State University
- Caren Kaplan, University of California, Berkeley

Human Rights, Cosmopolitanism and Governmentality
This paper traces the continuities between contemporary women's transnational organizing and histories of imperialism and the role of Western women in health care and education in the colonies of Europe.
- Minoo Moallem, San Francisco State University

Governmentality of the Nongovernmental: Feminist Activism in a Global World
This paper examines the ways that modern notions of governmentality are deeply invested in the asymmetrical and disjunctive contrast between two frames of political action: the governmental versus the nongovernmental.
- Miranda Joseph, University of Arizona

Global Economic Activism: Identity, Rights and World Trade Policy
This paper explores the ways we might articulate activist efforts such as the Students Against Sweatshops movement or gay/lesbian involvement in the protests against the World Trade Organization, the International Monetary Fund and the World Bank, as positive models for feminist activism.
- Jeanette Baust, University of Denver

Challenging White Supremacy From a White Location
- Laura Gillman, Virginia Tech
- Stacey Floyd-Thomas

Creating Frameworks for an Inclusive Women's Studies
- Tara Hanson, Simmons College

Race x Class x Gender in Conversation
- Aimee M. Carrillo Rowe, Connecticut College

Re-Imaging Feminist Alliances
- Jane Rosser, Bowling Green State University

Challenging White Supremacy From a White Location
- Margaret D. Stetz, Georgetown University

Creating A Women's Community
Ford 110

Creating a Women's Community Across Generations/Issues of Difference/and Between Campus and Community
As a center committed to serving all campus constituencies and dedicated to campus-community partnerships, we are exploring the challenges of building bridges across generations, across issues of difference, and across institutional identities.
- Stephanie Karcher, University of Illinois, Springfield

Developing Community Through Student-Based Organizations Affiliated with Women's Centers
- Daniel Cunningham, University of Illinois, Springfield
This presentation explores the ups and downs of creating student-based women's organizations that complement or supplement the efforts of women's centers in building community.

Pleasure, Objectification and Transformation: “Women” Using and Being Used by Popular Culture

Radisson - Regents

This panel explores the Jewel Box Revue of the 1950s, the heroine chic ads of the 1990s and the trajectory of talk shows from the '70s to the '90s as an introduction to a larger discussion regarding the potential and limits of popular culture as a medium for female pleasure and feminist politics.

• Amy Tyson, University of Minnesota
   Skirt-ing Boundaries: Female Impersonation in the Post-War Years
   This paper explores the potential meanings and functions of the Jewel Box Revue, a traveling troupe of female impersonators, during the 1950's.

• Mary Rizzo, University of Minnesota
   Embodying Withdrawal: Abjection and the Popularity of Heroin Chic
   With their images of emaciated women in withdrawn poses and in dirty, urban settings, they have been called “heroin chic” due to their supposed glorification of the drug. But heroin chic is about more than addiction, it is about how the anxieties and vulnerabilities experienced by the American social body have become inscribed on the physical bodies we view for consumption in the popular media.

• Karla Erickson, University of Minnesota
   The Unruly Space of Daytime TV: Talk Shows and the American Project of Helping One’s Self
   This presentation examines the potential of the untidy space of talk TV as a forum for women and other marginalized groups to explain, listen and discuss the lives of people who do not ordinarily have access to mainstream media.

World Wide Stash: Term Papers and the Internet

Amundson 162

• Phyllis Holman Weisbard, University of Wisconsin
   Electronic term paper mills, Internet-published papers, and full-text databases have made it easier than ever before for those so inclined to cheat and plagiarize. Come see what’s out there in Women’s Studies, learn ways to identify suspet work, and share techniques of discouraging cheating and plagiarizing from electronic sources.

The Future of Women’s Health: Is It Feminist?

Ford 130

• Nancy Worcester, University of Wisconsin, Madison
• Marianne Whatley, University of Wisconsin, Madison

Four themes will be explored: the politics of women's health movements and the field of women's health; the politics of information and funding; the politics of science-ethics and marketing; and keeping anti-oppression work core.

The WISHing Well: A Reservoir of Resources or a Pit of Ethical Dilemmas: Can Undergraduate Interns at College Wo/Men’s Centers Be of Help?

Ford 127

• Laura K. Williams, SUNY Stony Brook
• Jackie Novick, SUNY Stony Brook

Panelists share ideas about the benefits and drawbacks (for interns and the Centers) of offering an undergraduate internship at University Wo/Men’s Centers.

The Impact of Political Transitions on Women’s Social Movements: Nicaragua, Nigeria, and Southern Africa

Ford 150

• Charles E. Lowe, Northern Kentucky University, Panel Moderator
• Irene Campos Carr, College of St. Catherine

Nicaraguan Women and the Neoliberal State: The Post Sandinista Years

This presentation includes interviews with feminist Nicaraguan leaders as well as women working in the foreign-owned tax-free factories who discuss the current socio-economic situation for women in Nicaragua.

• Meta L. Schettler, California State University, Fresno

Daughters of Nzingha: The Limits & Possibilities of Feminism in Southern Africa

This paper investigates the experience of women in the armed struggles for liberation in Southern Africa. A critical analysis of women's experience during the political transitions of post-liberation reveals ground gained and ground yet to be gained.

• Heather Turcotte, San Francisco State University

A Voice in the Shadows: Women’s Movements in Nigeria

The author discusses the women's movement in Nigeria and women's response to the Patrimonialist State. Utilizing political opportunity theory, this paper argues that post-liberation space for protest concluding that women have maintained the essence of their movement and regained momentum with democracy.
Restructuring Feminist Agency: Gendered Technologies of Empowerment
Radisson - Presidents

"Empowerment" has become a keyword of postindustrial politics in the U.S. Long used in feminist and activist contexts, the term has been co-opted by "compassionate conservatives" and "postmodern progressives." This panel examines the troubling synergies between conservative and progressive visions of women's empowerment and begins to offer effective political responses.

- Nancy D. Campbell, Rensselaer Polytechnic Institute
  Modeling Empowerment
- Jenrose Fitzgerald, Rensselaer Polytechnic Institute
  Empowerment or Else
- Virginia Eubanks, Rensselaer Polytechnic Institute
  Access is Never Enough

Research Café - Gender, Trauma, and Suffering
Radisson - Campus
- Bat-Ami Bar On, SUNY Binghamton
  The presenter is interested in discussing gendered trauma. While it is clear that the suffering of rape is uniquely gendered, research on war and genocide suggests that the deployment of gender analysis to all trauma and suffering resulting from violence may not be fruitful.

Applications of Feminist Science Studies
Amundson 120
- Carolyn Sachs, Penn State University

Gender and Genetically Modified Foods: Tacos, Corn Flakes, and Golden Rice
As genetically modified foods enter our food supply, the debate concerning biotechnology in food is intensifying. This paper traces how the discourses promoting genetically modified foods discredit women’s efforts to control their own and their families’ food.

- Ingrid Bartsch, University of South Florida

Species Conservation and the Politics of Motherhood
This paper discusses the loss of biodiversity both as a form of resource depletion and degradation in developing countries of the South.

- Banu Subramaniam, University of Arizona

Alien Nation: Analyzing Ecological Theories of Biological Invasions
This paper examines the rhetoric of theories and policies on biological invasion; claims that “exotic/alien” plants outcompete native plants eroding native communities; and assumptions about the reproductive propensities and capacities of foreign/exotic females.

Ingrates at the Gate: Women of Color in Women’s Studies
Radisson - Northrop
- Patti Duncan, Portland State University
- Angie Cotton, Emory University
- Emi Koyama, Portland State University
- Yvone Simms
- Frances Wood, Emory University
- Phyllis Rambsey, University of Kentucky
- Pat Washington, San Diego State University

Panelists address their various experiences as women of color, affiliated with Women’s Studies programs exploring the processes that have served to exclude or tokenize women of color within Women’s Studies, and attempt to develop frameworks and strategies of resistance to racism in Women’s Studies.

Lesbian Marriage: We’re Going to the Chapel and...What Are We Doing?
Ford 150
Presenters explore the personal, social, and cultural meanings of lesbian “marriage” when it is expressed through a formal ceremony.

- Dorothy C. Miller, Wichita State University

Reflections on Getting Married: The Shifting Sands of Cultural Meaning for Gays and Lesbians
This paper explores the cultural meanings of gay and lesbian marriage as seen and understood by the lesbian/gay community and the broader society.

- Joy Sapinoso, University of Maryland, College Park

Coming Out/Getting Committed: Meghan Herner, 1994-1999
This paper examines the interplay between coming out as a lesbian, desires of being validated, legitimated, and accepted by family and friends, and lesbian marriage/commitment.

- Valda G. Lewis, Wichita State University

Not Married But...Divorced: The Legal Implications of Lesbian Break-Ups
This paper questions whether mainstream society has rightful or ethical jurisdiction in cases of couple separations requiring legal advice, investigates how those decisions are upheld, and explores the implications for those in broken relationships that do not have legal access or recourse and/or are denied legal access and recourse due to non-recognition of a legitimate relationship.

How Academic Discrimination Cases Develop: The Early Warning Signs, Academic Freedom, and Shunning
Amundson 124
Sponsored by NWSA Advisory Board on Academic Discrimination
- Ines Shaw, Nassau Community College
- Trisha Sanderberg, Princeton University
- Sharon Leder, Nassau Community College
- Janice Anderson, SUNY-New Paltz

Although academic discrimination has deleterious consequences for educators, and particularly for Women’s Studies faculty, it is rarely brought up or discussed in academia. The silence surrounding it contributes to a lack of knowledge about how such cases develop. Panelists discuss various aspects of the development of academic discrimination cases.

More Than Just Tourists: Internationalizing the Women's Studies Curriculum
Radisson - Coffman
- Ann Schonberger, University of Maine, Moderator
- Leslie Hill, Bates College
- Leslie King, University of Maine
- Mazie Hough, University of Maine
- Renate C. A. Klein, University of Maine

Members of the Maine Women's Studies Consortium will discuss their experience with internationalizing the curriculum from shifting the center in the introductory course, to requiring courses on global issues, designing travel-study courses, bringing in international scholars, and supporting student's involvement in global women's issues. Faculty development to enable this work will also be discussed.

Rappin' on Revolution: Black Women's Liberation
Radisson - Rotary
- Jennifer Holz, University of Akron, Moderator
- Anne Marie Siejakowski, SUNY Buffalo

African American Women and Rap and Hip-Hop Artists and the Influence of American Popular Culture and Black Feminism

African American women have created "new" locations in the areas of music. This paper argues that by becoming popular rap and hip-hop artists African American women are "members of a culture of resistance."

- Stephen Paul Whitaker, University of Cincinnati

Gender Ideology and Interactional Political Consciousness: Considering the Accounts of Revolutionary Black Women

This paper considers contemporary social movement theory that deals with the idea that intersectional politics flow from the development of an "interactional political consciousness" that opposes interlocking systems of domination.

Beyond the Phallus: Challenging Essentialism and Stereotyping
Radisson - Regents
- Linda D. Wayne, University of Minnesota

As Culture Made Him: The Joan/John Story as Evidence for Essential Sex/Gender Identity

In his bestselling book, As Culture Made Him: The Boy Who Was Raised as a Girl, John Colapinto claims that the case of Joan/John refutes the foundational feminist tenet that gender is cultural and not biological. This paper examines Colapinto's claim through further analysis of information he himself supplies and in light of current trans/intersex theory.

- Dina Pinsky, CUNY Graduate Center

How Do Men Become Feminists?: Pathways into the Pro-feminist Men's Movement

A primary impetus for the women's liberation movement was the sexism of men in the left. However, a few brave leftist men were also moved to organize against patriarchal power. This presentation is based upon oral history interviews with Jewish pro-feminist men.

- Mary L. Cummings, Virginia Tech

The Impact of Gender Stereotyping in Predominantly Male Organizations

Women in predominantly male organizations are extremely vulnerable to gender stereotyping in their work environments. The author focuses on gender stereotyping in predominantly male organizations revolving around three major themes: defining gender stereotyping, its impact and consequences, and views on how gender stereotyping can be either eliminated or reduced.

Exploring the Pedagogy of Drama: "It Can Happen Here—Homophobia and Racism at Pleasantville High"
Ford 110
- Paula Ressler, Illinois State University
- Arlene H. Scala, William Paterson University
- Rebecca Chase, Illinois State University
- Tania Ramalho, SUNY Oswego

This is a drama workshop about a school community addressing homophobia and racist issues. Facilitators assume the roles of high school principal, guest student, teacher and parent. Workshop participants, playing the role of community members, develop strategies to change prevailing attitudes and prevent hate crimes. Double session, part one.

Ageism 101
Ford 130
Sponsored by the Aging and Ageism Caucus
- Sharon Jacobson, SUNY Brockport
- Diedra Livingston, SUNY Brockport

This is a consciousness raising workshop to open discussion about the presence and impact of ageism in women's lives. This session will focus on different experiences and perceptions of aging. Participants will explore how society has negatively labeled old women and how we can overcome these stereotypes.

  "Still Drinking Tea at the Kitchen Table? A Study of Women-Women Chatrooms"
  This paper shares observations from a study of women-women chatrooms on the Internet, focusing on rooms labeled "lesbian." The author explores ways in which technology crosses categories of identity and experience and becomes a primary instrument through which to develop various categories of relationships.

• Anne Kustritz, University of Minnesota
  "Slashing the Romance Narrative: Women, Internet Fan Fiction, and Collective Mythology"
  What does a romantic relationship involving two equal partners look like? Who controls cultural mythology? These are issues addressed by slash fan fiction and pondered by slash fan fiction communities. Transgressing both copyright laws and cultural gender roles, slash fan fiction refers to stories published primarily over the Internet written by women, for other women, about romantic relationships between two leading male characters from television and film. What's going on here?

• Felicity Schaeffer, University of Minnesota
  "Planet Love's" Chat Room: Feminist Ethnographic Methodologies in a Heteronormative Masculine Space
  This paper explores feminist methodologies and ethical concerns of doing ethnography in a chat room for men who seek brides from Latin America. In this chat room, men from the U.S. ask advice on how to best find Latin American women, which Internet agencies to use to travel to Latin America and also share their travel experiences and encounters with women.

  Transforming Our Reading of Harry Potter: The Feminist Text of (Her)mione Gr(anger)

  J.K. Rowling's Harry Potter series has elicited conflicting readings of the female character, Hermione Granger. Our analysis will challenge representing Hermione as either the feminist hero or as the victim of sexism. We will identify how gendered constructions of Hermione's character, particularly her anger, inform the intersection of multiple forms of social oppressions.

- Sara B. Levandusky, George Washington University
  Girl Fight: Power in the Puff

  Popular culture defines gender roles through violence, traditionally with positions of power belonging to men. The institution of fantasy violence in cartoons with female superheroes, like the Power Puff Girls, attempts to define power and violence as feminine. This paper uses theorists such as Judith Butler and Michel Foucault to examine this definition.

- Charlotte Templin, University of Indianapolis
  Hillary Runs for Senate: Uses and Abuses of Female Stereotypes in Editorial Cartoons

  Editorial cartoonists have made Hillary Clinton a focal point for talking about gender norms. Cartoons about Hillary reveal the strength of the culture's reaction to a woman whose actions place her outside the accepted female paradigms.

Even My Ears are Queer: Science and the “Natural” Lesbian Body
This paper reports the results of a critical reading of contemporary (1990-2000) scientific research into biological origins of lesbian and bisexual identities.
• Elizabeth McMahon, Lafayette College

The Language of Science and its Relation to Gender
This paper examines how language structures what science is and how it is conducted. This privileges a particular approach to science, contributing to the exclusion of women. Language describing scientific results and certain metaphors create a view of science seen as intrinsic to science, when it need not be.

Designed for Women's Studies program directors, this roundtable addresses issues of diversity within Women's Studies programs. It emphasizes mentorship of all women and men, recruitment into the program of underrepresented groups, and constructing a future for Women's Studies that has many faces and perspectives.

Danger Zone: Identities Under (De/Re)Construction
Ford 115
This panel explores how individual notions of self-identification expand and develop over time and through various life experiences, underscoring the role that feminist teaching and learning play in maneuvering through the inherent tensions between actual life experiences and cultural ideas.
• Liza Fiol-Matta, New Jersey City University, Moderator
• Mirtha Quintanales

Shades of Pink, Shades of Blue: Reflections on the Subtleties of Lesbian Gender Role Expression
This paper explores the diverse ways lesbians may adopt, express, and integrate traits understood culturally as "feminine" and "masculine," often defying and challenging common classifications of "butch," "femme," "androgynous," and "transgender" categories.
• Brian Kelley, New Jersey City University
Crossing Borders: Negotiating Identity as a Queer Male Feminist
The author explores the meaning of queer male feminism. This paper also demonstrates a peculiar paradox: the way in which radical white male teachers are permitted a wide range of freedoms in the classroom based on the assumption that they in some way uphold and promote the notion of white male heterosexual privilege, power and dominance.
• Lisa Burke, New Jersey City University
(In)Visibility: Negotiating Femininity
This paper examines how "femme" lesbians become transparent in social spaces that routinely read them, based on gender performativity or un-articulated "queerness," as heterosexual.
• Loryn Lipari, New Jersey City University
Cracked
This paper discusses the deconstruction of the mind and body of women in addiction, and the reconstruction of mind, body, and spirit in women in recovery.

