NWSA 28th ANNUAL CONFERENCE
JUNE 28 - JULY 1, 2007, PHEASANT RUN RESORT, ST. CHARLES, IL
NWSA’s 30th Anniversary Raffle!

Round-trip airfare and 3-day weekend for 2 at the woman-owned Brick Path Bed and Breakfast in Berkeley, CA from October 5–8, 2007 and a gift certificate to Chez Panisse, the Alice Waters restaurant where the organic food revolution began. Winners will stay in the secluded East Meets West cottage with a private patio. Your day will begin with a gourmet continental breakfast featuring seasonal, mostly organic fruits and juices, neighborhood baked goods, and homemade jams. Solano Avenue is a short block away from The Brick Path Bed and Breakfast. Long considered one of Berkeley’s most desirable destinations, Solano Ave combines cozy neighborhood ambiance with convenient services and a wide selection of innovative cafes and restaurants, shops, bookstores, and chic clothing stores. The BART system easily allows you to explore downtown San Francisco.

Chez Panisse opened its doors in 1971, started by Alice Waters and an assortment of friends who wanted to do things much as they would be done at a dinner party at home. Alice Waters and Chez Panisse have become convinced that the best-tasting food is organically grown and harvested in ways that are ecologically sound, by people who are taking care of the land for future generations.

Get Your Tickets at www.NWSA.org

NWSA will be selling only 1,000 tickets for this raffle featuring prizes that reflect our feminist commitments and vision for the future. You could be the lucky winner, but don’t wait—we expect the tickets to sell out quickly!

Prizes will be awarded at the NWSA conference on Sunday, July 1 at 10 AM in the exhibit hall. You do not have to be present to win. Raffle tickets will be sold for $30 each in honor of the NWSA 30th anniversary or 4 tickets for $100.

For more information see www.nwsa.org or contact Maurice Hamington, Fund Raising Chair at hamington@earthlink.net

Dear Colleague:

Welcome to the 30th anniversary conference of the National Women's Studies Association! This year's conference, with the theme of "Past Debates, Present Possibilities, Future Feminisms: A Women's and Gender Studies Conference Celebrating 30 Years of NWSA," promises to be even larger and more varied than in previous years. We are pleased to welcome Sandra Cisneros as our featured conference speaker. Other innovations this year are the 30th anniversary student pre-conference, organized by and for students; an all-conference tribute to This Bridge Called My Back: Writings by Radical Women of Color; individual mentoring sessions for those seeking career advice; the largest ever number of participants in the Women of Color Leadership Project, which now includes the Women's Centers Committee; and a wide range of activities for those interested in girls' studies. Please join me in thanking the National Conference Committee, the Local Organizing Committee, the proposal reviewers, and the national office staff for all their hard work to make this possible.

You are joining us at a transformative time in the history of this organization. Not only is this our 30th conference, but it comes at the end of a very exciting year, made possible by generous financial support from the Ford Foundation. Now, almost one year into the three-year grant and with some additional Ford funding, we have held retreats for the Women of Color Leadership Project and Women of Color Caucus. The strategic planning process included a meeting with the Governing Council in January and committee meetings both in Washington, D.C., and via teleconference, plus much work on the part of our executive director, Allison Kimmich. We presented the plan to the Governing Council at this year's meeting and will be working in the months ahead to implement it. At the end, we hope to have an even more stable organization and an organization ready to meet the challenges of the years ahead.

To do this, we will need all your assistance. If you are new to NWSA or to our conference, please make yourself known to us. If this is not your first meeting, please make an extra effort to reach out to new members and make them feel welcome. Take the time to learn about our many task forces, interest groups, and caucuses and to attend the regional meetings to see how you can become more involved in NWSA. Come to the Membership Assembly meeting on Friday evening and make sure the members of the Delegate Assembly hear your views.

We must grow NWSA to continue to be successful and to be financially stable when the Ford Foundation funding ends. Please invite your colleagues and friends to join us and please support us as your resources permit. At this conference, we have a very special raffle underway as a fund-raiser and also want to thank those NWSA life members, past presidents, Governing Council members, and others who have made financial contributions to mark this milestone anniversary.

Most importantly, we hope you will enjoy this conference. Meet new friends, attend invigorating sessions, and partake of the numerous recreation opportunities here at Pheasant Run and the entertainment and traditional dance that are part of the conference. Then, when you join us again next year in Cincinnati, please bring your friends with you. We're glad to see you here and want to see you back for many years to come.

Sincerely,

Barb Howe

VISCERAL MAPPINGS: TRANSDIASPORIC ART PRACTICES

http://www.transdiaspora.org

Curator: Pritika Chowdhry

The Dellora A. Norris Cultural Arts Center

1040 Dunham Road, St. Charles, IL 60174

June 14 - July 14, 2007

Reception: Saturday, June 30, 6pm - 9pm

Panel Presentation:

Saturday, June 30, 9:30am - 10:45am

(Exhibit catalog available: NWSA members special price $12).

The 2007 Transdiaspora exhibit titled "Visceral Mappings: Transdiasporic Art Practices" exhibit positions the intimate geography of the body as a metaphor for displacement and the domestic geography of the home as a metaphor for the nation. The exhibit brings together artists of African, Jewish, Native, Chicana, Italian, Egyptian, Taiwanese, Indonesian, Indian, Greek and Korean diasporic origins as well as American artists of non-traditional diasporic and exilic locations such as the LGBTQ community. This exhibit is staged as a highly experimental installation to create an immersive domestic environment.

I believe that the story of contemporary American art is incomplete without understanding and conceptualizing its multi-diasporic and inter-diasporic nature. Therefore, I have structured a rigorous definition for the term "Transdiaspora"©. These theoretical formulations have become the basis for the Transdiaspora Project (http://www.transdiaspora.org), a series of annual art exhibits and related publications.

The "Transdiaspora" paradigm for curating art exhibits makes transverse and horizontal connections between artists of minority communities as well as from majoritarian populations. By taking a multi-diasporic and multi-ethnic approach, Transdiaspora exhibits emphasize continuities across multiple ethnic groups. Transdiaspora exhibits also engage with deterritorialized diasporas such as the Queer Diasporas so as to include artists from the majoritarian populations of non-traditional diasporic and exilic locations. These exhibits thus enable and facilitate an inter-diasporic, hybridic dialog between artists of all communities.

This exhibit was first held in Madison, Wisconsin for the UW Women's Studies Conference, from April 20-22, in the Pyle Center. The exhibit was very well-received and a larger and expanded version of the exhibit is now traveling to the National Women's Studies Conference in St. Charles, IL. It is our honor to present the "Visceral Mappings: Transdiasporic Art Practices" exhibit to this national audience of scholars, activists and artists.

Artist and independent curator, Pritika Chowdhry is a recipient of the prestigious Edith and Sinaiko Fellowship for a Woman in the Arts and Madison Arts Commission's Project grant. Pritika's own art practice is informed by the interrelation of psychological, geographical and cultural dislocations. Born and brought up in India, Pritika moved to the U.S. in 1999.

Dear Colleague,

I am delighted to welcome you to the National Women’s Studies Association 28th annual meeting.

Our conference theme, “Past Debates, Present Possibilities, Future Feminisms: A Women’s and Gender Studies Conference Celebrating 30 Years of NWSA” offers an expansive platform for examining current scholarship, pedagogy, and activism underway in the field.

The conference will include some new features this year. A Tribute Panel celebrates important texts that have set new directions for the field, and we are pleased to inaugurate this session with a tribute to This Bridge Called My Back: Writings by Radical Women of Color. Our Engaging Scholarship speakers will discuss how their work articulates, engages with, and theorizes key issues in the field of women’s and gender studies and in today’s world. Session participants will then explore the various themes and issues raised by the remarks in more detail.

The conference program will also include a series of scheduled networking events for various constituencies within NWSA; check the program book to find scheduled meetings of interest. Finally, the exhibit area will include performances and poster session presentations. These features are all intended to create an intellectually engaging conference experience for attendees, offering many opportunities for participants to expand their professional networks and push their thinking in new directions.

When the conference concludes I will look forward to hearing your thoughts on these offerings, and your ideas for future conferences. I am also eager to share in conversations that will emerge here about the state of our field. In today’s political climate, feminist voices, ideas, and action offer needed correctives, re-framing public debates that frequently turn on gender myths and assumptions.

Once again, welcome to St. Charles, and join us in celebrating 30 years of NWSA!

Best wishes,

NWSA GOVERNANCE / CONFERENCE INFORMATION

The annual conference is NWSA's largest programmatic initiative. Many conference responsibilities rest with elected officers and governing council members, committee chairs and members, and other volunteers from various constituencies within NWSA. The Association invites its members to volunteer for leadership positions— for committee membership, to strengthen regional Associations, to join and energize sub-groups within NWSA. NWSA is the leading national organization dedicated to advancing feminist education, scholarship, service, and community activism: you can play a part in shaping its future.

NWSA is a 501(c)3 organization as classified by the IRS. The Association is prohibited from engaging in political activities in order to maintain its tax-exempt non-profit status. While it is far from certain that NWSA members and the IRS would agree on the meaning of the phrase “political activity,” NWSA must restrict its external advocacy or actions to those that clearly fall within the rubric of its educational mission. Although NWSA may be prohibited from engaging in political activity, this does not restrict the speech or action of NWSA’s membership. Persons or groups wishing to enlist the advocacy of NWSA’s membership may circulate petitions at the conference and/or may purchase mailing labels from the national office in order to communicate directly with members. Persons or groups outside of NWSA may not solicit conference attendees for financial support.

THE NWSA MISSION AND GOVERNING COUNCIL

The National Women’s Studies Association mission statement states that the organization “seeks to promote the creation of a just world, free from all the ideologies and structures that oppress and exploit some for the advantage of others, in which all persons can develop to their fullest potential. In pursuit of these ends, the organization supports and promotes feminist teaching, learning, research, and service, wherever these occur, that seeks to understand and change oppressive structures and ideologies.”

This is a large and even global mission that can only be realized when members from a variety of experiences, backgrounds, and perspectives volunteer to serve the Association and the women's studies community in all its diversity. The current officers and members of the Governing Council welcome suggestions and offers to help with the work of advancing the Association’s mission.

MEMBERSHIP INFORMATION

Membership in the National Women’s Studies Association is open to anyone interested in promoting women’s studies education in the community, schools, colleges and universities. 2007 membership dues range from $17 for students, and then a sliding scale ranging from $40 to $180 for standard individual membership. Institutional membership ranges on a sliding scale from $175 to $500.

NWSA GOVERNANCE STRUCTURE

The Governing Council (GC) serves as the Corporate Board of Directors of NWSA. The GC consists of 5 officers who shall be elected by the general membership, standing committee chairs elected by the general membership, seven members of the Delegate Assembly Steering Committee, and the executive director, the editor of the NWSA Journal, the editor of NWSAction, the current on-site Conference Chair, and the past president, who are ex-officio, non-voting members. The GC meets twice a year, in January and in June—both before and after the conference—to oversee the Association’s finances and insure that NWSA programs are compatible with its mission and strategic plan. The executive committee, comprised of elected officers of NWSA, functions on behalf of the GC between the June and January meetings.

The purpose of the Membership Assembly is to provide all members with an opportunity to identify and discuss issues of import to the operation and mission of NWSA, and to communicate issues of concern to the Delegate Assembly and Governing Council. The Membership Assembly will consider and vote upon proposed recommendations directed towards fostering and improving the organization.

Under the NWSA constitution, the Delegate Assembly shall be the principal policy-making body of NWSA.

REGIONAL WOMEN’S STUDIES ASSOCIATIONS

Regional women’s studies associations exist to strengthen networks among the approximately 900 women’s studies programs, departments, women’s centers and their affiliated community organizations. At the regional sessions you will elect your regional... representative who goes to the Delegate Assembly and also have an opportunity to network with neighboring regional colleagues, students and activists.

CONSTITUENCY GROUPS

Constituency groups have a long history in NWSA, beginning with the founding conference in 1977; they reflect the desire of some NWSA members to affiliate in subgroups, and highlight our diversity of identities.

CAUCUSES designate groups that are under-represented within society or NWSA as an organization. NWSA has acted from the beginning on the belief that members whose identities, voices, and points of view may be numerically under-represented within NWSA might not find an organizational base or be able to make themselves heard without caucus representation.

TASK FORCES are oriented toward an issue or problem relevant to the policies and principles of NWSA and women's studies that can be solved through action. Task Forces, however, do not require representation within the governance structure, and can accomplish their projects without its intervention.

INTEREST GROUPS are oriented toward those who wish to meet around a common scholarly interest. Area Interest Groups accomplish their goals primarily through the development of regular conference programming.

SPECIFIC ETHICAL STANDARDS AND CODE OF CONDUCT

Nondiscrimination:

NWSA members/staff may not engage in discrimination in the organization based on age; gender; race; ethnicity; national origin; religion; sexual orientation; disability; health conditions; marital, domestic, or parental status; or any other applicable basis proscribed by law.

Harassment:

NWSA members/staff may not engage in harassment of any person, including members, supervisees, or employees. Harassment occurs when someone's actions or words, based on the relevant grounds (e.g., gender, race, sexuality), are unwelcome and violate another person's dignity or create an environment that is intimidating, hostile, degrading, humiliating, or offensive.

Sexual harassment may include unwelcome sexual advances, requests for sexual favors, and other verbal or physical conduct of a sexual nature if that behavior negatively affects or interferes with an individual's participation in the organization, and/or creates an intimidating, hostile, or offensive work environment.