Techno-Wombs: Women’s Bodies as the Sites of Reproductive Contestation
Amundson 158
Recent advancements in reproductive technologies challenge feminist perspectives on women’s bodies and reproductive health care. This panel addresses the changing dynamics of reproductive health care services - hysterectomy, artificial insemination, in vitro fertilization and contraception - and subpopulations of women who encounter obstacles when negotiating these services.
• Jenny Higgins, Emory University
Hispanic Women and Hysterectomy in the U.S.: Lack of Access, or Ethnic Benefit?
This paper explores the possible explanations for the hysterectomy disparity between Hispanic and white women.
• Susan Leisure, Emory University
You Can't Eat a Sweet With the Wrapper On: Implications of Condom Availability and Use for Women's Health and Reproductive Control in Southern Malawi
This paper looks at the factors contributing to low condom use of Malawi women, including government policy, religious prohibitions and cultural attitudes toward condoms and birth control in general.
• Dawn L. Comeau, Emory University
Lesbian Mothering: Whose Sperm Should I Pick?
This paper is a close examination of the options available to lesbians who chose to conceive through alternative insemination, and the hurdles that they may encounter in this process.
• Tiffany Worboy, Emory University
Intersecting Technologies: In Vitro Fertilization and the Internet
Two technologies have emerged that have transformed American culture: reproductive technologies and the Internet. This paper explores some of the ways that these two technologies converge.
• Shelley Endsley, Wichita State University
• Carol Wolfe Konke, Wichita State University
• Jessica Ayres, Wichita State University

Practicing Qualitative Research: Focus Groups on Motherhood and Autobiographical Journal Writing on Eating Disorders
Ford 130
This session highlights history and trends in feminist qualitative methods. Two graduate thesis projects will be discussed; the use of focus groups to measure effects of societal pressure on women to become mothers, and the use of journal writing to understand how the Self is re-negotiated when recovering from bulimia and binge-eating disorders.
• Shelley Endsley, Wichita State University
• Carol Wolfe Konke, Wichita State University
• Jessica Ayres, Wichita State University

ABAFAZI-Women of Color Caucus Writing Awards Presentation and Reception
Radisson - Northrop
- Gina Kosik-Rosabal, San Diego State University
- Pat Washington, San Diego State University

Undergraduate and graduate student award winners of the ABAFAZI-Women of Color Caucus Writing Awards will present their work, followed by a reception. The Awards are presented to outstanding undergraduate and graduate students whose scholarly focus is on issues and perspectives of women of color. Contributors to the Women of Color Caucus NWSA Journal Forum will also be invited to discuss their work and be recognized for their scholarship.

ABAFAZI - Women of Color Caucus Writing Award Winner (will be published in ABAFAZI Journal)
- Salamishah Tillet, Harvard University

Fragmented Silhouettes
The author examines historical and contemporary political and cultural politics that privilege racist violence against Black men as central to our understanding of the Black experience in the U.S. She argues that this single-focused attention to the plight of Black men reduces the equally horrific violence against Black women to fragmented silhouettes in our memories.

Women of Color Caucus Writing Award Winners
- Fauzia Ahmed, Brandeis University

The Bangladesh Garment Industry: Has Globalization Benefited Women?
The author critiques the globalization of the garment industry in Bangladesh and the impact of market forces on that country's burgeoning female workforce. She concludes with recommendations for helping women achieve voice and security in what has now become an essential component of family income in Bangladesh.

- Maria Rodriguez, William Paterson University

Violence Within the Popular Culture: An Analysis of Latina Soap Operas as Misogyny
The author conducts qualitative research on the impact of telenovelas (soap operas) on young Latinas. Based on her findings, she argues that telenovelas constitute an effective cultural device for teaching Latina girls to adopt the gendered stereotypes of passivity and obedience to males that leaves them vulnerable to male violence.

Danger, Desire, and Denial: De-picting Women in Popular Culture
Radisson - Regents
From film noir to The Full Monty, we explore cinema, music and the popular press to show how cultural representations of gender, class, and sexuality construct women as feminist artists, workers, and economic subjects.

- Pamela M. Fletcher, Ohio State University

Picturing The Feminist Icon: The Woman Artist in Popular Culture
This paper examines the representation of women artists in the popular press as "feminist icons," focusing on the popular triumvirate of Artemisia Gentileschi, Georgia O'Keefe, and Frida Kahlo. The author examines the ways such representations re-circulate into academic discourse, often serving as an excuse for the continued exclusion of women artists.

- Terry Moore, Ohio State University

Film Noir and Butches in the Workplace
This paper focuses on the frequent representation of women in the workplace in film noir as "butch," particularly as marked by costume, dialogue, and shot composition. Thus, I suggest that the threat posed by women in film noir exceeds the heteronormative boundaries of classical Hollywood cinema.

- Mary Margaret Fonow, Ohio State University

Not Just One of the Guys: Gender and the Cultural Politics of De-industrialization
This paper analyzes the construction of gender in class politics. What happens to our understanding of the economy and of how work is constitutive of identity when we insert women into the cultural narrative of de-industrialization?

The Disordered/Disabled Body
Ford B10
- Anna Lott, University of North Alabama

Representations of Disability in Mary Wollstonecraft and Frances Burney
This paper examines works by Wollstonecraft and Burney to explore the line that existed in the eighteenth century between desirable female weakness and disgusting female disability. This discussion should be directly relevant to disability studies in our own century.

- Sharlene Hesse-Biber, Boston College
- Stephanie Howling, Boston College

The Influence of Race Upon the Development of Body Image and Disordered Eating: A Qualitative Study of Black and White Samples
This study focuses on the impact of race and its intersection with gender, in influencing and/or preventing the development of eating disorders. We find that race is intrinsically linked to the notion of self-esteem and the development of body image and disordered eating.
New Paradigms for Liberation Through Activism: Environmental Justice and Biodiversity
Radisson - Alumni
• Sindie Spencer Kennedy, University of Arizona

Feminist Siting in a Toxic Culture: Linking Theory With Practice
The environmental justice movement in the U.S. is distinguished by a membership and leadership largely composed of working class women, particularly women of color. Since feminism has focused little attention on this women-led movement, I will consider what these social movements have to offer each other and what their combined efforts might produce.
• Susan Hawthorne, University of Melbourne

This paper draws on feminist theory developed outside of Eurocentric models of feminist scholarship, and ends with a feminist vision for an alternative way of looking at global issues. I posit a new driving force for Western feminist activists, that of the wild.
• Betsy Eudey, University of South Carolina, Spartanburg

Issues of Gender in Twenty-first Century Educational Settings
Ford 151
• Jeannie Ludlow, Bowling Green State University

Contested Spaces: The Classroom as “Safe Space” for Whom?
This paper examines the concept of the classroom as “safe space,” paying attention to the definitions of “safety,” posits that “safety” is defined in terms of cultural privilege, and that feminists in higher education would be better served by conceptualizing the classroom as a “contested space” rather than a “safe space.”
• Betsy Eudey, University of South Carolina, Spartanburg

Even If It Looks Like a Duck: Women-centered Education Isn’t Necessarily Feminist Pedagogy
Based on work initially conducted at a K-12 girls school, this paper examines the differences between feminist pedagogies and teaching styles and curricular practices that are women-centered, addressing the value of distinguishing between feminist and women-centered pedagogies, and the implications for teaching Women’s Studies courses.
• Martha Wheelock, Harvard-Westlake School

For Generations, The Making of a Plaza of Heroines at Wichita State University (WSU)
Ford 400
• Valda Lewis, New School University, NYC

A record of the concept, development progress and implementation of the Plaza of Heroines project at WSU. The video demonstrates the process and values involved in such an undertaking. It highlights the collaborative work of Women’s Studies faculty and community volunteers, working within the context of a state university system and the academic area of Women’s Studies.

The GeNiE Workshop: (Gender Norm Exploration)
Radisson - Collegiate
• Julia M. Applegate
• Heidi Madsen

The GeNiE Workshop is a place to come explore the role gender plays in your everyday life. We will uncover the roots of masculinity and femininity and talk about the varied ways those gender identities have impacted our lives. Through interactive make-overs, role play and costume experimentation, we’ll forge new and empowering identities for ourselves. Come, take an interactive trip down gender identity lane!

Inner and Outer Struggles: Conflict Between Autonomy and Violence
Amundson 240
• Lori B. Girshick, Warren Wilson College

Woman to Woman Sexual Violence: Does She Call it Rape?
Woman to woman sexual violence is a problem in lesbian battering relationships as well as in the workplace, on dates, by acquaintances, and by professionals. This study is based on the stories of seventy lesbians or bisexual women who discuss what happened, how they labeled the violence they experienced, how they reacted, and other relevant issues.
• Amanda Johnson-Hart, Minnesota State University, Mankato

A Framework for Responding to Mothers Who Commit Infanticide
Infanticide is a social, economic, cultural and gendered phenomenon. Professionals who work with these mothers should be aware of specific factors involving the act of infanticide.
• Mary Thompson, Michigan State University

Developing a Meaningful Curriculum for High School Women and Men
Examining the curriculum for a high school Women’s Studies/Gender Studies program: How can we make our courses relevant, meaningful and progressive for these students? How do we incorporate gender studies and the male student into this course? A short film developed by students and the presenter will be shown.

The Center For Choice: Connecting the Head and the Heart and Changing the Abortion Conversation
This paper proposes to consider the topic of abortion counselling by focusing on a particular clinic, the Center for Choice (CFC) and its use of patient advocates.
Concurrent Sessions, Thursday, June 14, 2001 - 5:00 - 6:15 PM

National Association for Women in Catholic Higher Education: Open House
• Denise Leckenby, Boston College
NAWCHE is an organization made up of faculty, administrators, staff and students from Catholic colleges and universities around the country. This is an open-door session for NAWCHE members and non-members. Double session, part two.

Research Café - Interdisciplinary, Multicultural Feminist Research on Grandmothers
Radisson - Campus
• Helen M. Bannan, University of Wisconsin, Oshkosh
Feminist scholarship has yet to move very far up the generational ladder from daughters and mothers to grandmothers. After working for years on various aspects of this topic, I am planning to edit an anthology representing varied methodologies and cultural perspectives on grandmothers. Potential contributors, come and discuss possibilities!

Technofeminisms
N. Katherine Hayles
Susan Hawthorne
Sat Bir Kaur Khalsa

How do infotechnology, biotechnology and virtual reality affect our ideas about the body, self, identity, sexuality, gender, race, class, disability, and politics? Many contend that we are entering a new world order based on the information age, the genetic revolution, and the digitalization of the human subject. This plenary will examine the intersections of feminist theory and practice with these new technologies.

N. Katherine Hayles

N. Katherine Hayles, Professor of English at the University of California-Los Angeles, teaches and writes on the relations of literature, science, and technology in the twentieth century. Her most recent book, How We Became Posthuman: Virtual Bodies in Cybernetics, Literature, and Informatics, won the Rene Wellek Prize for the Best Book in Literary Theory for 1998-1999. It was also named one of the 25 Best Books of 1999 by the Village Voice. Her work has won numerous awards, including a Guggenheim Fellowship, and a Presidential Research Fellowship from the University of California. She also has been the recipient of the Luckman Award for Distinguished Teaching and the Eby Award for Excellence in Undergraduate Teaching at UCLA. She is currently working on two books on electronic textuality. Coding the Signifier: Rethinking Semiosis from the Telegraph to the Computer explores how processes and theories of signification need to be re-thought in digital media and Linking Bodies: Hypertext Fiction in Print and New Media explores hypertext as a rhetorical form. Her presentation will be drawn from a chapter of Linking Bodies.

Disturbing Metaphoric Networks: The Body in Cyberspace

In sharp contrast to initial claims that virtual reality is a disembodying technology, there has recently been a trend in virtual reality art installations to emphasize embodiment. Through a wide variety of creative interfaces, artists are exploring new ways to connect simulation and flesh, virtuality and embodiment. Seen as theoretical interventions, these practices raise new questions about the relation of embodiment to gender and create contexts where provisional answers can emerge. In “Einstein’s Brain,” Alan Dunning and Paul Woodrow create simulated spaces using physiological input from the user, tapping into responses that fall well below the threshold of consciousness such as brain waves, heart beat, etc. In contrast, Victoria Vesna’s “Notime” emphasizes the interaction of the body with virtual spaces, playing off the idea that we are so rushed in contemporary society that we have no time to live our lives, allocating this duty to various avatars and software routines. Finally, Simon Penny’s virtual reality simulation “Traces” sets out to bring a more fully embodied sense of the user into virtual space. As the software creates an avatar based on a scanning of the user’s body, the avatar also gradually acquires the ability to act on its own, as body parts spin off the original simulation and begin to act as autonomous agents. Together, these installations show that human embodiment remains a crucial consideration for these artists, even as what embodiment means continues to change in conjunction with the embodied practices of intelligent machines.
Plenary Session, Friday, June 15, 2001, 10:00 - 12:00 P.M.

Susan Hawthorne

Susan Hawthorne has a long history in activism, the arts, and academia. She is the author and (co-)editor of eleven books including a novel, a collection of poetry, a feminist quiz book, and eight anthologies. Her latest book, co-edited with Renate Klein, is CyberFeminism: Connectivity, Critique and Creativity. Her work has been widely published in books and journals including NWSA Journal, Women’s Studies Quarterly, Women’s Studies International Forum, and others. She is an Academic Associate at Victoria University in Melbourne, Australia, where she is completing her doctoral dissertation in Women’s Studies on “Wild Politics: Feminism, Globalization, and Bio/Diversity.” Hawthorne is a founding member of the Performing Older Women’s Circus, which is open to women over forty years of age. The group fosters lesbian visibility and encourages its members to learn circus skills. Her specialties are aerials, acrobalance and scriptwriting, and she is currently combining her writing and aerials performance work in a solo show. She is also the publisher at Spinifex Press, which she co-founded in 1991.

Technoglobal Appropriation: Feminist Engagements

In this presentation Susan Hawthorne will engage critically with technoglobal corporatization and examine the role new technologies play in colonizing the diversity sector. She argues that information technology is implicated in racist research and appropriation of knowledge; in the further dispossession of poor people (mostly women) in Export Processing Zones; and in the disempowering process of homogenizing of identity for those who have fought hardest to gain an identity. Further, she contends that biotechnology continues the process through molecular colonization of indigenous peoples; through a fantasy of fleshlessness and immortality of the body that denies disAbilities and aging processes; and sexuality is transformed through abusive surgery and a flattening of diversity. Lastly, she will discuss the digitization of reality and how it contributes to an endlessly fluid selflessness; a blurring of gender that appropriates women’s and lesbian culture for masculine ends; and a further denial of the material realities of the disAbled body. In conclusion, the technoglobal corporatization is not in the interests of dispossessed people of the diversity sector. It homogenizes, appropriates, colonizes and dissociates political action and identity.
Sat Bir Kaur Khalsa

Sat Bir Kaur Khalsa is currently a graduate student in Women’s Studies at the University of Arizona. In the 1970s she worked at the Toronto Rape Crisis Centre and the Toronto Women’s Health Collective. She also developed a directory of Vancouver-based “Women Helping Woman” services in the late ‘70s. Last fall she co-chaired a workshop with Nancy Mairs at the University of Arizona’s Women Studies Department’s conference “The Future of Women’s Studies.” The workshop, entitled “At the Crossroads: a Crash Course in Disability Studies/Women’s Studies,” began a process of developing a curriculum that incorporates written expressions of disability into feminist/woman’s studies agendas. The intersection of disability issues and feminism is the basis of Khalsa’s master’s thesis, which she came to through her work as a licensed foster parent for several young women with various disabilities. She lives with two adult foster daughters and continues to support individuals with disabilities and their families to find the services they need. Khalsa was also a member of the Tucson Poetry Festival Committee for two years, and president of RAAD (Religious Awareness and Diversity) at the University of Arizona. She currently works with an undergraduate club, “Beyond Tolerance” to provide programs to educate the university community about racism, and is a facilitator for the YWCA’s “Let’s Talk About Racism” programs. A massage therapist and yoga teacher, Khalsa teaches kundalini yoga classes at local community centers, the Arizona Schools for the Deaf and Blind and the Therapeutic Recreational Center.

Using a Wheelchair: Eruptions, Disruptions, and Contradictions Within Feminist Spaces

Sat Bir Kaur Khalsa comes to this conference with many questions, using the wheelchairs of women she knows in an appropriation that she hopes will help feminists and those involved in women’s studies and disability studies to discuss and develop technofeminisms. She hopes to prompt discussions about the understanding and the practice of accessibility for persons with disabilities and how that conflicts/intersects with the concerns of ecofeminists, idealized conceptions about “cyborgs” and the freedoms technology promises (and sometimes delivers) for persons with disabilities. Some of the questions for thought before and during the conference are included here. What does discussion about the protection of a “natural environment” and provision for “accessibility” entail? What correlation exists between “accessibility” and “natural,” within the contexts of “environments”? In what ways is the disabled body appropriated and/or discorporated in order to manage “reasonable accessibility” through and to technology? How does feminism understand the “cyborg” and its relevance to technofeminisms/feminist-technos? What relevance does that understanding hold for persons with disabilities/disability studies-interested persons? What is feminist about this anyway? Khalsa hopes these discussions will examine the dissonance between our longings, our lust for personal comfort, our values and integrity as feminists, and how much discomfort we can actually put up with in order to really talk about these issues.
Regional Meetings - 8:00 - 9:15 AM

Regional Women’s Studies Associations exist to strengthen networks among the approximately 900 women’s studies programs, departments, women’s centers and their affiliated community organizations.

At the regional sessions you will elect your regional representative who goes to the Constituency Council and also have an opportunity to network with neighboring regional colleagues, students and activists. See the following list to determine your region.