Harassment on the basis of race, color, or national origin that negatively affects or interferes with an individual's participation in the organization, and/or creates an intimidating, hostile, or offensive work environment.

Non-exploitation:

(a) Whether for personal, economic, or professional advantage, NWSA members/staff may not exploit persons over whom they work within the organization;

(b) NWSA members/staff may not directly supervise or exercise evaluative authority over any person with whom they have a sexual relationship, including students, supervisees, or employees within the context of NWSA work.

Electronic Communication:

The following guidelines should be followed when engaging in electronic communication.

1) NWSA listserves should be used for NWSA-related business only.

2) Do not send sexually explicit, offensive, demeaning, insulting or intimidating e-communications, ethnic or racial slurs, or anything that harasses or disparages others.

3) No electronic mail may be sent that is abusive or threatens the safety of a person or persons.

4) Do not send messages to people who don't need to receive them.

5) Be thoughtful about clippings and pasting others' messages in those you send.

6) Do not forward e-mail sent to you to others without the original author's permission.

7) If you receive a message sent to a list of people, do not respond needlessly to the entire list.

8) Use a professional tone in your messages.

9) Be careful when using sarcasm and humor. Your "joke" could be misunderstood.
A BRIEF (AND INCOMPLETE) HISTORY OF THE NWSA WOMEN OF COLOR CAUCUS

Participants in the 2007 NWSA Women of Color Caucus retreat discussed the central role women of color have played in NWSA history and activities, and wanted to establish a record of those contributions. Pat Washington and Nupur Chaudhuri have begun that work here.

The history of the Women of Color Caucus of the National Women's Studies Association is an inexorable and irreducible part of the history of NWSA. From the Association's first national conference in 1979 (Lawrence, Kansas)—when the Women of Color Caucus drew its first breath as the “Third World Caucus”—to the landmark 1981 Storrs Conference (“Women Respond to Racism”); to the watershed 1990 Akron Conference where over a hundred women of color and their allies walked out to protest the Association’s entrenched racism; to the “healing” presidencies of Vivien Ng and Betty Harris (1994 and 1997, respectively); to the 2000 Simmons Conference developed and delivered by the Caucus's advisor/benefactor/champion/mainstay Christina Brinkley; to the 2002 Las Vegas conference where the Women of Color Caucus and the then-newly-constituted Anti White Supremacy Task Force joined forces to agitate for the inclusion of perspectives and contributions of women of color in the Association's 25th anniversary celebration; down to the present time when the Women of Color Caucus and the Women of Color Leadership Project figure prominently in the Association's multi-year Ford Foundation capacity-building grant, the Women of Color Caucus has been a driving force within the Association.

The Caucus has benefited from the courage, persistence, and commitment of many “sturdy bridges” of all colors. Several such “bridges” are listed by name in the above highlights of Caucus history. However, there is a long succession of others, leading from the Association’s inaugural conference to the present day, and stretching well into the future.

Nupur Chaudhuri was present at the first national conference, where she recalls “many American women of color and other long time U.S. residents were ‘congratulated’ by their white peers for ‘speaking good English’ or having ‘a good grasp of the subject matter.’” Chaudhuri was elected that year as one of the Coordinating Council members of the fledgling Third World Caucus, and, in this role, she drafted guidelines for a more inclusive 1980 conference in Bloomington, as well as helped set the stage for the groundbreaking Storrs conference on racism in 1981. It was regarding the experience of women of color at this latter conference that Chela Sandoval would subsequently write, “To be ‘Third World' meant ... first, to have been de-centered from any point of power in order to be used as the negative pole against which the dominant powers can then define themselves [and] second, to be working politically to challenge the systems that keep power moving in its current patterns, thus shifting it onto new terrains....”

Sandoval’s assessment of the dialectic between “Third World” women’s status (“de-centered”) and their purpose (“shifting power ... onto new terrains”) captures the essence of what the Women of Color Caucus has been historically and what it strives to be today.

The Women of Color Caucus continues to offer our Association a singular opportunity to look within our own ranks to discover ways to promote broader inclusion of historical, social, cultural, political and economical perspectives of racialized women in the United States (and abroad). We do this in a variety of ways with a variety of supporters and allies. Recent examples include our work with Program Administration and Development to create the Women of Color Leadership Project, our work with the NWSA Journal to develop a cluster of articles by emerging and established women of color scholars, our work with ABAFAZI Journal to fund a women of color student essay award (subsequently expanded to several awards through the generous contributions of donors), our work with the Anti White Supremacy Task Force to present an annual “Stop Dreaming/Keep Working” workshop, and numerous other endeavors.

NWSA can be proud of this history of women of color, allies, and social justice advocates who have openly challenged, critiqued, and moved the Association to live up to its mission.
ABOUT THE WOCLP:

The WoCLP is designed to increase the number of women of color students and faculty within the field of women's studies and, consequently, to have an impact on the levels of participation and power by women of color in the PA&D, NWSA, and in the field of women's studies as a whole.

Women of color in women's studies, ethnic studies, or related fields may apply if they aspire to leadership within women's studies or NWSA.

Applicants may include graduate students, faculty, and current program administrators who wish to be more involved in program or Association leadership.

HOW TO APPLY FOR THE 2008 WOCLP

Applicants may include graduate students, faculty, and current program administrators who wish to be more involved in program or Association leadership.

All applicants must be available to attend the Program Administration and Development or Women's Center Pre-Conferences on the Thursday before the general conference. Women of color in women's studies, ethnic studies, or related fields may apply if they aspire to leadership within women's studies or NWSA.

Applications for June 2008 will be available online at http://www.nwsa.org. Candidates must apply by April 1, 2008 to be eligible for the 2008 WoCLP.

This dramatic monologue uses fairy beliefs popular in Great Britain from medieval times through at least the 20th century to confront postmodern anxieties about pregnancy and childbirth, including genetic engineering and the pursuit of motherhood at age 40 and beyond. In the end, "happily ever after" is identified as an uncharted place, with no extant path leading to it.

"Burying Stars": A Story of Adolescent Motherhood
Genevieve Carminati, Montgomery College
This is a short story from a collection-in-progress of writings about women, entitled Lunar Eclipse. "Burying Stars" tells the story of a fifteen-year-old working class single mother. It is the fictionalization and amalgamation of the experiences of several girls I grew up with in the Pre-Roe era.

Barrier Island Blues
Nicole Grant, Northern Kentucky University
Barrier Island Blues is a novel about Marina Jeffries, a young girl growing up in the 1950's and 1960's on an island off the New Jersey coast. The daughter of a reluctant mother and immature father living in a small conservative town, Marina must come to terms with gendered expectations that violate her budding feminist sensibilities. These excerpts focus on the consequences of an innocent kiss pre-pubescent Marina shares with her best girlfriend Jackie Burke; Marina's decision not to stop eating; and Marina's negotiations with God when she learns from her father what it means to become a woman.

Tick Tock
Jessica Jennrich, University of Missouri-Columbia
Standing in my bathroom with a stick in my hand that confirms conception, I begin my navigation of the "cult of motherhood". This non-fiction piece that incorporates larger themes of feminist and queer theory documents my fumbles, foibles, and fear during the time waiting for the birth of my son. Focusing on what I perceived as my transformation from private citizen to public commodity, I detail the experience of myself and my partner as we become parents for the first time and try not to lose ourselves, each other, and our lives.

Riding Grace: A Triumph of the Soul
Alissa Lukara, Lifechallenges.org
Riding Grace is a poetic, powerful memoir documenting Alissa Lukara's no-holds-barred 12-year quest to reclaim her life from the dark night of Chronic Fatigue Syndrome and severe childhood sexual abuse. It inspires all women to dive deep into their shadows to find the love and compassion at their core.
Continuing Ntosake Shange’s Choreopoem Tradition – Aqua Beats and Moon Verses: Volume I

camill williams, veronica precious bohanan, AquaMoon

In the tradition of Ntosake Shange the writing, performance and artistic team of AquaMoon, wrote an African American womyn-centered choreopoem, Aqua Beats and Moon Verses: Volume I. The duo combined the Hip Hop lyricism and poetry. There is fluidity with each scene being presented on the page and stage.

Femme-dyke agency: Poetic explorations of butch/femme social interaction

Kimberly Dark, California State University, San Marcos

The poetry explores the agency and social management skills of femme-dykes and their butch counterparts. In specific, the poems emotionally express the ways in which femme-ness appropriates and subverts heterosexual privilege.

Putting the Panic back in Hispanic

Lauren Espinoza, The University of Texas-Pan American

My poetry represents the younger generation of Hispanic peoples that feel like their individual voices are not heard. These peoples are just lumped into the Hispanic group and are thought of to be creating work that only relates to that area. Contrary to popular belief, all poetry written by Hispanics is not about tortillas and crossing the border as is evidenced by my poetry.

Deconstructing sexual stereotypes

Bonnie Lynn Miller, Northern Illinois University

These three poems investigate and question the limiting nature of oppressive and stereotypical ideas about female sexuality and male homosexuality. The first poem struggles with stereotypes about female virginity, the second deals with the notion of parents passing on their prejudices to their children, and the last poem addresses the influence of prejudice against homosexuality in the form of religious beliefs.

A Planet of Women

Pramila Venkateswaran, Nassau Community College

In the current climate of warring nations and nuclear proliferation, women and children in many countries are put in a terrible position of maintaining order in the midst of collapse. Governments and the media are silent about women’s lives in the “war against terror” except to point out their oppression as a result of gender discrimination! In my poems, women speak of their survival, their activism, their resilience and their vulnerability, whether in Afghanistan, Iran, Iraq, India, or the United States.

Picture This: From (Missouri) Farm to (East) Village
Barbara Horn, Nassau Community College

Reading from her memoir, Barbara Horn will connect the threads of her life: as farm girl, Manhattan resident, teacher on suburban Long Island, and organic gardener. She highlights the kernel of a particularly American experience, that of a woman who has formed her life based on place. In picturing several decades of her fiercely independent life, the author shows how a rural background informs her current existence.

Drowning in the Family Tree: Still Feminist Despite the Metaphors
Diane Carol LeBlanc, St. Olaf College

Speaking to “Not My Mother’s Sister”, Astrid Henry’s study of feminism’s mother/daughter metaphor, this essay explores consciousness in context of feminist theory. Born into a working class family in 1964, I am neither the Second Wave’s daughter nor the Third Wave’s mother. This essay revisits pre-school gendering learned through housework, television French lessons, Jack LaLanne exercise, and trips to the local five and dime, recalls my click of consciousness, and questions the metaphor’s power to cast me as a mother-figure to young feminists.

Bodies in Clay
Jessica Nathanson, Augustana College

This is a creative nonfiction piece - a “braided memoir” that weaves strands of fact and fiction into a personal narrative of body image, sexuality, life, and death, set against the backdrop of the Palo Duro Canyon in Texas.

Lesbian / Dad: Masculine Mother, Feminine Father
Polly Pagenhart, Independent Scholar/Writer

For a lesbian parent like me, “Both/and” is the only answer to the either/or question: “Are you mother or father?” This essay, part memoir, part analysis, explores that rich parental space that exists at the crossroads of those two roles, and proposes that not just feminism and gender studies, but every parent-woman or man; queer or straight-stands to gain from the insights found there.

Murungu
Kimberly L. Rogers, Iowa State University

A nonfiction essay discussing the author’s cultural confrontation with difference in Zimbabwe. When she learns the word for white person (murungu) the author is initially offended and shocked to realize people have been shouting “white person” to her everywhere she goes. Upon closer self- and cultural examination, the author is able to see this naming of color and privilege outside of the American context, and realize that it is often a statement of fact and does not always carry the same history as the naming of racial identities in the U.S.

FILM/VIDEO DESCRIPTIONS

AT HIGHEST RISK
By Rebecca Rivas
Saturday 9:10 am

Andean women in Peru have faced a massive sterilization campaign, exorbitant fines for homebirths, remnants of a deadly civil war, and the second highest maternal death rate in South America. Through the compelling story of one Andean woman, we see the horrors and triumphs of Peru's volatile health care situation. At Highest Risk winds through the Andean people's spirituality and their mysterious gift of self preservation. As part of a Fulbright grant, the film's crew spent one year researching and filming in some of the most inaccessible regions of the Andes. This is an intimate look at reproductive health care in a developing country. Brittany Gravely, Documentary Educational Resources, 2006, 45 min.

BE FRUITFUL & MULTIPLY
By Shosh Shlaim
Saturday 1:20 pm

How does it feel to have been pregnant or breastfeeding for most of your unmarried life? The film profiles four ultra-orthodox Jewish women in the U.S. and Israel, documenting their daily routines. In interviews, each of the women discuss their lives, focusing on their belief in the traditional and distinctive roles for women and men dictated by Jewish religion as well as on the condition of perpetual motherhood as the "natural" and desirable state of being for women. First Run/Icarus Films, 2005, 50 min.
BEYOND DISABILITY: THE FE FE STORIES
By Beyondmedia Education
Friday 8:00 am

The empowered Fe Fes (slang for female), a group of young women with disabilities, hit the streets of Chicago on a quest to discover the difference between how they see themselves and how others see them. Their revelations are humorous, thought provoking and surprising. As the young women grapple with issues as diverse as access, education, employment, sexuality, and growing up with disabilities, they address their audience with a sense of urgency, as if to say, “I need to tell you so you’ll see me differently.” Beyondmedia Education, 2004, 26 min.