Regions of NWSA
Great Lakes: Illinois, Michigan, Wisconsin - Radisson - Coffman
Mid-Atlantic: Delaware, District of Columbia Maryland, New Jersey, Pennsylvania - Radisson - Campus

The Persisting Power of Public/Private Ideology in U.S. Law on Sexual Harassment, Rape, and Domestic Violence
Radisson - Coffman
Sponsored by the Law and Public Policy Interest Group
This panel addresses how traditional public/private ideology has influenced law in the United States. This ideology has been used to deny legal relief to women by trivializing harms to women, characterizing them as private behavior not warranting government intrusion.

- Christina Brinkley, Simmons College, Moderator
- Carrie N. Baker, Emory University

Gender Ideology in Legal Discourse: An Analysis of Early Sexual Harassment Case Law
The authors, through an analysis of arguments made by parties and courts in early sexual harassment cases, show that these cases were a battleground on which traditional notions associating women and sex with the private sphere struggled with emerging feminist notions of women as full participants in the public sphere.

- Maria Bevacqua, Minnesota State University, Mankato

Legislating Rape: Some Considerations of the Public/Private Dichotomy
This paper explores the ways in which the public/private dichotomy in Western political thought—much criticized by feminist scholars—is reinforced in the law of sexual assault historically and contemporarily.

- Kirsten Rambo, Emory University

Two Faces of Empowerment: Contrasting Strategies of/for Women in India
Radisson - Northrop
Presenters evaluate an Indian government project to advance rural women and women’s empowerment in India’s computer industry.

- Beatrice Kachuck, City University of New York
- Hemalatha H.M.

Analysis of an Institutional Approach to Empowering Women: A Case Study of the Government's DWCRA Programme
This analysis of government programmes to develop and empower women is concretized with an evaluation of the Indian government’s Development of Women and Children in Rural Areas (DWCRA) project.

Teaching Women’s Spirituality in the Academy and the Community: Compare and Contrast
Ford 151
- Robin Powers, Gannon University
- Alane Brown, Fort Lewis College
- Lady Galadriel, Grove of the Unicorn

This panel discusses the advantages and disadvantages of teaching women’s spirituality in college and in the community.

Pedagogy and Progress: Does Our Feminist Teaching Promote Political Agency?
Ford B15
Panelists explore the impact of Women’s Studies professionalization and changing student attitudes on feminist teaching; how a Racial Contract perpetuates racism and impacts on feminist pedagogies; and how the problem of “democracy” affects the relation between feminist classrooms and society.

- Barbara Corrado Pope, University of Oregon
- Patrocinio P. Schweickart, Purdue University
- Berenice M. Fisher, New York University

Notes Toward Overcoming the Epistemology of Ignorance
This paper addresses the question of how pedagogies respond or fail to respond to racial and ethnic difference.

- Racial Contract perpetuates racism and impacts on feminist pedagogies; and how the problem of “democracy” affects the relation between feminist classrooms and society.

Democracy and Feminist Education
The author explores the relation between second wave feminist pedagogical claims to democratic education and the potential for increasing social justice in society.
Concurrent Sessions, Friday, June 15, 2001 • 12:30 - 1:45 PM

Technofeminisms: Combining Praxis With Theory in a Technological University Setting
Ford 150
• Sue V. Rosser, Georgia Institute of Technology
• Carol Colatrella, Georgia Institute of Technology

This session focuses on the initiatives of the Center for the Studies of Women, Science, and Technology (WST) to integrate women and feminism with technology and science across the college of Georgia Tech, and in alliances with Atlanta-area colleges and universities.

Feminist Movements and the Social Construction of Marriage and Gender in Japan
Ford 127
• Chilla Bulbeck, Adelaide University, Moderator
• Saori Kamano, National Institute of Population and Social Security Research

Delayed Marriage but Unchanging Gender Expectations in Japan
In the context of the declining marital rate in Japan, the author examines how women feel about marriage. Analysis reveals some changes in the perception of the “cost of being single” but not in the “cost of marrying.”

• Diana Khor, Hosei University
The Construction of Gender Through Public Opinion Polls in Japan
The author analyzes “family” construction of gender in Japan through a content analysis of survey questions.

• Taeko Teshima, University of Arizona
Motherhood and Sexual Difference: Feminist Strategies in 1920s and 1970s Japanese Feminist Thinkers
This paper demonstrates how Japanese gender roles were shaped by the intersection of the mode of production, family ideologies, ethnicity, class, sexuality and language. The author examines how feminist strategies created to initiate reform were almost as destructive as the social structure imposed upon them.

Toward a Feminist Understanding of Ethical Living
Ford 110
• Lisa Tessman, SUNY Binghamton
On (Not) Living the Good Life: Oppression and Moral Damage
One of the harms of being subject to oppression is that one is barred from developing certain morally valuable character traits and therefore barred from flourishing; however, this claim appears to be undermined if one acknowledges that oppression causes a similar harm to those in a position to dominate.

• Beth Bartlett, University of Minnesota, Duluth
Immanence and Transcendence: Albert Camus, Simone de Beauvoir, and Contemporary Feminist Spirituality
This paper explores the theme of “embracing immanence” common to the works of Albert Camus and writers in feminist spirituality. The presenter explores such shared ideas as connections with the earth, one’s body, sensuality, friendship, and profound joy.

• Maurice Hamington, Lane Community College
What Jane Addams Adds to Care Ethics
This paper addresses the extent to which the activist and philosopher Jane Addams employed feminist care ethics and how she offers a unique social/political dimension to care ethics. Addams contributes a proactive approach to care ethics that challenges the limited contemporary understanding of citizenship.

British Women Writing Their Own Lives at Home and Abroad
Ford 130
• Kathleen Torrens, California State University, Fresno, Moderator
• Janet Lee, Oregon State University
Our Shining Beckoning Danger: Memoirs of World War I First Aid Nursing Yeomanry (FANYs)
This paper explores the gendered roles played by the First Aid Nursing Yeomanry (FANY) of WW I using memoirs of key FANY volunteers.

• Fakhri Haghani, Georgia State University
Transnational “Awakening”: Narratives of Female Gaze, British Suffragists, and a Persian Princess at the Turn of the Century
The author examines narratives produced by British Suffragists in their newspapers, The Vote, Votes for Women, and Common Cause, and a Persian Princess in her memoirs from 1884 to 1914, about the “question of women.”

• Katharine Kittredge, Ithaca College
Rural Joys and Destiny Obscure: The Countryside as a Site of Alternative Gender Definition in Eighteenth-Century Britain
Most of what has been written about the emergence of the “Feminist Ideal” has focused on the way that urban aristocratic women were increasingly confined to the “domestic sphere.” Simultaneously, rural women led lives that were much more varied and were gendered in radically different ways. By looking closely at contemporary depictions of rural women, we can gain new insight into women’s lives during the development of modern gender roles.
Women in the Global Economy (International Task Force #2)
Radisson - Regents
Sponsored by the International Task Force
• Sonita Sarker, Macalester College
• Cynthia Mellon, Rutgers University
• Debra Liebowitz, Drew University
• Kamala Kempadoo, University of Colorado, Boulder
• Richa Nagar, University of Minnesota, Twin Cities
This roundtable explores the participation of women in the global economy and considers the possibilities of collaborations and disjunctures between feminist theorizing and women's movements toward self-empowerment.

Online Teaching of Women's Studies Classes: Increased Student Count, Library Access, Nurturing
Amundson 240
• Mattilou Catchpole, University of Illinois, Springfield
• Denise D. Green, University of Illinois, Springfield
Online classes can make a Women's Studies program healthier by increasing the student count. Nurturing can also occur online as well as interaction between students and between students and instructor. Adequate technical support is mandatory. Students should have access to the university library even though the student may never come on campus.

Challenges in Feminist Mentoring: Developing New Strategies
Ford 115
Presenters explore the structures, practices, and pitfalls of feminist mentoring in programs serving women and girls from middle school through college.
• Dona Yarbrough, University of Virginia Women's Center
Race Matters in Feminist Mentoring
Does the race of participants matter in mentoring relationships? What are the goals of mentoring programs aimed at girls and women of color, and what do they really accomplish? To answer these questions the presenter draws upon experiences in two mentoring programs in roles as both facilitator and founder/coordinator.
• Kimberley Roberts, University of Virginia
When Class Counts: How to Nurture Connection in Middle-School Mentoring
Drawing from experiences as the founder and co-director of the Young Women Leaders program, the presenter indicates how matching big and little sisters according to race only partially facilitates their connection to one another. Other issues, such as the role of women of color in the program's leadership structure, as well as the class and socio-economic make-up of the group's participants, often function as more accurate predictors of mentoring successes and failures.

Communities, Identities, and Bodies in the New Space/Time Economy
Radisson - Presidents
This panel addresses issues such as gender, migration and technology; medical and biotechnical imaging; digital discourses of time, body and space; cyberspace, capitalism and communication; real and imagined communities and techniques of the times and spaces of the information age.
• Somer Brodribb, University of Victoria
Materialities: Bodies, Spaces and Communities in Digital Times
How are emerging information technologies and digital discourses of empowerment and democratization restructuring women's material and social worlds? In what ways do cyberage concepts and gadgets relate to, redesign and recirculate existing relations of power?
• Jo-Anne Lee, University of Victoria
Globalization, Migration and Transnational Feminism
How are racialized immigrant women's organizations using/not using this technology as a form of community organizing and how do they reconstitute space, time and distance or are reconstituted within the terms of globalization and technology?
• Annette Burfoot, Queen's University, Kingston
Innovations in Imagining and Imaging the Material
The author presents on Galileo's time and influence as an origin of contemporary biotechnical imaging. His use of the telescope and his revisioning of the mandate of science are compared with the contemporaneous medical models of life sized wax female figures used to teach medicine.

Taking Up and Passing On: Black Women Talk About Their Legacies of Leadership Development
Amundson 162
• Toni C. King, Denison University
• Betty Lovelace, Denison University
• Jessica Care Moore
• Lakesia Johnson, Denison University
• S. Alease Ferguson
This panel illustrates the rich leadership traditions passed on from mothers and othermothers to daughters and women who are “like a daughter.” Panelists explore this black woman-to-black woman leadership development tradition by conceptualizing how knowledge is transferred intergenerationally and applied as leadership praxis in the life of contemporary black women.

"Full Time" in Women's Studies: A How to Guide From Those in the Know
Radisson - Rotary
• Robyn Wiegman, Duke University
• Caren Kaplan, University of California, Berkeley
• Inderpal Grewal, San Francisco State University
• Laura Hyun Yi Kang, University of California, Irvine
• Minoo Moallem, San Francisco State University

In recent years, women's studies has seen a steady increase in full-time tenure track positions. How do such positions fit into already existing programs and departments, in terms of governance and scholarly focus? This roundtable addresses the intellectual, pedagogical, governmental, and administrative issues that challenge, impede, and enable full time scholars in Women's Studies.

The Body Image Project: Beauty as a Relative Concept
Radisson - Faculty
• Larry Kirkwood, Kirkwood Studios

This travelling project is an art exhibit and lecture with the goal of changing the way we look at ourselves and others. Casts have been taken of almost 400 people to show the way we really look as opposed to the "image" the beauty industry presents. Focus is on sexism, racism, and ageism.

The Future of Graduate Education in Women's Studies
This panel explores various challenges and possibilities created by emerging Ph.D. programs in women's studies. Together the three papers confront the need for new pedagogical models and the need to rethink what "disciplinarity" and "professionalism" mean for women's studies faculty and students who have been trained in traditional disciplines.

Professional Identity Politics
• Pamela Caughie, Loyola University

The author offers a brief overview of the institutionalization of Women's Studies as an interdisciplinary field and discusses recent scholarship on the formation of disciplines and the phenomenon of professionalization.

Questioning Empowerment and the Limits of Success: Feminist Teaching and the Graduate Curriculum
• Judith Gardiner, University of Illinois, Chicago

The author presents a short history of second-wave feminism and the various forms of pedagogy it idealizes, such as "connected teaching," "the pedagogy of the oppressed," and "scholar activism." What now are our idealized forms of pedagogy and how can they be utilized in the training of graduate students in women's studies?

Ph.D.s and the Research Mission of Women's Studies: A Case for Interdisciplinarity
• Sally Kitch, Ohio State University

The author focuses on the task of advising graduate students who will identify professionally with the field of Women's Studies in the light of the emergence of Ph.D. programs in Women's Studies around the country.

The Future of Graduate Education in Women's Studies

UNDERGRADUATE LUNCH

Women’s Studies undergraduate students attending the conference are invited to a special lunch session. A brief program will provide information about undergraduate majors and graduate programs in women’s studies, plus student accounts of their women’s studies experiences. Above all, students will have a chance to share their ideas and impressions with others from all over the country. The lunch is free, but undergraduate students must pre-register for the event on the conference registration form and pick up their lunch ticket at the conference registration table on the second floor of the Radisson. The NWSA Undergraduate Lunch is supported and sponsored by member institutions from MnSCU, Minnesota State Colleges and Universities.

• Penny Rosenwasser, California Institute of Integral Studies
Communication style and language concerns those faced with the invitation/demand to assimilate to maximize survival opportunities. As groups assimilate into what is called, but may, in fact, not actually be, “the larger culture,” do cross-cultural absorptions mitigate or mask cross-cultural misunderstandings, fears, hostilities? Is it ever polite to interrupt? What would Dr. Ruth or Dr. Laura say? Double session, part one.

Radisson - Presidents
• Susan G. Cosby, University of Oklahoma, Moderator
• Brenda R. Hodges, Northern Illinois University
A Critical Investigation of Women Within the Professorate: When is “Feminist Research” too “Feminist?”
While studying women professors’ perceptions of their careers at Northern Illinois University, I experienced “problems.” The author explores personal rationales for undertaking such a study, goals of the study, the methodology, problems associated with doing feminist research, and the future of feminist research.

• Claire N. Kaplan, University of Virginia
When I Left, (I Knew) I Could Make a Difference: The Impact of a Women’s Studies Program on Current Majors and Alumni at a Major Research University
This ongoing research project explores the experiences of current and former Women’s Studies majors by asking the following questions: How has being a Women’s Studies major impacted students’ social and academic development? How has being a Women’s Studies major helped, hindered and informed alumnae’s career choices and practices?

• Julia Balen, University of Arizona
Practicing What We Teach: Activism and Institutional Imperatives
Administering a program is rarely viewed as an activist project—except, perhaps, in terms of maintaining a program within the institution at all. Mere survival too often defines our practices, constraining decisions and undermining the impulse for social change that invigorates our field. How do we keep this impulse active?

Redefining Butch in the Age of Trans
Radisson - Northrop
This panel explores the gray area that is developing between butch and transgender identities and will examine possible redefinitions of butch identity. What does it mean to be a butch lesbian in the wake of emerging transgender identities? Butch has traditionally been defined in relation to femme, but how is butch to be defined in relation to FTM transgendered identities? Double session, part one.

- Jo Trigilio, Bentley College
Born to Be Butch
This paper considers the similarities between those who identify as butch and as transgendered FTM’s, especially the experience of many that were born with an overwhelming propensity to express predominantly masculine characteristics, appearance, behavior, bodily comportment, and roles.

- Sara L. Crawley, University of Florida
Constructing Butch and Fem: An Institutional Ethnography
Studying butch and fem has broader implications than simply understanding lesbian experience. It entails studying how gender and sexuality can be interpreted and constructed in U.S. culture and informs our understanding of the relationship between representation and material existence.

- Melanie Corn, University of California, Santa Barbara
Queer Looks: Butch and Trans Identities in Contemporary Photography
The author explores the identities of butch women, FTM trans people, and drag kings using photographs by contemporary photographers such as Catherine Opie, Del LaGrace Volcano, and Loren Cameron.

Integrating Women into Traditional History Curricula
Ford 130
Sponsored by the Medieval and Early Modern Women Interest Group
- Allyson M. Poska, Mary Washington College
- Katherine French, SUNY New Paltz
This workshop will discuss some of the challenges that women’s historians face as they attempt to integrate gender and sexuality into traditional undergraduate history survey courses.

Biology on Fertile Ground: Feminist Approaches to Science Pedagogy in a “Biology of Women” Course
Ford 151
- Cynthia Bauerle, Hamline University
This workshop examines how scientific information may be translated conceptually in a non-traditional, multidisciplinary classroom context. Discussion includes suitable learning objectives for a “Biology of Women” course and approaches for students to engage with scientific information in non-traditional ways.

Feminism, Transnationalism and Subjectivity
Radisson - Alumni
This panel draws on feminist studies of transnational links created through global relationships of power to further discussions of women’s voice and agency. Through examination of documentaries, narratives, oral histories, and ethnographies these papers raise questions about the role place, migration, and colonialism play in localized constructions of gendered subjectivity and struggle within the contexts of India and the U.S.

- Kathryn Forbes, California State University, Fresno
How to Move When You’re Stuck: Transnational Feminism and the Social Imaginary
This paper explores ways to conceptualize the effects of “being stuck” on constructions of subjectivity and also suggests ways that the social imaginary may be used to challenge the confining effects of being stubbornly located.

- Sanjukta Ghosh, Castleton State College
Double Jeopardy: Subalterity and Transnational Feminism
The recent migrations of labor from the South to the North both racialized and gendered the work sphere in new ways. Framed within postcolonial theoretical questions, this paper examines five documentaries that look at the painful crisis of identity politics concomitant with this border crossing.

- Rebecca Klenk, University of Tennessee
Colonial Feminism in a Postcolonial Nation
In 1946, Sarala Devi, formerly Katherine Mary Heilman of London, founded a training center for rural women and girls in the Himalayan region of Uttar Pradesh. Drawing on autobiography, biography, and oral accounts, this paper analyzes Sarala’s work and shifting subjectivity in the context of her transnational position as a colonial feminist.