FAR FROM HOME
By Rachel Tutsumi
Friday 9:15 am

While busing is a rapidly-fading memory in most American schools, it continues to be a reality for over 3,000 Boston students every year. Kandice is one of them, an African American teenager who has been bussed to a predominantly white suburb since kindergarten. In this revealing documentary, she takes us inside her triumphs, struggles, and conflicted feelings about traversing these two worlds. She also reveals her family’s long history of integrated education and activism. Women Make Movies, 2005, 40 min.

FREEDOM IS CONTAGIOUS
By Helen Garvy
Friday 2:30 pm

Freedom is Contagious explores the early history of the women’s movement that grew in the 1960s and 1970s, focusing especially on the interconnections with Students for a Democratic Society (SDS). While presenting important events, this film focuses on the thinking behind all these events. The first-person stories are woven together, accompanied by graphics and photos from the period. Shire Films, 2003, 40 min.

GIRL HOUSE ART PROJECT
By Brooke Randolph
Friday 8:35 am

This film documents the last month of the 10-month “Girl House Art Project,” inspired by Judy Chicago and Miriam Schapiro’s 1972 “Womanhouse.” YWCA Santa Monica / Westside Volunteer, Kesa Kivel, offered a broad-based feminist curriculum in an interactive format to a small group of middle school girls. For their art installation, the girls transformed an on-site house into a bedroom of a girl who is being sexually harassed, artistically expressing her worries, fears, and potential consequences. Kesa Kivel, 2006, 16 min.

GIRL WRESTLER
By Diane Zander
Friday 10:40 am

This absorbing documentary follows Texas teenager Tara Neal, who bucks traditional expectations by insisting that girls and boys should be allowed to wrestle on the same mat. Emmy Award-winning filmmaker Diane Zander follows Tara on her journey to the national championships as she battles sexism, deals with family issues and fights with her own body to control her weight. Women Make Movies, 2004, 53 min.

I HAD AN ABORTION
By Gillian Aldrich & Jennifer Baumgardner
Saturday 10:05

Cutting across age, race, class and religion this fiercely honest documentary features intimate interviews with 10 women — including famed feminist Gloria Steinem — who candidly describe experiences spanning seven decades, from the years before Roe v. Wade to the present day. This film insightfully documents how changing societal pressures have affected women’s choices and experiences. Women Make Movies, 2005, 55 min.

INSIDE OUT
By Zohreh Shayanesh
Saturday 6:35 pm

Inside Out features intimate conversations with three transsexuals living in Iran, allowing them to tell their stories, including the lifelong struggle to come to terms with their gender dysphoria and how it has affected their everyday behavior, and the impact of hormone therapy and sex-change surgery on their lives. The film also includes interviews with a Muslim cleric, who explains that the majority of Iran’s religious leaders consider transsexuality to be a human rights issue and therefore support gender reassignment surgery; a psychiatrist, who explains the difference between homosexuality and transsexuality and how the condition cannot be cured psychologically; and a surgeon, who discusses the nature and the difficulties of the required surgery. First Run/Icarus Films, 2006, 39 min.

LOOK US IN THE EYE: THE OLD WOMEN'S PROJECT
By Jennifer Abod
Saturday 8:35 am

In this video about ageism and activism from a feminist perspective, San Diegans Cynthia Rich, Manny Garza and Janice Keaffaber take the stereotypes of an ageist culture and turn them on their heads. Wearing brilliant t-shirts that declare “Old Women Are Your Future” and carrying their giant multi-ethnic old woman puppet, POWER (Pissed Old Woman Engaged in Revolution), The Old Women's Project refuses invisibility and proclaims that old women are part of every social justice issue. Profile Productions, 2006, 26 min.
MAQUILAPOLIS (CITY OF FACTORIES)
By Vicky Funari & Sergio De La Torre
Friday 4:45 pm
In Maquilapolis, we meet Carmen a $6 per day worker in one of Tijuana's maquiladoras, the multinationally-owned factories that came to Mexico for its cheap labor. Carmen and her friend Lourdes confront labor violations, environmental devastation and urban chaos, reaching beyond their daily struggle for survival to organize for change, taking on both the Mexican and U.S. governments and a major television manufacturer. The women also use video cameras to document their lives, their city and their hopes for the future. The Maquila Project, 2006, 68 min.

MOHAWK GIRLS
By Tracey Deer
Friday 11:40 am
Tracking issues of identity, culture, and family, Mohawk Girls follows three outspoken and exuberant Mohawk teenagers on their journey to adulthood. Deeply emotional yet unsentimental, this film provides and intimate look into what it means to grow up Native at the beginning of the 21st century. Women Make Movies, 2005, 63 min.

MOM'S APPLE PIE, THE HEART OF THE LESBIAN MOTHERS' CUSTODY MOVEMENT
By Jody Laine, Shan Ottey & Shad Reinstein
Saturday 4:15 pm
While the LGBT Civil Rights movement was gaining momentum, the 1970s witnessed horrific custody battles for lesbian mothers. Founders of the Lesbian Rights Project (now the National Center for Lesbian Rights) and the Lesbian Mothers' National Defense Fund recount the founding of their organizations in response to the bevy of court rulings granting custody to grandparents, fathers and distant relatives based on the belief that lesbians would be unfit parents. This film revisits the early tumultuous years of the lesbian custody movement through the stories of five lesbian mothers and their four children. Frameline, 2006, 60 min.

MOTHERLAND AFGHANISTAN
By Sedika Mojadidi
Saturday 12:00 pm
Afghanistan today has the second highest maternal and infant mortality rates in the world. In Motherland Afghanistan, Afghan-American filmmaker Sedika Mojadidi vividly depicts the extent of this tragedy by documenting the 2003 return to Afghanistan of her father, an OB/GYN, as he attempts to rehabilitate the largest women's hospital in the country with the promised support of the U.S. Department of Health and Human Services and his subsequent leaving and return to Afghanistan to work with an Afghan NGO. This film reveals that far more resources are needed to improve women's healthcare in this beleaguered nation. First Run/Icarus Films, 2005, 73 min.

MOthers of the Mountain
By Martha Goell Lubell
Friday 9:45 pm
Theresa Goell started her career as an archeologist with four strikes against her: she was female, divorced, a Jew working with Muslims and hearing impaired. Goell abandoned the lifestyle of her conservative family in 1933 to pursue her passion at Nemrud Dagh, an isolated mountaintop in Southwestern Turkey that had been shrouded in mystery until Goell's pioneering excavations. Goell's saga comes to life through National Geographic archival footage of the excavations; hundreds of family photographs and finally Goell's oral history and letters. Women Make Movies, 2005, 56 min.

NO UMBRELLA: ELECTION DAY IN THE CITY
By Laura Paglin
Saturday 8:00 am
No Umbrella is an unblinking look at the 2004 US Election Day failures in one of Ohio's poorest neighborhoods. In the most hotly contested state in the country, gridlock at inner city polls ignites tempers and sets off charges of conspiracy. We are squarely dropped into the chaos as we watch the irascible octogenarian councilwoman (Ms. Fannie Lewis) take on polling place breakdowns, and unresponsive bureaucracy and an increasingly agitated electorate. Bullfrog Films, 2005, 26 min.

NO! CONFRONTING SEXUAL ASSAULT
By Aishah Shahidah Simmons
Saturday 9:00 pm
No! provides a comprehensive lens to examine the impact of sexual violence on Black women and girls-calling to task in particular the behaviors and attitudes of Black men in reinforcing a pervasive cultural assault. This film includes insightful analysis from leading Black feminists, interviews with national violence prevention leaders and testimonials from sexual assault survivors who defy victimization. California Newsreel, 2006, 94 min.

ORDINARY LIVES
By Sheetal S. Agarwal
Saturday 3:35 pm
Ordinary Lives uncovers the living conditions of residents in a slum in Mumbai, focusing on the daily struggles of one joint family with ten members of three generations crammed in a 180-square-foot shack. This family represents those at the very bottom of the social hierarchy. Through a poised juxtaposition of voices from both inside and outside the slums, the film re-examines issues such as poverty, human rights, and gender equality that have been troubling India and other developing countries. Brittany Graveley, Documentary Educational Resources, 2005, 38 min.

RAPE FOR WHO I AM
By Lovinsa Kavuma
Saturday 7:20 pm

This documentary offers a fascinating and moving insight into the lives of South Africa's black lesbians, who, raped because of their sexuality, refuse to become victims. The film interweaves their experiences as they prepare for an annual Gay Pride celebration. They describe the prejudices they have had to endure, the details of their attacks, and how this horrible crime, often ignored by the authorities, and intended to teach them to "act like women," exposes them to sexually transmitted diseases such as AIDS. The Cinema Guild, 2006, 27 min.

SAUDI SOLUTIONS
By Bregtje van der Haak
Friday 6:00 pm

In Saudi Solutions, Bregtje van der Haak, the first Western filmmaker ever granted permission to film the lives of Saudi women, takes us inside this closed society where fewer than five percent of women do paid work. She profiles a journalist, an ecologist, a photographer, a television news reader and the nation's first female airline pilot. In discussing their everyday lives and concerns, they are surprisingly defensive of Saudi social customs, arguing that, while they see the desirability of gradual social reform, they see no conflict between Islamic law and the rights of women. First Run/Icarus Films, 2006, 77 min.

SUCKERFISH
By Lisa Jackson
Friday 9:00 pm

When she was ten, Lisa Jackson fled Toronto to live with relatives in Vancouver to escape her mother's depression, alcoholism and prescription drug abuse - legacies of the residential school experience. Now, sifting through her memories and her mother's letters, she constructs a portrait of a mother whose drive to love her daughter triumphed over her demons of addiction. Animation, childhood photographs, and stylized recreations add the young child's whimsical voice to this moving, at times humorous, look at the director's relationship to her mother and native identity. Brittany Graveley, Documentary Educational Resources, 2004, 8 min.

THE FOREST FOR THE TREES
By Bernadine Mellis
Friday 3:40 pm

This is the amazing story of Judi Bari's activism for Earth First! and the fight to clear her name after her car was bombed and she was arrested as a terrorist. As the story unfolds to its dramatic ending, this film provides insight into threats to civil rights in the context of environmental issues. Bullfrog Films, 2006, 57 min.

THE GRACE LEE PROJECT
By Grace Lee
Saturday 2:20 pm

When award-winning filmmaker Grace Lee was growing up in Missouri, she was the only Grace Lee she knew. In New York and California, however, everyone she meets seems to know "another Grace Lee." But why did they assume that all Grace Lee are reserved, dutiful, piano-playing bookworms? Pursuing the moving target of Asian-American female identity, the filmmaker plunges into a clever, highly unscientific investigation into all those Grace Lees who break the mold - from a fiery social activist to a rebel who tried to burn down her school. Women Make Movies, 2005, 68 min.

THE PATH TO NUCLEAR FISSION: THE STORY OF LISE MEITNER & OTTO HAHN
By Rosemarie Reed
Friday 8:40 pm

This film details the story of Lise Meitner who made scientific history when she and her collaborator, Otto Hahn, discovered nuclear fission in 1938. It captures Meitner's efforts to make her way in the male-dominated world of physics, the racial and political discrimination that forced Meitner to live in exile, and ongoing speculation about her exclusion from the Nobel Prize. These elements are explored through photos, letters, notes, stock footage, and maps; interviews with writers, scientists, and historians; and music of the day. Filmmakers Library, 2006, 56 min.

THE PORNOGRAPHY OF EVERYDAY LIFE
By Jane Caputi, Susan Rosen Kranz
Friday 2:05 pm

This video incorporates over 200 images from advertising, the news, ancient myth, contemporary art, and pornography as it suggests that "pornography" is really a mainstream worldview, one supporting not only sexism, but also racism, militarism, torture and environmental destruction. Visionary artists and thinkers re-imagine female sexuality and/or the female divine, restoring respect to the feminine principle, and calling for new understandings of sex, mystery, connection, eroticism, and ecstasy. Berkeley Media LLC, 2007, 34 min.

THE SHAPE OF WATER
By Kum-Kum Bhavnani
Friday 7:25 pm

The Shape of Water interweaves the intimate stories of six women living in Senegal, Brazil, India, and Jerusalem. The women abandon female genital mutilation, tap for rubber to protect the rainforest, protect the biodiversity of the planet and oppose military occupations. This film offers a unique view of the complex realities of the women and their passions to create a more just world. Kum-Kum Bhavnani, 2006, 70 min.
TOMBOYS! FEisty GIRLS AND SPIRITED WOMEN
By Julie Akeret & Christian McEwan
Friday 10:05 am
Are tomboys “tamed” once they reach adolescence? This lively and inspiring documentary explodes that archaic myth with the stories of proud tomboys of all ages. Exploring the myriad ways gender identity is constructed from a very young age, Tomboys makes the connections between rebel girl and spirited women gloriously clear. Women Make Movies, 2004, 28 min.

TOXIC BUST: CHEMICALS & BREAST CANCER
By Megan Siler
Saturday 11:10 am
Toxic Bust, a thought-provoking and visually compelling documentary, uncovers the growing evidence which links breast cancer to toxic chemical exposure in the home, community and workplace. This film also raises questions about the long term health costs associated with early childhood chemical exposure and highlights the disproportionate toxic burden carried by low-income communities and workers. Bullfrog Films, 2006, 41 min.