Espejismos (Distorted Images): Latina Bodies in Popular Culture
Radisson - Rotary
This panel explores images of the Latina body. We will view film clips and slides of recent images of Latina bodies as the other, as border crossers, and as transnational objects of desire.

• Susana Martinez, DePaul University
  Women on the Verge: Distorted Images in “Translated Woman” by Ruth Behar
  This paper positions the controversial text Translated Woman by Cuban-American anthropologist Ruth Behar, as an exercise in dialogue across differences.

• Lourdes Torres, DePaul University
  Latina Lesbian Representation: Esto No Tiene Nombre
  This paper discusses how the representations of Latinas not only boldly challenged the virtual absence of Latina Lesbian representations, but also created an impetus for the emergence of Latina Lesbian creative works in genres such as film, magazine publications, and literary fiction.

• Alesia Garcia, DePaul University
  Casting Out The Serpent: Eroticized Violence Against Latinas in American Cinema
  This paper argues that images of dismembered Mexican Indian women in From Dusk Till Dawn and other recent American films containing images of Latinas, have repeatedly eroticized Latina bodies, inscribing them as evil or sexually available and then transforming them into manageable objects of desire.

Brazilian Women: A Patchwork of Struggles, Feminisms, and Roles as Transformative Agents
Ford 150
• Tania Ramalho, SUNY Oswego
• Ines Shaw, Nassau Community College
• Ricardo Santos, Nassau Community College
  An academic, multimedia exploration of Brazilian women's feminisms, struggles, and roles as transformative sociocultural agents through their personal, material, spiritual, and cultural development. This examination takes into consideration regional, social class, gender, race, sexual orientation, and age differences and includes a critical analysis of discourses sensitive to these differences. A related bibliography of books, articles, films, videos, and music will be provided.

Women's Studies Online
Ford B10
• Sharon Hileman, Sul Ross State University
• Ann K. Johnson
  This session raises questions concerning the relationship of feminist pedagogy and Women's Studies online. A demonstration of web components for Introduction to Women's Studies, Women and the Law, Women and Politics, and Women in Literature will be given.

Repoliticizing the Feminist Antiviolence Movement
Ford B15
• Ann Russo, DePaul University
• Michelle VanNatta, Northwestern University
  The purpose of this roundtable is to develop strategies to repoliticize feminist antiviolence work, reinvigorating links with antiracist, economic justice and social justice activism. Panelists examine current practices and assumptions within the antiviolence movement that lend themselves to pathologizing survivors, to focusing on the individual as the locus of change, and to approaching violence as an individual problem rather than a social and community one.

Feminist Disability Studies
Amundson 162
Panelists utilize insights from feminist disability studies in their analyses of cultural narratives and constructions of bodily difference. These papers consider how cultural narratives reinforce the notion of disability as stigma, focusing on how the gendered nature of these narratives contributes to discrimination against women with breast cancer and Appalachian people.

• Kim Hall, Appalachian State University
  Gender, Race, Disability and the Appalachian Body
  This paper explores connections between feminist and disability studies as they pertain to constructions of Appalachian bodies.

• Diane Price Herndl, New Mexico State University
  Loving the Hated Body: Narration, Breast Cancer, and Hate Speech
  This paper focuses on intersections between hate speech and discrimination against bodily difference. The author raises questions of how to redress problems of hate speech and what happens when we redefine it as a manifestation of a cultural hatred of self as well as other.

Crossing Pedagogical, Psychological, and Ideological Borders: Creative Approaches in the Teaching of Race, Class and Gender
• Gretchen S. Cline, Muskegon Community College
• Michelle DeRose, Aquinas College
  This workshop explores creative strategies for teach-

Redefining Butch in the Age of Trans
Radisson - Northrop
Double session, part two.
- Jo Triglio, Bentley College
- Willa Young, Ohio State University
Claiming Butch Space: Constituting Drag King Identities
The author presents a typology of king identities and relationships to the category “butch.” The range represents kings who are “just playing to entertain myself and anybody who will watch” to those who are “mining for the masculinity in me” as well as those who explain themselves using language that fits commonly understood definitions of transgender or transsexual identity.
- Karmen McQuitty, Minnesota State University, Mankato

Butch/Femme in the New Millenium: Subverting the Heterosexual Question
This paper examines the fluidity of the gender “butch” as viewed through an erotic/sexual lens. I compare “erotic” writings of butches/femmes and discuss sexual fluidity.
- Reproductive Issues: Cultural and Minority
Radisson - Regents
- Monica Lange, California State University, Long Beach, Moderator

The Rhetoric of Reproduction
This paper examines the increase in the application of reproductive technologies and its effects on the rhetoric of family planning in developing countries. The author attempts to dismantle the rhetoric in order to reveal the underlying intentions of both the developers and distributors of reproductive technology.

- Jyl J. Josephson, Illinois State University
  Citizenship, Coercion and Eugenics

  This paper discusses reproductive policy and privacy by addressing policies related to women's bodies and their gendered and racialized uses.

- Lea Pickard, University at Albany-SUNY
  Women Making Decisions: Pregnancy and Birth in a Guatemalan Community

  Women's beliefs surrounding pregnancy in Guatemala are changing with the inundation of government and NGO information "recommending" they seek care from health clinics. Previously, women almost exclusively utilized care from midwives. This paper will examine women's reproductive choices and the impact of health clinics and biomedical technologies on their lives.

Women Writers and Ways of Knowing: The Epistemology of Lived Experience

Amundson 156

This session focuses on three 20th century women writers of the U.S. who explore how lived experience might facilitate ways of knowing that depart from or challenge patriarchal models of learning and knowing.

- Jeannette E. Riley, Kent State University
  There's Nothing So Sensible as Sensual Inundation: Mary Oliver and the Search for Transcendence

  This paper argues that Oliver's poems suggest that the close association of women with nature may be a powerful, transformative experience thus discovering how to live fully in one's life.

- Elizabeth Wright, Pennsylvania State University, Hazelton
  Learn or Perish: Dorothy Canfield Fisher's "Seasoned Timber"

  This paper focuses on Fisher's educational philosophy. Fisher sought to reinvent an American educational system that encouraged the construction of passive students.

- Megan Simpson, Pennsylvania State University
  The Phenomenology of Mothering in Mei-mei Berssenbrugge's "Four Year Old Girl"

  This paper examines the linguistic strategies Chinese-American poet Mei-mei Berssenbrugge uses in her latest book of poems.

Who Will Revere the Black Woman? Voices of 19th Century Black Opera Divas to Hip Hop B-Girls

Ford 115

Panelists investigate the centrality of black feminist perspectives in African American music by placing black women's identity and experience at the center of analysis. The panel responds to inequities of racism and sexism by asking new questions about the role of black feminist identities in music.

- Linda F. Williams, Bates College
  Gospel Music and Female Innovators

  This paper examines the ways in which specific forms of consciousness (race, class, and gender) are embedded in the history of gospel music of the twentieth century, focusing on black women's experiences.

- Tammy L. Kernodle, Miami University
  Black Feminist Perspectives in Jazz

  This paper interrogates notions of black femininity and how black women in jazz redefine notions of black womanhood examining black feminism and its role in shaping women's self-definition and empowerment in the development of jazz in the United States.

- Teresa Shelton-Reed, University of Tulsa
  African American Women in Opera

  This paper considers the ways in which the diva's performance encodes a new and ever-evolving relationship to public understandings of race, gender, and class.

- Gwendolyn Pough, University of Minnesota
  African American Women in Hip Hop and Rap

  This paper explores Black third wave feminist critiques of rap music and hip-hop culture by examining the lack of feminist response to the work of female rappers.

WomenStudies.com: The Possibilities of Virtual Reality in Feminist Pedagogy

The concept of gender performance is difficult for students to grasp and apply. Gender "swapping" or "bending" in virtual reality offers students a chance to apply the abstract notion that gender is social performance.

- Christine Hanlon, University of Central Florida
  Gender in Cyberspace: What is "Real?"

  This paper focuses on how gender representations can be deceiving in computer-mediated communication (CMC). The researcher conducted in-depth interviews with users to identify how and why individuals disguise their gender online. This paper also focuses on the implications of misrepresented and/or disguised gender in computer-mediated relationships.

Women's Bodies Engaging (with) Global Technologies
Radisson - Alumni

Global technologies engage (with) women's bodies in a multitude of ways. The five panelists will consider biotechnology, ecotourism, information technology, cultural and bodily homogenization. Global impacts on women's bodies - through processes of contraception, cloning, aging - along with indigenous approaches to land and its appropriation are discussed.

- Renate Klein, Deakin University
  Globalized Bodies/Globalized Lives: From the "Beauty Myth" to the "Gene Myth"
  This paper considers the ramifications for women of technologies (cosmetic surgery, dieting, gene therapy) that threaten the diversity of women's lived existence and discusses ways of resisting such global homogenizing.

- Diane Bell, George Washington University
  Feminizing the Land: Rhetoric and Realities
  This paper looks at issues of cultural appropriation which are occurring on a global scale. An example is the concept of "the land of our mother," which purports to be an indigenous ideology and which is appropriated by global movements such as environmentalists, ecotourists, and eco-feminists.

- Susan Clements, Deakin University
  Older Bodies: Globalized Ageism in Health Care
  This paper explores the relationship between nurses' negative attitudes toward elderly women and the impact this has on their care with society's ageist view of old women.

- Laurel Guymet, Deakin University
  Fertile Bodies: Resisting a Monoculture of Body
  The author discusses the acceptance of heterosexuality as the norm which perpetuates a monoculture of the body that sanctions globally the social and medical control of women's fertile bodies.

- Susan Hawthorne, University of Melbourne
  Global Dislocations: Homeless Bodies in a Dislocated World
  This paper addresses the way in which globalization is having a direct impact on women's bodies as farmers and as factory workers (especially in the maquiladoras).

Representing Sexuality/Representing Sex
Ford B10

This panel deals with the ways in which sex and sexuality become figured within particular forms of discourse and in the materiality of everyday life.

- Danielle Egan, St. Lawrence University
  Re-figuring Sex-Work/Re-figuring Feminism: Exotic Dance as a Site of Discussion
  This paper discusses the two dominant feminist paradigms involved in the "sex wars" which permeate feminist discourses on sex work and pornography.

- Heather Marsh, St. Lawrence University
  Vision, Voyeurism and the Limits of Foucault
  Listening to sexual secrets, made possible by the confession, creates a voyeuristic response to sexuality, in which sexual acts are currently viewed via webcams and film as a result of curiosity, or the desire to look and to engage in the act while maintaining personal distance.

- Jennifer Nash, Harvard University
  Resistance, Re-inscription and The Films of Candida Royalle
  Feminists have found ways to interrupt, challenge, and resist various hegemonic discourses which inscribe bodies with dominant cultural codes. Alternative discourses have asserted that pornography can act as a site of women's agency, as a space of pure liberation.

- Ross Glover, St. Lawrence University
  Failing Representation or Filming Exotic Dance
  By analyzing two cinematic attempts to "story dancers' lives" (Stripper and Striptease) through psychoanalytic and poststructural theory, the author makes the argument that film cannot harness the embodied dimensions implicit in the exotic dance-space.

Teaching Feminist Practice: Academics Collaborating in the Field
Radisson - Presidents
• Carol Wolfe Konek, Wichita State University
• Camie Borsdorff, Harbor House Shelter for Abused Women
• Elizabeth Ablah, Citizens for Quality Education
• Heather Borsdorff, YWCA Women's Crisis Center & Safe House
• Lynne Burris Butler, University of North Alabama
  In this session feminist teachers and students discuss their collaborative actions to bring feminist theory into community practice. They consider strategic and organizational issues affected by partisan, religious, race, class and privilege differences in conservative communities resistant to changes.

Violence and Exploitation: Across Race and Beyond Borders
Murphy Hall 228
  Women of the world are controlled and subordinated by various types of male violence and sexual exploitation. Race, class, economics, culture, and world religion influence the forms these acts of violence and exploitation take. The similarities and differences of these forms will be examined.

• Vednita Carter
  Black Women and Prostitution in the United States
  Racism makes Black women and girls especially vulnerable to sexual exploitation and keeps them trapped in the sex industry. We must address racism on a societal level, as well as within specific institutions to assist women of color in escaping prostitution.

• Vicki Meyer, DePaul University
  Gentlemen's Clubs in the United States
  A liberal perspective of "gentlemen's clubs" will be compared to a radical feminist perspective and the harm caused to women by this form of commodification will be analyzed.

• Behjat Dheghan, Association of Iranian Women-USA
  Violence Against Political Prisoners in Iran
  During the last two decades of fundamentalist rule in Iran, women have resisted the theocratic government and suppression of women's rights. This presentation draws on rare testimonies from survivors and witnesses of political imprisonment, violence and torture.

• Donna M. Hughes, University of Rhode Island
  Trafficking in Women From Ukraine and Russia
  Findings from research conducted in Ukraine and Russia on the recruitment and control of women being trafficked from countries of Eastern Europe into sex industries worldwide will be presented.

Indigenous Women's Strategies for Personal and Social Change
Radisson - Northrop Room
• Sylvia Lemos Sharma, Independent Community Scholar
• Gertrude Godoy, Int'l Indigenous Grandmothers Society
  Dr. Sharma will show slides and perform a Mexican copal ceremonial dance. This program's presentations capture indigenous roots that work to remember the healer ways of ancestral female traditions. Dr. Godoy founded the International Indigenous Grandmothers' Society and will speak to this.

Developing an Advisory Council for a Women's Studies Program
Radisson - Rotary
• Sandra K. Squires, University of Nebraska, Omaha
• Karen Falconer Al-Hindi, University of Nebraska, Omaha
  This session describes the process our Women's Studies Committee went through to develop a community advisory council. The challenges to the process will be discussed along with the successes.

Segments of A Wife’s Letter

Performed and facilitated by professor Ananya Chatterjea, Department of Dance and Theater, University of Minnesota

This interactive performance and dialogue by Ananya Chatterjea is based on a suicide note written by a young woman in Hyderabad, India, several years ago. The note is written to her husband, who along with his parents had abused her regularly through the duration of their marriage. Her letter is remarkably telling of this young woman’s lack of self-esteem; she blames herself, advises him to marry again as he had indeed wished to do, but never really addresses their abusive and unequal relationship. Such lack of consideration for oneself is a common experience for many women across the world, and inheres in their socialization as women in various ways in different cultural contexts. A Wife’s Letter is a performance focused on the experiences of women of color and particularly Third World women, because the intersection of the oppressive forces of racism, classicism, and sexism, place these women in particularly intense situations. The complete work will premiere this fall.

Nice Girls Don’t Sweat by Jane Curry

In a solo performance proving that feminists really do have a sense of humor, Jane Curry becomes Sammy Kay Knight, an English teacher and veteran of the all American Red Heads professional basketball team in this foray into the history of women’s experiences with athletics. Incorporating historical and contemporary slides of women athletes, Sammy Kay’s verbal meanderings engage the enduring themes of physical capacities, propriety, and femininity. She can’t help but notice that athletic women have always been a dangerous lot. “After all, it’s hard to think of yourself as weak and dependent after you’ve just run five miles.”

PRESIDING
Kathlee Laughlin, Co-Chair Embedded Conference

The Future of Women's Studies: Is It Feminist?
Robyn Wiegman
Johnnella A. Butler
Sally Kitch

This plenary opens the NWSA 2001 Embedded Conference on the future of Women's Studies. Plenary participants will explore various issues that currently inform the debates on the future of Women's Studies. How will Women's Studies change with new generations of scholars influenced by their own life histories, new theoretical interests, complicating identity issues, third-wave politics, and emerging Women's Studies Ph.D. programs?

Robyn Wiegman

Robyn Wiegman will become The Margaret Taylor Smith Director of Women's Studies at Duke University in July 2001. Her research and teaching cut across disciplinary and interdisciplinary conversations including cultural studies, American Studies, critical race theory, visual studies, queer studies and critical theory. She has published American Anatomies: Theorizing Race and Gender, which takes a genealogical approach to the emergence of "blacks and women" in both US popular culture and academic discourse. She has also co-edited several volumes, including Feminism Beside Itself, with Diane Elam and Who Can Speak? Authority and Critical Identity with Judith Roof. Her latest anthology, Women's Studies On Its Own, is forthcoming from Duke University Press, and she is currently completing a manuscript called Object Lessons: Feminism and the Knowledge Politics of Identity.

Academic Feminism Against Itself

The question that organizes this plenary asks us to debate the possibility that the loss of feminism will be a constitutive feature of the institutional future of Women's Studies. The plenary question thus recognizes an increasingly discernible distinction between women's studies as an academic entity and feminism as a social movement. In this distinction, the academic and the feminist are split over issues of political content, and that now troubled phrase, "academic feminist," becomes the source of a great deal of political discontent. But is the political future of women's studies as a field contingent on repairing the emergent distinction between academic institutionalization and feminism as a world changing social force? Robyn Wiegman's paper focuses on this question, worrying less about a political distinction between women's studies and feminism than about the implications of refusing such distinctions altogether.
Johnnella Butler

Johnnella Butler is a Professor of American Ethnic Studies and Associate Dean of the Graduate School at the University of Washington. She also holds adjunct appointments in the English Department and Women’s Studies Department. Her teaching and research interests include African American literature, comparative American ethnic literatures, the literature of Africa and the African diaspora, and U.S. ethnic and postcolonial theory and pedagogy. Nationally recognized for her active work in curriculum change and development, she is the author of Black Studies: Pedagogy and Revolution, A Study of the Teaching of Afro-American Literature and the Liberal Arts; co-editor and main contributor of Transforming the Curriculum: Ethnic Studies in U.S. Higher Education and the Encyclopedia of American Studies, of which she is one of three editors. Her works in progress include Recreating America: American Ethnic Literature and the Postcolonial, a volume of literary critical analysis, and an anthology of U.S. American Ethnic Literature.