TRANSPARENT
By Jules Rosskam
Saturday 5:25 pm
Pink or blue. Male or female. Mommy or daddy. Categories that we all take for granted are broken apart in Transparent, a documentary about 19 female-to-male transsexuals who have given birth and gone on to raise their biological children. Transparent focuses on its subjects’ lives as parents, revealing the diverse ways in which each parent reconciles giving birth and being a biological mother with his masculine identity. Traditional views of gender are further re-examined through the variety of genders the children use to conceive of their parents. Frameline, 2005, 61 min.

TROOP 1500: GIRL SCOUTS BEYOND BARS
By Ellen Spiro & Karen Bernstein
Friday 12:50 pm
This unique Girl Scout Troop brings daughters together with their inmate mothers. Intimately involved with the troop for several years, the directors took their cameras far beyond meetings to explore the painful context of broken families. Powerful insight comes from interviews shot by the girls themselves, which reveal their conflicted feelings of anger and joy, abandonment and intimacy as well as the deep influence their mothers still have on them. Women Make Movies, 2005, 68 min.

TURNING A CORNER
By Beyondmedia Education
Saturday 7:55 pm
Turning a Corner documents a workshop facilitated by Beyondmedia Education with Prostitution Alternatives Round Table to give voice to people in the sex trade industry and expose the harsh realities of street prostitution in Chicago. The film tells the women’s stories of survival and triumph over homelessness, violence and discrimination and gives rare insights into Chicago’s sex industry. Beyondmedia Education, 2006, 58 min.

WOMEN'S CENTER PRE-CONFERENCE

Women’s Centers: Paths for the Future
Thursday, June 28, 2007

ABOUT THE WOMEN'S CENTERS COMMITTEE

Women's Centers have representation on the NWSA Governing Council as a standing committee. This is more than a symbolic recognition of the important role that women's centers play in feminist education.

NWSA recognizes that "women's studies" is broader than what happens in the classroom. NWSA acknowledges women's centers as chief out-of-class feminist educators and encourages participation in the national organization.

Campus-based women's centers have a long history of working together with women's studies to transform the curriculum, the campus environment, and society at large.

The Women's Centers Committee of NWSA provides an opportunity for women's center directors, staff and others to gather and share information, ideas, challenges, successes and support. The Women's Centers Committee sponsors an annual pre-conference event as well as sessions during the NWSA annual conference.

8:00 AM - 12:00 PM: WCC PRE-CONFERENCE REGISTRATION
Location:

8:00 – 8:30 AM: COFFEE AND BAGELS (001)
Location: Gem Rooms, Turquoise A +B

8:30 – 9:15 AM: WELCOME (002)
Allison Kimmich, Executive Director, NWSA
Marlene Kowalski-Braun, Grand Valley State University / Co-Chair, NWSA Women's Centers Committee Pre-Conference
Yvette Upton, Georgia Tech, Co-Chair, NWSA
Women's Centers Committee Pre-Conference
Location:

9:15 – 9:45 AM: OVERVIEW OF THE WOMEN'S CENTER COMMITTEE (005)
Location: Gem Rooms, Turquoise A +B
Brenda Bethman, University of Missouri-Kansas City NWSA Women's Centers Committee Chair
This short session will introduce newcomers and "oldtimers" to the Women's Center Committee and celebrate our accomplishments to promote and enhance women's centers work across the country. Learn more about the current projects and how you can get involved and use these resources to enhance your work on your campus.

2:00 – 2:30 PM: BREAKOUT SESSION I
A. "HOW NWSA WORKS / INTRODUCTION TO WOMEN'S CENTERS" (014)
(Note: Part of this session will be a joint session with the Program Administration & Development Committee)
Location: Legends, Arnold Palmer
Barb Howe, NWSA President
Allison Kimmich, NWSA Executive Director
Valda Lewis, NWSA Action Editor/Web Administrator
Brenda Daly, Editor NWSA Journal
Sherry Shapiro, PA&D co-chair
Brenda Bethman, NWSA Women's Centers Committee Chair
First, in a joint session with PA&D and the Women's Centers Caucus, you will learn about how NWSA functions as an organization, what it can offer to you and your Women's Studies program, and how you can get involved in NWSA activities. Then, the two groups will split and WCC participants will join a similar "How WCC Works" session.

B. MENTORING MATTERS: BUILDING AND GROWING A MEANINGFUL MENTORING PROGRAM FOR STUDENTS (011)
Location: Gem Rooms, Coral
Susan Marine, Harvard College
Bridge Gorrow, Portland State University
This program will feature an overview of two successful mentoring programs, one located at a private liberal arts college matching students with alumnas, and one at a large state university matching returning adult learners students who have been enrolled for one year or more. Workshop facilitators will discuss format, structure, resources needed and ally support crucial to implementing such programs, and provide an overview of ways to reduce obstacles to implementation on your own campus. Following discussion and Q and A, facilitators will provide a brief overview of techniques for evaluating such programs.
ENGAGING ACADEMICS IN THE ACADEME: WOMEN'S CENTERS AND CURRICULUM PROGRAMMING (012)
Location: Gem Rooms, Jade

Penny Rice, Iowa State University
Catherine Pope, Purdue University

In seeking to create or partner with curriculum based programs, women’s centers can find interesting opportunities and unforeseen challenges. This workshop will review two women’s centers programs that include a defined curriculum component and encourage discussion both on the importance of creating curriculum programming and best practices for doing so within the center’s mission. The result of this workshop will be a dialogue on the value of curriculum based programming to a women’s center, challenges for women’s center staff in creating such programs and the sharing of ideas.

D. FEMINIST LEADERSHIP IN STUDENT AFFAIRS: A CRITICAL LOOK AT SCHOLARSHIP AND PRACTICE (013)
Location: Gem Rooms, Ruby

Marlene Kowalski-Braun, Grand Valley State University
Chris Linder, Colorado State University
Chimi Boyd, University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill

This session provides a space to explore the power of feminist leadership and its application in student affairs. Women who identify as feminists in student affairs are often challenged with framing and modeling new realities for what leadership in higher education can look like. Following a short presentation, a panel of women will give voice to this topic by exploring both the parallels and contradictions between the espoused values of student affairs and the practices of the profession. Panelist stories will illuminate the rewards and challenges of feminist leadership from personal experience and research. They will also focus on feminist activism and how it is operationalized through Women’s Center work.

11:30 AM – 12:30 PM:
NETWORKING LUNCH WITH TABLE TOPICS
Location: New Orleans Ballroom

12:45 – 2:15 PM: GENERAL SESSION
CREATING CONVERSATIONS TO DISMANTLE RACISM AND WHITE PRIVILEGE IN OUR WOMEN’S CENTERS AND THE NWSA WOMEN’S CENTERS COMMITTEE (023)
Location: Gem Rooms, Turquoise A&B

Kathleen Holgerson, University of Connecticut
Barbara Kulton, University of Colorado;
Pat Lowrie, Michigan State University

This workshop will continue the conversation held at the 2006 pre-conference in Oakland. Utilizing vignettes from Shakti Butler’s The Way Home, we will engage in conversations to examine personal, interpersonal, and institutional racist attitudes, beliefs, actions, and practices. Participants will have the opportunity to develop plans for their continued work disrupting and dismantling the systems and structures currently in place in our women’s centers and the women’s centers committee.