Difficult Dialogues and the Postmodern Dilemma; OR, Why We Ask Ourselves If the Future of Women’s Studies is Feminist?

In 1989 Johnnella Butler wrote for the 20th anniversary of Women’s Studies an optimistic article in the Women’s Review of Books that centered the potential dialogue between Women’s Studies and Ethnic Studies as key to feminism’s success in the academy. A few years later, she developed the argument further in the volume Transforming the Curriculum: Ethnic Studies and Women’s Studies (SUNY Press, 1991) in the essays “The Difficult Dialogue of Curriculum Transformation” and “Transforming the Curriculum: Teaching About Women of Color.” Earlier, her 1983 NWSA plenary panel session presentation, “Minority Studies and Women’s Studies: Do We Want to Kill a Dream?”, was published in the International Women’s Studies Quarterly (1984). At the time, she had no idea of the powerful forces threatening the dialogues among women of color and white women, even in the face of the burning desire and determination so many of us have to engage the many manifestations of the past in the present toward a productive present and hopeful future. The dialogues have failed because of the overwhelming and false comfort certain varieties of postmodernism promise, keeping at bay the experiences beyond the classroom and the scholarly. Identity, the key issue in those promising dialogues, has been maligned and dismissed, and with that dismissal has gone the possibility of significant encounter. In this presentation, she hopes to offer ways to regain the possibilities of a transformative, inclusive feminism that permeates the core of Women’s Studies.
Sally Kitch

Sally Kitch is Professor of Women’s Studies at Ohio State University. Between 1992 and 2000, she was chair of the department, during which time she was active in the NWSA Program Administrator’s Caucus. Kitch co-chaired the Pre-Conference in 1994 and 1999 and has made many presentations about graduate education as well as administrative issues. She is currently spearheading a small group of women’s studies faculty and administrators in the planning of the first national working conference on the women’s studies Ph.D., scheduled for October, 2001. In 1998 Feminist Studies published Kitch’s article, co-authored with Judith Allen, entitled “Disciplined by Disciplines?: The Need for an Interdisciplinary Research Mission in/and for Women’s Studies”; Kitch has also published two award-winning books, both of which theorize about the role of celibacy in the internal workings of the most egalitarian of the nineteenth-century American utopian societies. Her most recent book, Higher Ground: From Utopianism to Realism in American Feminist Thought and Theory, explores the relationship between utopian thinking and theories of feminism, and proposes a new theory — realism — for the construction of useful and enduring feminist thought.

Constructing the Future of Women’s Studies: Little Red Riding Hood Sees the Forest Through the Trees

Now that the field’s future seems all but secure, some in women’s studies have begun to question whether it can really deliver on its promise. Is interdisciplinarity possible? Is there a legitimate category called “women” if racial, ethnic, and other differences, as well as women’s varying social and geographical locations, are taken into account? Is feminism still a meaningful concept? Should women’s studies be offering the Ph.D.? Kitch’s talk will suggest a strategy for putting such concerns into perspective by using the fairy tale of Little Red Riding Hood as a guide. While we are preoccupied by the immediate threat of the wolf(ves) in Grandma’s bed, might we be missing both the opportunities and challenges in the larger forest? Might a better understanding of the big picture change our perception of the wolf(ves)?

All concurrent sessions for the Embedded Conference are located in the Radisson Metrodome. Other general conference sessions are located in campus classrooms. All registered conference participants are welcome to attend the Embedded Conference sessions.

The Future of the Field Workshops require pre-registration.
Is Womanism Feminism?
Radisson - Alumni
- Angela Bowen, California State University, Long Beach
- Diane Harriford, Vassar College
Black feminist scholars address whether womanism and feminism share the same visions and intentions or whether their goals are separate but equal; and what might lie beneath the rapid acceptance and wide use of the label by women of color across a spectrum of ethnicities, locations and political ideologies.

Towards an Inclusive Women's Studies: Unpacking Institutionalized Racism and Classism
Radisson - Northrop Room
This panel addresses individual and collective experiences of racism and classism in U.S. Women's Studies programs. Panelists use their home institutions as living laboratories, drawing on personal stories and interviews in order to analyze the various manifestations of institutionalized racism and classism while also creating frameworks for an inclusive Women's Studies.
- Laura Gillman, Virginia Tech University
- April Few, Virginia Tech University

Is International Exchange Important? Survey on Women's Studies Master's Degree Programs From the Students' Perspective
Radisson - Rotary
This study reveals how graduate students evaluate multiculturalization and internationalization in their programs. Eighty-two graduate students of thirteen nationalities and from fifteen programs participated. Survey results will be valuable for the internationalizing of Women's Studies in the new century.
- Siqin Yang, University of Minnesota
- Marwa Hassoun, University of Minnesota, Twin Cities

The Building of Women's Studies: International and Interdisciplinary Goals
Radisson - Regents
This panel explores the questions surrounding the building of Women's Studies inside and outside the U.S. It is often discussed that Women's Studies should be both international and interdisciplinary in its discourse and research, but what are the ramifications of these goals?

- Luh Ayu Prasetyaningsih, University of Maryland

The International Power Struggle of Building Women's Studies in Indonesia: Western-Borrowed or Western-Centered?

A Manifesto From the Third Wave: Bridging the Academic Activist Divide
Radisson - Rotary
This panel explores the discursive and material effects of the institutionalization of Women's Studies. Activist work in the academy is devalued, thereby depoliticizing Women's Studies. By reinforcing praxis as a necessary component of Women's Studies, activism in the academy can be recognized and institutionally rewarded, hence ensuring the political project of feminism.
- Marwa Hassoun, University of Minnesota, Twin Cities

Beyond Legitimacy: The Costs of Academic Feminism
This paper investigates the institutional norms operating in the academy at large as a concession Women's Studies must make in order to be a legitimized discipline.

  Integrating International Feminisms

Women, Environments, and Feminism
Amundson - 158
• Diane S. Hope, Rochester Institute of Technology
• Linda Shayne, Rensselaer Polytechnic Institute
• Cynthia Miller, Emerson College
• Sally Schauman, Duke University
• Kamala Platt, University of San Antonio
  In this session participants will discuss how their field research in environmental work has impacted their teaching and women's studies course development. Panelists explore traditional and emerging approaches to the connections between women, environments, and feminism as appropriate course material in women’s studies programs.

A Luncheon with Eleanor Smeal
Highlighting the important connections between feminist academics and activism, Eleanor Smeal, President of Feminist Majority Foundation (FMF), talks about promoting women’s rights in partnership with women’s studies students and faculty. Join her for a luncheon from 11:45am - 1:00 pm in the McNamara Alumni Center Memorial Hall, as she discusses her experience working across political, social, and economic lines to promote women’s empowerment.

Tickets for the lunch can be purchased in advance for $5 at FMF’s table in the Book Exhibit or at the door preceding the event. Tickets are sold on a first-come, first-serve basis, and space is limited. Advance purchase is strongly recommended. Attendees are asked to arrive at 11:45 am to ensure that the luncheon ends in time for the 1:00 pm session. Questions should be directed to FMF’s table in the Book Exhibit.
1:00 - 2:15 PM - Concurrent Sessions

Discipline Review Panel: Geography
Radisson - Coffman
- Mary E. Thomas, University of Minnesota
- Karen Till, University of Minnesota
- Lawrence Knopp, University of Minnesota, Duluth

Feminist geography emphasizes the roles that space, place, and scale play in social relations of gender and in the lives of individual women. This panel will review current theoretical and methodological insights in feminist geography to argue that spatial analysis provides crucial lessons for social science feminist scholarship.

Future of the Field Workshop

Gender Studies/Women’s Studies: Is Gender Studies the Future of WOST?
Radisson - Nolte
- Moderator: Claire Moses, University of Maryland

Third-Wave Futures: Activists and Academics Consider Feminism and Women’s Studies in the 21st Century
Radisson - Alumni
- Alison Piepmeier, Vanderbilt University
- Amy Richards, Third Wave Foundation
- Jennifer Baumgardner
- Rory Dicker, Westminster College

Third-wave feminism is a hot topic both in and out of the academy. Authors of the recently released Manifesto: Young Women, Feminism, and the Future and editors of the upcoming Catching a Wave: Reclaiming Feminism for the 21st Century discuss the nexus of activism and academics within the Women’s Studies curriculum and the generation gap between the second and third waves.

Hip-Hop Consciousness: Emerging Third Wave Voices
Radisson - Regents

This session examines the lyrical discourse of female hip-hop artists and their connection to broader, third wave feminist concepts. Works by rappers Eve, Lauryn Hill, Bahamadia, Rah Digga and others will be discussed.

- Donna Troka, Emory University
  You Heard My Gun Cock: An Exploration of Agency and Aggression in Contemporary Female Rap

By looking at the lyrical, musical and visual aspects of hip-hop artist Eve’s song and video for Love is Blind, this paper discusses the ways in which female hip-hop artists construct both a dialogue and a means of expressing a reality in contemporary rap/hip-hop music.

- Shaun Kelley Walsh, San Diego State University
  Rap (dis)Connections: Artist, Art, Audience, and Consumption

Integral to an examination of the feminist content in women’s rap music is a discussion of the relationship between the artist, the art and the audience. This paper looks at the specific ways that rap identifies its audience within lyrics and performance.

- Mako L. Fitts, Arizona State University
  What is Justice?: Locating Definitions in the Lyrical Discourse of Female Hip-Hop Artists

Classical notions of justice are so rooted in concrete methods of punishment, fair exchange and just “deserts” that attempts to define justice become limited to either a distributive paradigm of “rights” or locating means of retribution for transgression. This paper seeks to locate the relationship between definitions of social justice and the cultural production of African-American female imagery.

Expanding Our Horizons: Feminist Pedagogies Across Interdisciplinary Boundaries
Radisson - Presidents
- Sue A. Lafky, University of Iowa
- Julie Ferris, University of Iowa
- Jessica Shares, University of Iowa
- Rain Huo, University of Iowa
- Sandra Solis, University of Iowa

This panel represents five Ph.D. students enrolled in a feminist pedagogy course, directly addressing the idea that feminism is an integral part of women’s studies and that a continual commitment to curriculum transformation and the act of bringing in emerging feminist literature is essential to courses in Women’s Studies.

Disciplining Transgression: An Inter-Generational Dialogue
Radisson - Collegiate
- Naomi Scheman, University of Minnesota
- Amy L. Brandzel, University of Minnesota

A senior faculty member and a Ph.D. student in Women’s Studies explore, through their real and imaginary relationship to each other, the contradictions inherent in institutionally authorizing transgressive voices. How does a feminist Ph.D. program relate both to the students it “trains” and to variously marginalized voices, inside and outside?

Trauma and Women with Disabilities: The Relationship Between Personal Violence and Women with Disabilities
Radisson - Rotary
- Ellie Emanuel, University of Minnesota

Dr. Emanuel will present the preliminary analysis of the personal stories women with disabilities tell about the impact personal violence has on their disability. Quality of life issues will be discussed.
2:30 - 3:45 PM - Concurrent Sessions

Discipline Review Panel: Economics
Radisson - Coffman
- Priti Ramamurthy, University of Washington
- Yumiko Yamamoto, University of Utah

Future of the Field Workshop
Foundations for Graduate Education: Where's the Canon?
Radisson - Nolte
- Moderator: Robyn Wiegman, Duke University
  Pre-registration required.

Radical Literary Histories in the Twin Cities and Greater Minnesota
Radisson - Faculty
This special event is designed in conjunction with this year's Writers Series to further highlight the relationship between women's writing and social change. Featured panelists include Joan Drury, Former Publisher of Spinsters Ink and Coordinator of Norcroft; Barb Weiser, owner of Amazon Books in Minneapolis; and Martha Roth, Minnesota writer and friend of Meridel Le Sueur.

Queer Pedagogies and Teacher Partnerships
Radisson - Northrop Room
- Paula Ressler, Illinois State University
  Using Queer, Feminist, and Liberatory Pedagogies to Explore Non-Normative Identity Constructs
  Queer pedagogy, merged with feminist and liberatory pedagogies, provides a strong method for challenging normative identity constructs. This paper describes how such pedagogies were used in an education course designed to address both LGBT issues and the intersections of race, gender, class, and sexual orientation.

  - Linda Steet, SUNY Geneseo
    Making the Case for a Women’s Studies and Teacher Education Partnership

  This presentation is an outline for developing intellectual and professional connections between Women's Studies and teacher education programs. This paper looks at creating feminist teacher education curricula, inspiring new educational theories and practices for K-12 classrooms, furthering work in the area of girls' studies, and expanding the base of Women's Studies programs.

Public Venues for Feminist Intellectuals
Radisson - Regents
- Laura Roskos, Radcliffe

Of Impresarios and Academics: Creating Public Venues for Feminist Intellectuals

The producer of the feminist radio series Voices of Public Intellectuals, takes you “backstage” to learn about the costs and technical capacities involved in making radio. This experientially-based presentation hopes to share practical know-how in a way that opens up a conceptual space for new ideas to emerge that can help feminist intellectuals achieve the popularity and prominence they deserve.

Creating and Publishing Flow, An Independent Zine By and For Feminist Students
- Elizabeth A. Harrick, Miami University
- Alicia Manson, Miami University
- Katie Krueger, Miami University
- Leah Copeland, Miami University
- Sarah Arthur, Miami University

In fall 2000 a group of students founded/created a feminist publication, a zine. We discuss third wave feminist negotiations surrounding voice, definition, inclusion, multiplicity, and the feared institutionalization and colonization of our ideas and ideals, even at the well-intentioned hands of our Women's Studies sisters.

Women's Studies on New Ground: New Work in Literacy Training and Explorations in Jesuit Education
Radisson - Alumni
- Mev Miller, University of St. Thomas
  What Women's Studies Can Learn From Women with Limited Literacy Skills

This paper explores how feminist and critical pedagogies can be influenced by our understandings of women's literacy and how women's literacy can be supported by feminist and critical pedagogies.

- Susanne B. Dietzel, Loyola University, New Orleans
  Building Common Ground: Women's Studies and Feminist Theory Meet the Jesuits

The author relates the experience of establishing Women's Studies and women's services at a southern Jesuit university. This paper looks at ways in which a university that is committed to educating the whole person in solidarity with the world, and whose goal it is to implant a sense of social justice in its students' struggles with the intellectual basis of feminist theory and the goals of feminist practice and what kind of feminist practice is called for under those circumstances.
The Rhetorical Syllabus and Interdisciplinary Training in Women’s Studies
Radisson - Rotary
- Kathleen M. Torrens, California State University, Fresno

Is Women’s Studies Feminist? The Rhetorical Syllabus
From the perspectives of rhetorical and feminist theory, we can explore the syllabus as a form of academic discourse that offers clues to the motives of the faculty as well as the institution in which the syllabus operates. The author’s exploration of these documents seeks markers of feminist thought, consciousness, and objectives in the content, style, tone, goals, structure, policies, and methodologies of the document.

The Department of Women’s Studies at the University of Iowa proposes a student-faculty roundtable that would problematize the notion of successive feminist “waves” over the past thirty years, particularly as these inform the emergence of doctoral education in Women’s Studies.

Knowledge for What? Forging an NWSA Agenda for Research and Political Action
Radisson - Presidents
- Jill Niebrugge, Wells College
- Kathleen Slobin, North Dakota State University
- Nan DiBello, Wells College
- Patricia Lengerman, George Washington University
- Roberta Spalter-Roth, American Sociological Association

This panel is designed to provide a space for NWSA members to consider how NWSA can become a more effective voice for women in the political and policy arenas of the United States. As such, it is proposed as a first step in the long project of making NWSA research a part of the ongoing public dialogues on women’s issues, developing better relations with media analysts and policy makers.
4:00 - 5:15 PM - Concurrent Sessions

Discipline Review Panel: Sociology
Radisson - Coffman
Double session, part one.
This session brings together a panel of sociologists, all of whom have published work that brings their sociological imagination to expanding the range and scholarship of Women's Studies and feminist oriented research.

- Kathleen Slobin, North Dakota State University
- Patricia Cough, Graduate Center, City University of New York

Feminism and Sociology in the Age of Teletechnology
This cultural critic links various critical theories (i.e., feminist, queer, film, and postcolonial theory, literary criticism, science studies, and critiques of ethnographic writing) to the expansion of electronic telecommunications in the late twentieth century.

- Betsey Lucal, Indiana University, South Bend

Sociological Feminist Theory 1990-2000
The presenter reflects on trends and changes in feminist sociological theory and on issues that are ripe for future theory construction.

- Marjorie DeVault, Syracuse University

Feminist Methodology: Empirical Investigation and Social Change
The presenter discusses innovative methodological strategies for sociological practice and surveys several approaches to feminist research, and explores the key question of how research is and might be related to social change.

Community Colleges: Challenges, Constraints, and Contributions
Radisson - Regents
Sponsored by the Community College Caucus
- Barbara Horn, Nassau Community College
- Judith Roy, Century College
- Karen Bojar, Community College of Philadelphia
- Pamela Kemner, Clermont College

In an effort not to neglect the emergence of Women's Studies at community colleges throughout the country, this interactive panel, representing diverse campuses, treats such issues as establishing and sustaining programs, trouble-shooting, service-learning, internships, articulation with four-year schools, women's centers, coalition building, budget forming, local feminist organizations and communities.

Men, Masculinities, and Women's Studies
Radisson - Northrop Room
This panel explores how recent discussions surrounding men and masculinities affect the future of Women's Studies. Using theory and pedagogy, participants explore ways in which men and masculinity fit or do not fit within the feminist framework of Women's Studies programs.

- Judith Kegan Gardiner, University of Illinois, Chicago

Gender and Masculinity Texts and Feminist Classrooms
This paper examines Michael Kimmel's The Gendered Society, The Gendered Society Reader, and his and Messner's Men's Lives, all current and highly influential gender textbooks, in comparison with Women's Studies texts.

- Michael S. Kimmel, SUNY Stony Brook

What are Men Doing in Women's Studies?
The presenter examines how women's studies has made gender visible and has stimulated the examination of men and masculinity.

- Steven P. Schacht, SUNY Plattsburgh

Teaching About Being an Oppressor: Some Personal and Political Considerations
The author examines how his experiences as an unwilling oppressor can be used to teach others about the unearned male privileges, consequentially giving a face to oppression.
• Olivia C. Smith, Western Kentucky University
Invasion From Mars: Men and Masculinities Within an Introduction to Women’s Studies Course
In light of the controversy surrounding radical feminist Mary Daly and her policy of excluding men from her Introduction to Feminist Ethics course, the presenter examines how the inclusion of men and masculinities with introduction courses in Women’s Studies positively and negatively affects the instructor, students, and course goals.

The Same Feminist? Posing the Question: Whose Concealment and Whose Authority?
Radisson - Rotary
• Karen Kopelson, Purdue University
Teaching Trouble: Negotiating the Subversion of Identity in the Classroom
This paper asks how teachers in Women’s Studies and other feminist classrooms are negotiating some of the recent challenges to identity categories. What do we risk or gain by complicating identity in our classrooms?

• Mary Armstrong, California Polytechnic State University
All Together Now?: Women’s Studies and Queer Studies
This paper addresses the debate of how new interdisciplinary studies can be understood in relation to Women’s Studies, particularly in terms of recent reorganizations in the field of sexuality study.

Enriching Academic Feminism through Social Activism: A Model of Anti-Violence, Economic Empowerment and Global Connection
Radisson - Presidents
• Beverly Ferguson, Metropolitan State University
• Maura Lynch, Metropolitan State University
• Sharon Rice Vaughan, Metropolitan State University
• Saleha Suleman, Metropolitan State University
• Terri Berthiaume Hawthorne, Metropolitan State University
This panel focuses on connecting academic feminism with social activism through curriculum, academic programs, and international exchanges at Metropolitan State University. By combining theory and practice in curriculum and programming, Metro State students learn alternative ways of understanding feminist theory. Students achieve academic excellence by bridging academic learning and real life experience.

Women’s Studies Pedagogies and Methodologies in the Graduate Classroom
Radisson - Faculty
• Jennifer Steadman, Emory University
• Claire Moses, University of Maryland
• Elizabeth Engelhardt, Ohio University
• Maria Bevacqua, Minnesota State University, Mankato
• Vivian May, Teachers College Columbia
This roundtable discussion focuses on teaching Women’s Studies topics and methodologies to graduate students. We discuss strategies for engaging students from a variety of disciplinary backgrounds, including Women’s Studies Ph.D. students, nontraditional students, and students from humanities and social science departments.

A New Activism for Feminist Scholars? Jane Roland Martin’s “Coming of Age in Academe”
Radisson - Collegate
• Susan Laird, University of Oklahoma, Chair
• Ann Schonerger, University of Maine
• Jean O’Barr, Duke University
• Patsy Schweickart, Purdue University
• Jane Roland Martin, University of Massachusetts, Boston
Three prominent academic feminists will review feminist philosopher Jane Roland Martin’s Coming of Age in Academe: Rekindling Women’s Hopes and Reforming the Academy by bearing witness to their own coming of age as feminists in diverse fields and institutions. The author will respond to their reviews and invite audience discussion.
5:30 - 6:45 PM - Concurrent Sessions

Discipline Review Panel: Sociology

Radisson - Coffman

Double session, part two.
- Kathleen Slobin, North Dakota State University
- Ronnie J. Steinberg, Vanderbilt University

Women, Work and the Labor Market

The presenter reviews new perspectives and empirical research on gender and labor.

- Patricia Lengermann, George Washington University
- Jill Niebrugge-Brantley, Wells College

Recovering Women and Minorities in the History of Sociology

Presenters review the flourishing body of scholarship by feminists that is recovering the work of women and minorities in the classic period of sociology, 1830 to 1930. Such scholarship illustrates that women and minorities were creating an alternative tradition of critical and activist sociology as the academic tradition emphasized positivism and value neutrality.

Future of the Field Workshop

Transforming the Field in Transnational Contexts: What are the Questions? What are the Theories?

Radisson - Nolte

- Chilla Bulbeck, Adelaide University

The Same Feminist? Posing the Question: Whose Concealment and Authority?

Radisson - Northrop

The question, "Is it feminist?,” invites a disturbance of meanings. Perhaps the most significant disturbance relates to issues of authenticity. This panel interrogates what mandate is invoked by the identity “feminist” and which subject positions are concealed or accommodated by it.

- Dawn Rae Davis, University of Minnesota

The Same Feminist? Delirium and Discipline: Disturbing Power

The author examines what political conditions bear upon deconstructionist work and inform an aversion within Women's Studies to what is made audible through the term “high theory.”

- Manisha Nordine, University of Minnesota

The Same Feminist? Disturbance or Adversary: Assigning the Politics of Identity

The author explores issues of authenticity and essentialism by addressing the appropriation of the works of women writers of color under the “feminist” label and the politics of feminist pedagogy in a multicultural classroom.

- Pamela Aronson, Michigan State University

Growing Up in the Shadow of the Women's Movement: The Influence of Women's Studies on Young Women's Feminist Identities

The author points to racial and class differences in how feminist identities and views about equality develop.

Girl-Centering Feminism: Practice and Theory in the Next Generation

Radisson - Rotary

This panel brings together feminist activists/artists/scholars whose practical and theoretical work is a direct consequence of their own education by the Women's Studies movement. Girls have now become the focus of their feminist educational imagination and in this session they will present a brief analysis of the resources available for girls' benefit, and a theoretical analysis of both the educative and miseducative senses of the concept “befriending girls.”

- Amy Sullivan, Ida, Inc., A Center for Girls' Art & Humanities

A Strong, Bright Presence: Girl-Centered Community Education

The author looks at past and current efforts at girls' community education as well as the resources currently available from the organizations and entities that focus on girls' well-being and creative and intellectual development.

- Susan Laird, University of Oklahoma

Notes Toward a Feminist Educational Theory of Befriending Girls

The author theorizes both educative and miseducative senses of the concept “befriending girls,” drawing upon sources from the author's feminist activism as an adult Girl Scout, the recent new scholarship on girls, women's philosophy and history, and feminist theory.
Women's Studies for the Future: Report From the University of Arizona Conference
Radisson - Alumni
• Elizabeth Lapovsky Kennedy, University of Arizona
• Jessica Turk, University of Arizona
• Meredith H. Trauner, University of Arizona

This session reports on The Future of Women's Studies: Foundations, Interrogations, Politics, a conference held at the University of Arizona, October 20-21, 2000, based on the on-line publication produced from the conference. Panelists will identify the major issues that emerged during the conference, giving their own interpretations for future directions.

Critical Issues in Teaching Introduction to Lesbian/Gay/Bisexual/Transgender Studies
Radisson - Regents
• Sharon L. Barnes, Kent State University, Tuscarawas
• Danielle DeMuth, University of Toledo

Many instructors teaching a course in Gay/Lesbian studies end up teaching what amounts to an Introduction to LGBT Studies. This situation carries particular institutional, departmental and programmatic weight, one often overlooked in other crucial decisions around course content, texts, and disciplinary considerations. Attendees are invited to share experiences and solutions, at both the institutional and course level.

In the Disciplines: The Future of Women's Studies
Graduate Work Within Traditional Disciplines
Radisson - Collegiate
• Jane Rosser, Bowling Green State University
• Cynthia Mahaffey, Bowling Green State University
• Jeannie Ludlow, Bowling Green State University
• Julia Mason, Bowling Green State University
• Marnie Sullivan, Bowling Green State University
• Teresa, Kasperick, Bowling Green State University

Many graduate students working from a feminist perspective do so within traditional disciplines and fields. This roundtable provides a forum for faculty, students, and administrators to dialogue about the structures, boundaries, and relationships that shape the nature of graduate education outside formal Women's Studies programs.

Third Wave Feminism in Theory and Action: A Sampler of Issues Facing Young Feminists Today
Radisson - Presidents
• Colleen Graham, Minnesota State University, Mankato
• Donna Langston, Minnesota State University, Mankato
• Krista Jacobs, Minnesota State University, Mankato
• Karmen McQuity, Minnesota State University, Mankato
• Kim Schmitz, Minnesota State University, Mankato
• Yashodha Amin, Minnesota State University, Mankato

Young feminists are challenging, enriching, and changing the face of feminism. This panel will present third wave perspectives on an eclectic variety of issues, including the following: freedom of choice/abortion; theorizing the drag king; queer identity; globalization; music and technology; and body modification.
womenstudies.edu: Teaching Introductory Women’s Studies Online
Ford 464
• Susan Shaw, Oregon State University
What might an introductory Women’s Studies web course look like? This workshop explores the philosophical questions about teaching introductory Women Studies online and will look at the process of developing and teaching an online course. Oregon State University’s introductory Women Studies web course will be viewed.

Care Ethics, Service Learning, and Social Change
Amundson 156
• Jean Keller, College of St. Benedict
• Rachel Wick
• Sheila Nelson
The presenters demonstrate how an interdisciplinary class on Feminism and Families successfully integrated care ethics and service learning to help students develop a personal, ethical, structural and political understanding of the family.

Where Have All The Poets Gone?
Ford 110
This panel explores the history, trajectory, and uses of lesbian poetry, from its heyday as lesbian-feminist cultural rallying point to its various, and usually more muted, current locations. Papers explore poetry on stage, in the classroom, and as it disappears into the academic theoretical text.

• AnnaLouise Keating, Aquinas College

Something Monstrous She Must Be: Textual Embodiment and Nineteenth-Century American Women Writers
Ford 115
This panel explores nineteenth-century American women writers’ representations and deployments of the female body and intellect; we address tropes of monstrosity, madness, genius, and illness as postbellum U.S. women writers’ dialogic method of social melioration.

• Michele L. Mock, University of Pittsburgh, Johnstown
Rebecca Harding Davis’s Exposé of Women, Men and Madness
The presenter addresses nineteenth-century author Rebecca Harding Davis’ textual activism.

• Tonya Shepherd, Indiana University of Pennsylvania
Making Spectacles of Themselves: Women-Patient Writers in “The Opal”
The presenter questions the motive behind the poetic license allotted to women patients of the New York State Lunatic Asylum at Utica, where in 1851, The Opal was founded.

• Jennifer A. Gehrman, Fort Lewis College
Domesticity as Disease in the Later Works of Elizabeth Stuart Phelps
The presenter examines the tropes of illness deployed by Elizabeth Stuart Phelps as an indictment of a “diseased” social structure.

• Janet Peterson Gerstner, Arizona State University
Different, Deviant, and Distanced: Images of Ellen Glasgow’s Rachel Gavin as “Other”
The author discusses Glasgow’s mediation and refutation of the “deviant” through the lens of genius and art.

Promoting the National Status of Women’s Centers in Higher Education
Ford 130
Sponsored by Women’s Center Caucus
• Juli L. Parker, University of Massachusetts, Dartmouth
• Barbara Kasper, SUNY Brockport
• Donald L. Opitz, University of Minnesota
• Frances D. Graham, North Carolina State University
• Susan G. Cosby, University of Oklahoma
This session addresses the status of women’s centers nationally. Building on new and existing survey research, we observe the diversity in women’s centers and how, despite the differences in characteristics, women’s centers often face the same struggles and yet lack a unified voice and visibility in higher education nationally. In this session we plan to catalyze continuing communications for creating a national agenda and promoting a high visibility for women’s centers in national forums of higher education.

Environmental Protest Activism in a Mexican Border City: Of Information Highways and Toxic Byways
This paper follows research focusing on the recent surge of women's involvement in collective environmentalist struggles. The author proposes a model of community activism in which access to information, facilitated primarily by networks, solidified protests against toxic dumping and served to deconstruct the legitimacy of public officials responsible for environmental degradation.

• Gerakina Arlene Sgoutas, University of Denver

Technology and Women's Action Networks in the 21st Century
This paper looks at how technological forces reshape the way in which women communicate across borders and advance the globalization of women's networks. This paper is directed towards all activists within women's movements, both large national organizations and grassroots women's groups.

From Nora to Zora, and Yes, Virginia and Vita: Teaching Women in Literature, 1970-2001
Ford 127
• Judith L. Johnston, Rider University

This presentation traces changes in teaching a Women in Literature course from 1970 to today, commenting on the shift, in a span of thirty years, from all Anglo-European to multicultural authors, from male to female authors, and from silence to explicit acknowledgement of lesbian authors. Our efforts to make our pedagogies and our course readings more inclusive have led to faculty development in Gender and Women's Studies scholarship.

Research Café - Third Wave Perspectives on Eating Disorders: How Do We Empower Ourselves?
Radisson - Campus
• Shelley Endsley, Wichita State University

This research café is designed to address third wave feminist perspectives on eating disorders. There is currently a multitude of information on eating disorders, but how much of it is feminist? Are women still led to believe it is an individual problem? How do we as women take over the language of eating disorders, in order to circumvent the blame?

Sponsored by the International Task Force
• Sonita Sarker, Macalester College
• Lynn Walter, University of Wisconsin, Green Bay
• Michiko Hase, University of Colorado, Boulder
• Paola Bacchetta, University of Kentucky, Lexington
• Sujata Moorti, Old Dominion University
This roundtable will discuss the possibilities as well as limitations in the use of “global” and “multicultural” in Women’s Studies syllabi, through a study of pedagogical dynamics in U.S. based classrooms.

Healing Broken Bodies: Healing Broken Spirits
Ford 130
• Kathleen Juhl, Southwestern University
• Christine Kiesinger, Georgetown University
• Jan Dawson, Southwestern University
The Alexander Technique, Esoteric Healing, Reiki, and Yoga are approaches to body work, healing and spirituality often practiced by women. This panel explores the origins and techniques of each approach, their connections to feminist pedagogies, and the ways women have enriched their practice as strategies for creating cultural transformations.

Construction of Gender and Sexuality in International Literature
Ford 151
• Carol Scates, Southeast Missouri State University
Transforming Consciousness in Gioconda Belli’s “The Inhabited Woman”
Belli creates a metamorphic narrative through which the character of Itza/Lavinia undergoes a transformational consciousness of both personal and political activism. This literary narrative can be interpreted as symbolic of women in Latin America today as they struggle towards an emerging definition of individual/public self.

• Kathy Hickok, Iowa State University
Performing Heterosexuality in “Jane Eyre”: What if Jane is a Lesbian?
Reading Jane Eyre as a lesbian novel of development, the author construes Jane’s legendary heterosexuality as a cultural performance in conflict with her alternate, potentially liberating, lesbian self.

• Amira Jarmakani, Emory University
Building on This Bridge: The Emergence of Arab American Literature
This paper explores the ways in which Arab American women have burst on to the literary scene by way of an intersection between their ethnic and gendered identities and out of identification with a specific literary tradition exemplified by works such as This Bridge Called My Back: Writings By Radical Women of Color.

Reinvigorating Women’s Studies: The Complexities of Literature in the Feminist Classroom
Ford 150
• Carolyn Whitson, Metropolitan State University
Studying Classes of Women in the Women’s Literature Classroom
This paper addresses how the subject of class applies to the study of women’s literature and Women’s Studies. Women’s literature calls for analysis of class and race together, not separated.

• Pamela Menke, Regis College
Feminist Visions and Revisions: “Loud Dreaming” in Toni Morrison’s “Paradise”
Suggesting that Toni Morrison’s recent and complex Paradise is an essential text for the feminist classroom, the presenter will position Paradise within the context of The Bluest Eye and Beloved, will assist participants in “unpacking” the novel’s difficult materials, and will explore the feminist possibilities Paradise engenders.

• LaVona L. Reeves, Eastern Washington University
Adrienne Rich, Queer Studies, and “The Muted Story”
This paper asserts that feminist studies must continue to search for the muted text, especially within minority and lesbian women’s work. It is argued that the future of Women’s Studies will reinforce the intersection of cultures, ethnicity, and global studies while forging spaces for queer studies as well.

Utilizing What Came Before: Understanding and Articulating the Connectedness of Women’s Oppression Across Time
Ford 110
• Judith L. Johnston, Rider University
Gender, Race and Re-Vision
The ideas articulated in 1949 in The Second Sex have a literary and historical context in the fiction written earlier by Triolet, Hurston, Rhys, Cather, and Woolf.
Reflecting and shaping cultural meaning, they create subversive critiques of fascism as rooted in gender and race oppression.

- Elizabeth Rich, Saginaw Valley State University

“sit sister silence”: Contemporary White Women Poets Read an American Colonial Past

This paper examines the major ideas in the work of three contemporary poets (Hanna Weiner, Susan Howe, and Antoinette Claypoole) who embed revised and fragmented colonial texts into their poetry to break down the way that language elides the genocidal impulse of colonial expansion.

Black Women and Women's Studies: The View From Four Campuses

Ford B10
- Layli Phillips, Georgia State University
- Josephine Ahikire, Makerere University
- Jacqueline Howard-Matthews, Clark-Atlanta University
- Kia Lilly Caldwell, University of California, Dominguez Hills
- M. Bahati Kuumba, Spelman College
- Margaret Hunter, California State University, Dominguez Hills

This panel examines how Women's Studies is instituted by Black women in four very different academic environments: Spelman College, an historically Black private women's college; Clark-Atlanta University, an historically Black private co-educational college; California State University, Dominguez Hills, a 70% women of color state school; and Makerere University, the national university of Uganda.

Research Café - Feminist Practice in Assisted Reproductive Technology Policy: State of the ART

Radisson - Campus
- Stephanie S. Turner, Purdue University

As assisted reproduction technologies (ART) increasingly redefine reproductive citizens in genetics terms in the midst of a regulatory policy vacuum, feminists need to look anew at unresolved questions about reproductive freedom in a market economy, while revising twentieth-century ideas about eugenics.

Beyond “Five Sexes”: Centering Intersex People and Issues in Feminist Classrooms
Ford B15
- Emi Koyama, Portland State University
- Lisa H. Weasel, Portland State University

This presentation integrates activist and academic approaches to centering the issues and lived experiences of intersex people in a feminist context when introducing the topic to students in Women’s, Gender or Queer Studies, as both feminist scholars and allies to intersex people. Sample course modules will be provided.

Tragic Pedagogies: Tragedy and the Un/Making of the Self
Amundson Hall 156

This panel looks at the relationship between tragedy, identity, and ethics in the works of three women writers and philosophers: Toni Morrison, Iris Murdoch, and Judith Butler.

- Pamela M. Hall, Emory University
  Tragedy and Identity in Morrison’s “Beloved”
  This paper examines the ways in which Morrison’s novel Beloved challenges and expands contemporary ethical conceptions of tragedy.

- Sara Poutinen, Emory University
  Tragic Hope and the Future of Feminist Politics
  This paper explores the possibility of hope within the process of risk in terms of the identity “woman” and its problematic role within feminist politics.

- Lisa Diedrich, Emory University
  Comic and Tragic: The Unselfing of Iris Murdoch
  Iris Murdoch will be remembered as a great 20th century thinker and writer. This paper takes up Murdoch’s moral philosophy and her understanding of the ethical act of “unselfing,” and read it through and along with the fact of her illness.

Migrant Farm Workers: Oral Narratives of Women Bearing Witness and Examining Relationships to the Global Economy
Ford 110
- M. Jeannie Harvey, Moderator
- Debra Blake, University of Minnesota, Morris

Stoop Labor, Pesticide Poisoning, and Labor Activism: Self-Representation in “Forged Under the Sun/Forjada bajo el sol: The Life Story of Maria Elena Lucas”

Maria Elena Lucas’s self-representation foregrounds a collective experience revealing the consequences of migrant farm work for Chicana laborers. Through her labor activism, Lucas recognizes the exploitative nature of the work and fashions her published life story as a feminist testimonio bearing witness to the injustices and oppressions suffered by a people.

- Carol E. Pearson, North Dakota State University
  Tejana Migrant Workers in the Northern Plains: The Texas-North Dakota/Minnesota Connection
  This paper focuses on the experiences of Tejanas (Mexican Texan women) as it is seen in the novels of Rolando Hinojosa, in Tomas Rivera’s play Y no se lo trago la tierra, and in the oral narratives of contemporary residents of North Dakota/Minnesota communities.

- Anne Shea, University of California, Berkeley
  I Kill Myself Out There Working and Hardly Earn Enough to Pay For a Baby-sitter: Women in Contention and Coalition in the Global Economy
  Changes in the global economy have produced not only new forms of exploitation but also new forms of resistance where women work together in coalition to develop new strategies for improving their lives. Yet, the investment in white, middle-class privilege impedes the development of a movement that would improve conditions for all working women.

Women and Science, Math and Technology: Issues of Anxiety and Engagement
Ford 115

This panel discusses how and in what ways we are engaged in analyzing and diminishing math/science anxiety and using technology to increase student learning.

- Laurie Fuller, Northeastern Illinois University
  Technology and Teaching
  This paper discusses how evaluating the use of technology, and how teaching with it can increase student learning.

- Karen Bartels, Northeastern Illinois University
  Math and Science Anxiety
  The author discusses some similarities and differences between math anxiety and science anxiety. The author presents results of a survey of students in general education science courses in which they are asked questions about their level of anxiety and sources of anxiety in learning science, and will compare the responses of women and men.

- Lisa Hollis-Sawyer, Northeastern Illinois University
  Women, Men and Math Anxiety
  The presenter discusses research on women, men, and math anxiety and relates findings from interview/survey packets from women and men NEIU undergraduates regarding math anxiety reactions.

A Roundtable with Recipients of U.S. Department of Justice Grants to Combat Violence Against Women on Campus
Ford 130
- Mary Krueger, Bowling Green State University
- Kathleen Holgersen, University of Connecticut
- Sabrina Chapman, Pennsylvania State University
- Sharon Snow, University of Vermont

Women’s Center directors discuss their initiatives to address domestic violence, sexual violence and stalking on university campuses. All of the projects have been funded by the Violence Against Women Office of the United States Department of Justice.

Cyberromance in Fact and Fiction
Amundson Hall 124
This session explores how the Internet functions in our experiences and representations of romance. Approaching cyberromance from both social science and literary perspectives panelists examine the types of romantic interactions available on-line and the modes and images of these interactions constructed in literature and film.

- Heather R. Haberman
  Cyberromance: An Exploration in Dating and Mate Selection
  This paper looks at types of interactions users experience as they engage in chat rooms, web sites and e-mail in their quests for romance and mate selection.

- Melody M. Zajdel, Montana State University
  Connections and Conceptions: Computers and Romance
  The author looks at how romance in cyberspace is being represented in literature and popular culture.

American Women Leaders and Activists
Ford B10
This panel examines the lives of historical American women leaders and activists. Topics include American Indian women leaders, racism in the suffrage movement, the nineteenth century spiritualism movement among women, and Victoria Woodhull.

- Donna Langston, Minnesota State University, Mankato
- Nayouri Comier, Minnesota State University, Mankato

Teaching About Trans in the Women’s Studies Classroom
Ford 151
Faculty will discuss the strategies we use to introduce trans issues in our Women’s Studies classes. Some of the strategies use trans issues to deconstruct the gender binary. Other strategies focus on trans experiences, including the experiences of oppression which function to maintain the gender binary.

- Margaret Duncombe, Colorado College
  Teaching Resources for Deconstructing the Gender Binary

- Charlotte Kunkel, Luther College
  Trans-cending the Limits of Gender

- John Kellermeier, SUNY, Plattsburgh

Negotiations: Teaching White Students to be Black Feminists
Amundson Hall 120
- Yolanda Hood, University of North Carolina, Asheville
- J. Andrew Thomasson, University of North Carolina, Asheville
- Kerri Jackson, University of North Carolina, Asheville
- Leah Parris, University of North Carolina, Asheville
- Meredith Licht, University of North Carolina, Asheville
- Jennifer Bennett, University of North Carolina, Asheville

This panel addresses the apprehensions of a professor and her students upon the realization that her Black Feminist Theory/Literature class was completely made up of white students. The students were concerned with the authenticity of their experience. I was concerned with the fact that African Americans were not present. This panel is about how my students and I negotiated ways to grow from our experiences.
Research Café - Women as Catalysts of Social Change: A Study of Women-Led Community Development Organizations
Amundson Hall 158
• Margaret Grieve, McAuley Institute
• Juanita Burris, Woodlawn Development Associates

This café analyzes the key but often unacknowledged role of women in the community development field and provides insights into women’s thinking about community development, the barriers they perceive to women’s leadership, and the kinds of efforts that should be undertaken to facilitate and promote their work and roles in the field. Double session, part one.

Research Café - Cooking Up Resistance to Oppression Through Food-Centered Life Histories From Latinas
Radisson - Campus
• Carole M. Counihan, Millersville University

This café examines whether cooking, feeding, or telling stories about food can be acts of resistance to race, ethnic, class, and gender oppression for Spanish American women in the San Luis Valley of Colorado.
BioTechnologies of Sex, Gender, and Fertility: Liberatory “Cures” or Oppressive Techno-Carnalities?

Panelists explore contemporary biotechnologies directed toward “healing” “pathologies” of sex, gender, and in/fertility. We discuss how Women’s Studies can critique, contest, and possibly appropriate biotechnologies in these areas of gendered embodiment.

- M. Morgan Holmes, Wilfrid Laurier University

BioTechnologies of Sex/Intersex: Deals with the Devil?

The author argues that in the age of genes and chromosomes, the androcentric conceptualization of “lack” as the defining feature of femaleness has not ceased to operate but has merely moved from macro-anatomy to the micro-anatomy of the gene.

- Ramona Christina Ilea, University of Minnesota

Biotechnologies of Gender: Coercive or Liberatory Binaries?

This paper focuses on the biotechnologies of gender as they are used in the theoretical and clinical context of the “treatment” of Gender Identity Disorder (GID) which is defined as a form of psychiatric pathology in the Diagnostic and Statistical Manual IV.

- Kathryn Pauly Morgan, University of Toronto

Women: The New Genetically-Modified Harvest? Questioning the New Biotechnologies of Women’s Fertility

This paper argues that unlike the (relatively) innocuous use of the metaphor of “harvesting” in relation to organ donation, the use of the term “harvesting” in the context of contemporary biotechnologies of women’s fertility is far more disturbing.

- Ada Cheng, DePaul University

German Genomes and Turkish Traits: Infertility Technologies, Lived Experience and Body Politics in Germany

This paper examines the relationship of individual experiences of infertility to the current national debate over the composition of the body politic in Germany. Despite the multifaceted strategies of resistance adopted by individuals to negotiate ingrained patterns of stratified reproduction, minority populations remain medically and politically marginalized.

- Lisa K. Vanderlinden, Rutgers University

Finding Women on the Net: Feminist Critiques of Websites

This paper reports on the deployment of a multimedia website designed for math and science teachers. Textual and visual representations of gender within the site are analyzed utilizing Computer-Mediated Discourse Analysis. Preliminary analysis reveals that domination of math and science education by men is replicated at multiple levels.

- Anna Martinson, Indiana University

The author explores Japanese womens’ group websites. This study implies the Internet as a tool to raise women’s voice, and to make women’s activism outside the “mainstream.”

- Junko Moriyasu, SUNY Buffalo

This roundtable discussion focuses on our success using relational/cultural theory as a model for recruiting students to facilitate small groups.

The Hidden Woman of the Heart and The Power of Women's Creative Fire

Ford 127
- Margaret Mary, The Mother Heart Center
- Margaret Francis, The Mother Heart Center

Panelists draw from eight major religions the inspiration for the profile and a vision for the women of the New Millennium. It is time to network with the saints and sages from both east and west, above and below to make real constructive change for liberty for all.

From Alix to Ani: The Impact of "Women's Music" From the 1970s to the 1990s

Ford 150

This panel provides a comparative look at the impact of "women's music" in the 1970s and the 1990s. Panelists explore how "women's music" offers an outlet for women to affirm their experiences and identities outside of the mainstream images of femininity.

- Deborah A. Richards, Radcliffe Institute, Panel Chair
- Bonnie J. Morris, George Washington University

Women's Music Festivals as Lesbian History

For over 25 years, the politics and artists emerging from regional "women's music" festivals have played key roles in American lesbian culture and identity. How do we analyze festival culture?

- Alix Dobkin

The History, Evolution and Influence of Women's Music

The presenter describes the experience, evolution and impact of "women's music" from before its beginnings in the early 1970s to the present.

- Ginger Davidson, Texas Woman's University

A Girl and Her Guitar: The Political Consciousness of Ani DiFranco and Her Music

The presenter looks at Ani DiFranco and her music as a symbol of feminist/woman-centered music—music made by, for and about women.

Writing on the Body: Girls and the Performative Space

This paper analyzes the performative resistance of "girl" bands and performers, focusing on the riot grrls.

Research Café - Exploring On-line Feminism: An Internet Research Café

Radisson - Campus
- Tracy Kennedy, York University

The presenter’s intent is to discuss feminist projects of research being completed through the use of New Information Technology. Specifically, participants may discuss feminist websites, methodological issues of researching women on-line, empowering women through the Internet and so forth. Discussants are encouraged to reveal how the Internet is used to express feminism or how the Internet is effective in managing and negotiating feminism in the new age of technoculture.

Space, Place, and Urban Policy: A Feminist Interpretation
In a feminist interpretation of approaches to reducing U.S. urban poverty, we apply concepts of space, place, and community to policymakers' goals, strategies, language, and decision-making. By addressing values of place we will engage power issues and marginalized groups' priorities.

- Margaret Wehrer, Syracuse University

Confronting Racism in the Welfare System: One Welfare Rights Group's Experience
This paper offers an ethnographic description and framing analysis of one local welfare rights organization's efforts to challenge racist attitudes by local Department of Social Services officials. The author analyzes the welfare rights group's use of frames to convey their antiracist message without alienating DSS officials.

- Pat Boling, Purdue University

Feminist Comparative Analysis of Family Policies
This paper explores ways of making feminist sense of family support policies and welfare state regimes in several OECD countries. The author then proposes and applies a framework for comparative feminist analysis of family and labor market policies and politics in the US, Japan, France, Sweden, and Germany.

Cybersubjectivities: Virtual Gender and Configurations of Bodies and Identities on the Internet
Amundson 240
In keeping with the theme of "technofeminism," this panel analyzes how virtual reality affects our ideas about the body and the self, gender, race and sexuality.

- Helen J. Burgess, University of British Columbia

Managing the Other "E" in e-business and the Other "I" in Internet: Women's Experiences as the Driver of Emotion and Imagination Skills in Future Workplaces
Creativity and trust lie at the core of future skills for e-business and internet futures and this presentation suggests how women are well placed to capitalize on their assets in these areas.

- David McKie, University of Waikato

Real and Virtual Journeys of Compassionate Action

Electronic Pedagogy: Teaching Literature by Women Writers of Color Using Voices From the Gaps
Ford B10
- Ebony Adams, University of Minnesota
- Sonja Thomas, University of Minnesota

Voices From the Gaps is a literary web site dedicated to women writers of color. A pedagogical tool used in conjunction with literature and composition courses, Voices offers a place for students to publish their own original biographical and literary critical work about the authors they are studying.
Toward a Third Wave Feminist Agenda for Scholarship and Activism

Ford 115

Third wave feminist scholars discuss issues pertinent to the emerging third wave feminist agenda—global feminism, permeation and coalition-building, renewed mobilization for the ERA, the personal and political ramifications of women's decision to marry, and the significance for feminism of the emergence of the Transgender movement.

- Alex Collier, Wells College

Global Feminism—The Next Phase of the Women’s Movement

This paper focuses on the international network of feminist N.G.O.'s which constitute the organizational base of a truly global women's movement, on the significance of the U.N. world conferences on women for this network, and the potential impact of the United States' threatened withdrawal of support for these conferences.

- Lindsey Eldred, Wells College

Why Marry?

This paper considers how contemporary women of marriageable age (the modal age range in which women marry and have children) are currently reacting to the possibility of marrying-or of not marrying.

- Katherine May, Wells College

Permeation—The High School Curriculum

The author addresses an issue of importance for feminists considering a career in teaching at the high school level—the degree to which the curriculum they will be expected to adhere to has been permeated by feminist ideas.

- Jennifer Miller, Wells College

The ERA—Once More?

This paper considers whether a case can be made for a third wave feminism to renew mobilization to secure a federal Equal Rights Amendment like the one that originally passed both Houses of Congress in 1972: "Equality of rights under the law shall not be abridged by the U.S. or by any state on account of sex."

- Keli Nielsen, Wells College

Permeation and Coalition-Building—Feminism and Mormon Women

This paper analyzes the relationship between contemporary Mormon women and feminism, looking at the ways feminism has permeated Mormon women's culture and exploring possibilities for feminism building coalitions with religious women.

- Kim Van Norman, Wells College

Transgender and Feminism

This paper explores the implications for feminism of the emerging Transgender movement, offering a broad definition of "transgender," and suggesting ways for a rapprochement between feminism and transgender activism.

Space, Place and Region: Empirical Reports From Feminist Geography

Ford 130

- Mary E. Thomas, University of Minnesota
- Ann Oberhauser, West Virginia University
- Michael Lansing, University of Minnesota

Most historians of the U.S. West place their projects in regional settings or frontier contexts. These are two ways of doing western history - thinking of the West as a place set apart from the rest of the nation, or thinking of Westerning as a process defining region dominate historiography. Feminist geography suggests that places are what a person or group of people think they are, that numerous places can inhabit the same space, and that places are created by social and economic relationships. Feminist geography offers a way for historians of the western U.S. to reformulate the question at the very heart of the discipline.

Aerobics for the Mind III: Even More Exercises for the Introductory Women's Studies Classroom

Ford 127

- John Kellermeier, Plattsburgh State University
- Dian Ulner

In this hands-on workshop, we will demonstrate a variety of exercises developed for the introductory Women's Studies classroom. The exercises are designed to get students involved and thinking about such issues as oppression, racism, classism, homophobia, sexual orientation, etc. Participants will be provided with a packet of handouts for the exercises discussed.

Power, Sexuality, and Rape: Issues From Cambodia, Arab Cultures, and Russia

Amundson 162

- Wendy Hume, University of North Dakota, Moderator
- Janet Elise Johnson, Indiana University

Examining Russia's Transition to Woman-Friendliness

Drawing from Kathleen B. Jones' (1990) Citizenship in a Woman-Friendly World, I propose studying the issue of rape to evaluate Russia's transition to woman-friendliness, a polity where women have full and equal citizenship to men. I argue that Russia's transition from institutions antithetical to liberal democracy provides a unique window into processes that include or exclude women.

- Lana J. Lott, California State University, Long Beach

The Dark Side of Honor: Power and Sexuality in Arab Culture

Many Arab and Arab-American women are threatened with murder at the hands of a brother, father or cousin for sexual impropriety, including the "offense" of being raped. This paper examines how the social concept of honor is constructed and manipulated in societies that engage in "honor killings."
Welcome to the Rape Camp: Pornography, Prostitution and the Internet in Cambodia

The Rape Camp was a live bondage sex show on the internet. This case contains many forms of sexual exploitation and the role the internet is playing in globalizing the sexual exploitation of women. The economic policies that protect the sex industry and promote free trade on the internet will be discussed.

Salary Negotiation for Women in Academe

Amundson 124

• Suzanna Rose, Florida International University

The salary negotiation is one of the most significant financial deals of one’s career, yet women in academe may have little preparation for it. This workshop addresses why women need to learn to negotiate; what “homework” to do to prepare; how to conduct job offers and counteroffers; and ways to enhance one’s future negotiating position.

Summer Solstice

7:00 - 8:00 PM
Corner of Beacon and Harvard Streets
(100 yards northwest of the Radisson)
This plenary will explore how feminists address the cultural and material politics of global survival and struggle. What is the current dialogue emerging between feminists in different countries regarding transnational interactions, world trade, global technologies, and political alliances? How does feminist theory in global studies, anthropology, and geography, and their relation to indigenous theories and practices, advance worldwide liberation movements?
Kamala Kempadoo

Kamala Kempadoo is Acting Director of the Centre for Gender and Development Studies at the University of the West Indies in Jamaica for 2000/2001, and Assistant Professor in the Women’s Studies Program at the University of Colorado at Boulder. With a Ph.D. in Sociology, and a specialization in Race and Ethnic Studies, she teaches courses on gender, race and class, Third World and postcolonial feminisms, and women and global development. Her research over the past decade has focused on the global sex trade and women’s sexual agency. She has also been active for several years in Black/migrant/women of color movements in the Netherlands, USA and the Caribbean, and more recently in the Global Alliance Against Trafficking in Women (GAATW) based in Thailand. She is editor of Global Sex Workers: Rights, Resistance and Redefinition (1998), and Sun, Sex and Gold: Tourism and Sex Work in the Caribbean (1999) and is currently working on a manuscript on prostitution and race in the Caribbean. In 1995, she was the recipient of a Rockefeller Research Fellowship.

Recuperations and Revisionings: Transnational Feminism in Action

In the face of the new global political economy and the intensified cultural and technological onslaughts on material conditions that sustain women around the world, feminists in the USA are once again challenged to produce theories, and to engage in politics, that address global gendered inequalities and that support (women’s) liberation movements. These new feminisms - transnational, postcolonial, Third World - recuperate and often foreground principles that have informed feminism for many decades. One such principle is the grounding of feminist theory in praxis - a praxis shaped by multiple axes of domination, resistances, and everyday struggles. The focus of this presentation is on the transnational work on and about the global sex trade. Drawing on the politics of sex workers’ movements in Asia, Africa, Latin America and the Caribbean, and recent feminist theorizing on sex work, Kempadoo proposes that it is the material politics of survival for women and men in particular global locations that offers feminism possibilities for building transnational conversations, alliances, and theories critical to challenging the contemporary politics of globalization.
Cindi Katz

Cindi Katz is Professor of Geography in Environmental Psychology and Women's Studies at the Graduate Center of the City University of New York. Her work concerns social reproduction and the production of space, place and nature; children and the environment, and the consequences of global economic restructuring for everyday life. She has published widely on these themes as well as on social theory and the politics of knowledge in edited collections and in journals such as Society and Space, Social Text, SIGNS, Feminist Studies, Annals of the Association of American Geographers, and Antipode. With Janice Monk, she co-edited Full Circles: Geographies of Gender over the Life Course, which explores the extent to which women's lives are defined by particular places and spaces and the very different lives and expectations of women in post-industrial and developing countries. She recently completed her monograph Disintegrating Developments: Global Economic Restructuring and Children's Everyday Lives, which should be published by late 2002, and she is currently working on a project called Retheorizing Childhood and completing a text on fieldwork.

Topographies, Counter Topographies, and the Development of Internationalist Feminisms

This paper reframes the discussion on globalization through a materialist focus on social reproduction and develops the notion of 'topography' as a means of examining the intersecting effects and material consequences of globalized capitalist production. By looking at the material social practices through which people reproduce themselves on a daily and generational basis and through which the social relations and material bases of capitalism are renewed, we can better expose the costs of globalization but also the connections between vastly different sites of production. Focusing on social reproduction allows us to address questions of the making, maintenance and exploitation of a fluidly differentiated labor force; the productions (and destructions) of nature; and the means to create alternative geographies of opposition to globalized capitalism. In her presentation, Katz discusses topography as a political logic and methodology that at once recognizes the materiality of cultural and social difference, but calls forth desperately needed transnational solidarities to contain and counter the multiple forces of domination and exploitation associated with globalizing capitalism and its entailments. The latter is understood through the notion of "counter topography," and it is hoped that this idea might be useful in reshaping interdisciplinary feminist scholarship and developing a more internationalist feminist praxis.
Riffat Hassan

Riffat Hassan is one of the pioneers of feminist theology in the context of the Islamic tradition - an area in which she has been engaged since 1974. She has been extensively involved in interreligious dialogue with Jews, Christians and Muslims, with a particular focus on human rights in religious traditions. In February 1999, she founded The International Network for the Rights of Female Victims of Violence in Pakistan, a non-profit organization with a worldwide membership that has played a noteworthy role in highlighting the issue of violence against girls and women, particularly with reference to "crimes of honor." Born in a Saiyed Muslim family living in Lahore, Pakistan, Hassan was educated at an Anglican missionary school before proceeding to higher studies at St. Mary's College, University of Durham, England. Her numerous writings include Muhammad Iqbal, On Women in Islam, Islam and Interreligious Dialogue, Human Rights in Islam, Contemporary Islam, Peace Education in Islam, and Are Human Rights Compatible with Islam? She is currently chair of the Religious Studies program at the University of Louisville.

Muslim Women's Empowerment: Social Transformation through Education

Perhaps the most critical as well as volatile issue being debated in the Muslim world is about the rights and role of women in Muslim societies and communities. While women's organizations and activists are both visible and vocal in many Muslim countries, there is still great resistance to recognizing the autonomous personhood of women and seeing them as equal to men. Through developing the discipline of "feminist theology" in the context of Islam, and her work in Muslim ethics and human rights, Riffat Hassan has devised a methodology and strategy which could be used by millions of Muslim women for their internal and external empowerment. In her presentation Hassan will be sharing her salient research findings as well as her experiences as a major speaker in the U.N. World Conferences (Cairo, 1994; Beijing 1995) and with grass-roots organizations.

Welcome NWSA participants!

Amazon Bookstore started on the front porch of a living collective in 1970. Over the years we have grown to be one of the largest feminist bookstores in the country. In the summer of 2000, we moved into our new home in Chrysalis a Center for Women. We now have a coffee shop and a beautiful space stocked with books, music, cards and gifts by, for and about women. Stop by our table at the conference for a map and directions.

Special Reception for NWSA Conference participants

Friday June 15, 7:30 - 9:30 pm

$29.95, cloth, 0-87351-337-1
$14.95, paper, 0-87351-338-X

THE GIRLS ARE COMING
Peggie Carlson
“Carlson tells sometimes shocking, sometimes funny anecdotes of her efforts to break new ground for working class women.” — ForeWord
$24.95, cloth, 0-87351-375-4
$15.95, paper, 0-87351-376-2

IN THE COMPANY OF WOMEN
Voices from the Women’s Movement
Bonnie Watkins & Nina Rothschild
An oral history of the contemporary women’s movement, these compellingly personal stories describe the movement that has transformed American life from the 1960s to the present. Foreword by Gloria Steinem
$29.95, cloth, 0-87351-328-2
$16.95, paper, 0-87351-329-0

SHAPING MY FEMINIST LIFE
A Memoir
Kathleen Ridder
“Ridder tells her story in a characteristically strong voice. From the first page we hear a woman speak who has no hesitation in addressing her readers.” — Jill Ker Conway
$24.95, cloth, 0-87351-364-9

GENTLE WARRIORS
Clara Ueland and the Minnesota Struggle for Woman Suffrage
Barbara Stuhler
“This is an admirable book . . . reminds us that the lesser-known midwestern women were just as instrumental to the success of suffrage as were nationally known women.” — The Annals of Iowa
$29.95, cloth, 0-87351-317-7
$15.95, paper, 0-87351-318-5

HONOR THE GRANDMOTHERS
Dakota and Lakota Women Tell Their Stories
Sarah Penman, ed.

$14.95, paper, 0-87351-385-1

PACKINGHOUSE DAUGHTER
Cheri Register
“Register recounts the historic 1959 union strike against the Wilson & Co. meat-packing house in Albert Lea, Minn. Blended with the story of her painful break from her working-class childhood (her Ph.D. stand for ‘packinghouse daughter,’ she explains), this is a first-class memoir, a rousing history lesson.” — Andy Steiner, Utne Reader
$24.95, cloth, 0-87351-391-6

WOMEN OF MINNESOTA
Selected Biographical Essays
Barbara Stuhler & Gretchen Kreuter, eds.

The Heart Too Long Suppressed
A Chronicle of Mental Illness
Carol Heald
Foreword by Thomas S. Szasz, M.D.
"One day we may look back on previous journeys like Heald's and recognize that certain people were forerunners toward the next stage of heart and mind violation. Carol Heald is a heroine herself: this tale of transcendence makes clear."
—Gail Godwin, author of Heart: A Personal Journey Through Its Myths and Meanings
$24.95 cloth

The Long Prison Journey
of Leslie Van Houten
Life Beyond the Wall
Karlene Faith
"I would like never to hear the Charles Manson story again. Yet author and scholar, Karlene Faith asks, 'Do you think the young women who were spiritually abducted by Manson should be treated the same as Manson?' . . . Testing my feminism, she invites me to look at the gender politics of crime and punishment and at the life of Leslie Van Houten."
—Holly Near
$24.95 cloth

Nurses at the Front
Writing the Wounds of the Great War
Edited by Margaret R. Higonnet
Ellen N. La Motte and Mary Borden are two of the best-known American nurses who wrote about their experiences working in the same field hospital on the Western Front during World War I. Now representative selections from their classic texts are published for the first time in one volume.

WOMEN and INTERNATIONAL HUMAN RIGHTS LAW
Edited by Kelly D. Askin and Dorean M. Koenig
The most comprehensive treatise ever written on the human rights of women globally, nationally, and municipally by more than 110 of the leading authorities worldwide! 2000.

"... the editors have compiled a comprehensive treatment of the development and enforcement of human rights law as it pertains to women. The more than one hundred contributing authors make these volumes into a tour d'horizon, ranging from discussion of the historical development of human rights instruments to selected regional and cultural issues. The contributors include leading scholars and practitioners familiar to the American legal community, as well as others from around the world whose analyses, particularly on regional and cultural issues, do much to enrich this compendium's already vibrant collection of essays."
Dorinda G. Dallmeyer, The American Journal of International Law, Vol. 94

"This massive work covers a broad topic in a highly focused way. ... The authors are well-informed, representing the "cutting edge" of those informed about this rapidly changing topic. ..."

ANNOUNCING UCLA'S GRADUATE PROGRAM IN WOMEN'S STUDIES
Over one hundred associated faculty from twenty-two departments and eight professional schools provide interdisciplinary instruction and guidance. Students take courses offered by the Women's Studies Program as well as graduate courses in other UCLA departments and professional schools.

Students devise their own area of specialization in conjunction with Women's Studies/UCLA faculty. Possible specialities are: women's health, feminist theory, feminist jurisprudence, multicultural feminisms, women's history, women and work, feminist film studies, women and the arts, women in a global context and feminist approaches to literature.

THREE CREDENTIALS ARE OFFERED:
- CONCENTRATION
- MASTER OF ARTS (MA)
- DOCTOR OF PHILOSOPHY (Ph.D.)

The UCLA Women's Studies Program invites applications from students with a BA or equivalent. The application deadline for the 2001-2002 academic year is December 15, 2001.

This best-selling reader on men and masculinity, edited by two of the most prominent researchers on men, contains the most current articles on masculinity available.

The authors explore how working class men, men of color, gay men, older men, younger men, and boys construct different versions of masculinity. One reviewer says, "This reader does a remarkable job of showing the interconnectedness of race, class, and gender ... It also makes clear that any discussion of 'men's lives' of necessity involves an understanding of the social roles of both men and women, and of gender inequality."

WOMEN AND THE POLITICS OF CLASS
by Johanna Brenner

"Combines analytic rigor with moral passion ..."
— LINDA GORDON

WOMEN AND THE POLITICS OF CLASS draws on historical explorations of labor and working-class politics to present ground-breaking theory on the intersections of gender, race, ethnicity, sexuality, and class.

UNDER THE RAJ
Prostitution in Colonial Bengal
by Sumanta Banerjee

UNDER THE RAJ explores the world of the prostitute, seeking to understand the culture of the trade and its impact on society, in the changing reality of nineteenth century Bengal. Sumanta Banerjee gives voice to the prostitutes themselves, from which we hear their songs, letters, and writings, collected and reproduced from both oral tradition and printed sources.

Volume 27, 2001

Volume 27, no. 1
FS presents two special clusters. One, on women and the Middle-East, includes an exploration of 20th-century representations of 'Aisha Abi Bakr and their influence on discourses about women's biographies and cultural identity; an examination of feminist orientalism in the International Alliance of Women (1911-1950); an investigation of state-enforced virginity examinations of women in Turkey; and an appreciation of the work of Egyptian artist, Huda Lutfi. One commentary observes the relationships among power, representations of identity, and nationalism in Iran; and another assesses the impact of Edward Said's Orientalism on feminism in the Middle East. The second cluster of articles focus on feminist activism in the 1960s and early 1970s. Included are an analysis of queer theory, lesbian separatism, and radical feminism; a reassessment of African-American feminist activities in that period; and a look at radical feminist history through a study of a film about Valerie Solanas. Film is also the topic of one of our review essays which focus on feminist filmmaking and film-watching; the other looks at women's activism and democracy in the era of globalization, while a commentary provides a first-hand account of growing up in Mao's China. Poetry and art complement the issue.

Volume 27, no. 2

Volume 27, no. 3
History is foregrounded in a group of articles as we close the volume year; an exploration of how discourses of theatricality and madness were integral to Victorian society's notions of femininity and authenticity; an analysis of the centrality of gender in the response to Rachel Carson's Silent Spring; an investigation of the efforts in the 1950s and 1960s to remove lesbian teachers from the Florida public school system; and a review essay assessing recent gender/sexuality/race/nation scholarship in early nation and 19th-century U.S. literature. Moving to the contemporary—an article explores the cultural representation of lesbianism in the 1990s; another article provides an international look at feminist pedagogy with a first-hand account of teaching women's narratives in New Zealand; and a commentary analyzes feminist interdisciplinary work and its reception. An essay reviews recent feminist ethnography in the Caribbean and Latin America, while an art essay focuses on Caribbean relocation and dislocation. And of course, no issue is complete without fiction and poetry.

THE POLITICS OF WOMEN'S STUDIES
Testimony from Thirty Founding Mothers
Edited by Florence Howe
Introduction by Mari Jo Buhle

With original essays by Marilyn J. Boxer, Nona Glazer, Yolanda Moses, Kathryn Kish Sklar, and many others, this groundbreaking collection of essays "discusses the problems women's studies programs were designed to address, the barriers faced, the successful strategies developed," notes Booklist.

EARTHWORK
Women and Environments
Women's Studies Quarterly 29, nos. 1 & 2
(Spring/Summer 2001)
Edited by Diane Hope with Vandana Shiva

Offering historical background to today's ecofeminism, Earthwork reveals how women have redefined environmentalism. Often the first to be affected by environmental problems, women are at the forefront of rethinking economic and government policy in this area. Featuring poetry and prose, syllabi and course descriptions, this essential issue of WSQ reports on women's work in relation to the environment, and is an excellent resource for teachers, students, and activists alike.

MARY RITTER BEARD: A Sourcebook
Edited by Ann J. Lane

Mary Ritter Beard can be considered the founding mother of the field of American women's history. A visionary thinker, Beard held the firm conviction that women had a far greater impact on history than male historians had ever recognized. Ann J. Lane's essential selection includes full headnotes, a 70-page critical and biographical essay, and a new preface. Mary Ritter Beard: A Sourcebook restores Beard to her well-deserved place at the core of early-twentieth-century feminist history and thought.

WHAT WE HOLD IN COMMON
An Introduction to Working-Class Studies
Edited by Janet Zandy

Working-class history and literature have too often been ignored, have remained invisible in most texts, and have been unavailable to students and teachers. Now Janet Zandy brings together—in poetry, fiction, memoir, and song—the voices of working-class people, with a strong emphasis on the voices of working-class women. Course syllabi and curriculum materials offer specific strategies and resources for the classroom.