2:30 – 3:45 PM: BREAKOUT SESSION II

A. WOMEN’S CENTERS FACE FACEBOOK:
A TOOL FOR ONLINE ORGANIZING? (028)
Location: Gem Rooms, Coral

Brenda Bethman, University of Missouri-Kansas City
Kathy Fischer, University of Connecticut
Claire Robbins, Duke University
Katherine Rose-Mockry, University of Kansas

This roundtable will address the ways women’s centers and their staff interact (or don’t) with Facebook. Following a brief orientation to Facebook, the participants will then discuss the use of Facebook from a practical, professional, and feminist perspective, including how to effectively understand, address and use Facebook in our women’s center work.

B. SISTER-TO-SISTER: A CAMPUS-COMMUNITY PROGRAM TO ALLOW GIRLS TO SPEAK OUT (029)
Location: Gem Rooms, Coral

Moderator: Xenia Markowitz, Dartmouth College
Megan Fallon, Dartmouth College
Cameron Houser, Dartmouth College Senior, Sister-to-Sister Executive Committee;
Raina Hammel, Dartmouth College Senior, Sister-to-Sister Executive Committee
Oriana Pedone, Thetford Academy, 8th Grade Participant

Originally conceived of in fall 2005, those involved with the development of and uses for the “What Centers Need” project. Originally conceived of in fall 2005, those involved with the survey design, data analysis, and writing the document will discuss their roles in the process. Session attendees will then have an opportunity to brainstorm in small groups on how the document will be useful as women’s centers work to promote a better understanding of their mission on campus. This session is especially relevant for those working to establish a new center and those reviewing the oversight, structure and funding for existing centers.

C. THE WHAT CENTERS NEED DOCUMENT: MAKING USE OF THE DATA ON YOUR CAMPUS (030)
Location: Gem Rooms, Ruby

Rebecca Morrow, Idaho State University
Penny Rice, Iowa State University

This interactive roundtable session will focus on the development of and uses for the “What Centers Need” project. Originally conceived of in fall 2005, those involved with the survey design, data analysis, and writing the document will discuss their roles in the process. Session attendees will then have an opportunity to brainstorm in small groups on how the document will be useful as women’s centers work to promote a better understanding of their mission on campus. This session is especially relevant for those working to establish a new center and those reviewing the oversight, structure and funding for existing centers.
THURSDAY - Women's Centers

4:00 – 5:15 PM: BREAKOUT SESSION III

A. BUILDING COMMUNITY — "SISTERS BENEATH THE SKIN" (044)
Location: Gem Rooms, Coral

Chimi Boyd, University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill

Building Community: com*mu*ni*ty: a unified body of individuals. Are you looking for ways to bridge the divide between students, faculty and staff of various racial, ethnic and cultural backgrounds? Wondering how to dig deeper, confront biases and move toward truthful reconciliation? Are you interested in partnerships with other campuses? Sisters Beneath the Skin is a program created to define and understand professional and personal relationships between Caucasian women and Women of Color. "Sisters" is a collaborative effort between many central North Carolina colleges and universities.

Participants will:
1. Identify barriers to cross-cultural communication on their specific campus
2. Brainstorm ways to address barriers to cross-cultural communication
3. Learn about a cross-cultural dialogue model
4. Identify collaborative partners

Come and hear how you can use this model of cross-cultural dialogue to build community on your campus

B. STUDENT LEARNING: ASSESSMENT OF LEARNING OUTCOMES WITH STUDENT VOLUNTEERS (045)
Location: Gem Rooms, Jade

Aimee Shattuck, Portland State University
Bridge Gorrow, Portland State University

The Women's Resource Center at Portland State University will share their simple process for assessing learning outcomes based on the NASPA/ACPA report Learning Reconsidered 2 and the Social Change Model. Their process has allowed them to better mentor students to establish goals, provide leadership opportunities and to assess learning. The workshop will include a theoretical overview of the program including feminist leadership, learning theory, and student development theory. The facilitators will walk the participants through a process that they can adapt for their center. Tools provided to participants will include sample learning outcomes and assessment tools.

C. THE MEN'S PROJECT: ENGAGING MEN AS ALLIES FOR SOCIAL JUSTICE (046)

Chris Linder, Colorado State University

As sexual assault and other gendered violence continue to affect the lives of countless people, some universities are beginning to solicit and train men as allies in the struggle to end sexism and violent masculinity. Colorado State University (CSU) recently developed and coordinated one such programmatic effort with considerable success as measured anecdotally and through assessment data. This session will highlight the CSU Men's Project: its theoretical underpinnings, curriculum, and presenters will highlight preliminary qualitative and quantitative assessment data.

SINGING IN SACRED CIRCLE (047)
Location: Legends, Arnold Palmer

Shelley Graff, Feminist Singer/Songwriter

Singing In Circle is an opportunity to look into your sisters' eyes and share voice and spirit through song. While learning short, repetitive, women-centered and earth-based songs from a variety of traditions, power rises from the center of the circle as all voices create an energy that is both empowering and healing. This opportunity is intended to allow women, regardless of singing experience, to share their voices in a noncompetitive, relaxed, safe space. Come sing along! Percussion instruments are welcome!

5:20 – 5:45 PM CLOSING SESSION (050)
Location: Gem Rooms, Turquoise A +B
PROGRAM ADMINISTRATION AND DEVELOPMENT
PRE-CONFERENCE

ABOUT THE PA&D COMMITTEE

The PA&D Committee consists of all Women's Studies program administrators (chairs, directors, coordinators) whose programs, departments or other academic units are member institutions of NWSA. This body is convened once a year for a Business Meeting at the annual NWSA Conference and is sustained by the Program Administrator Listserve (PAlist).

8:00 AM – 12:00 PM: PA&D PRE-CONFERENCE REGISTRATION

8:30 – 9:00 AM: COFFEE AND BAGELS (003)
Location: St. Charles Ballroom, Salon V/VI

9:00 – 9:45 AM: WELCOME & BITS OF BUSINESS (004)
Location: St. Charles Ballroom, Salon V/VI

10:00-11:15 BREAKOUT SESSIONS

A. HOW NWSA WORKS/HOW PAD WORKS (014)
Location: Legends, Arnold Palmer
Barb Howe, NWSA President
Allison Kimmich, NWSA Executive Director
Valda Lewis, NWSA Journal Co-Editor/Web Administrator
Brenda Daly, NWSA Journal Editorial Assistant
Sherry Shapiro, PA&D co-chair
Brenda Bethman, NWSA Women's Centers Committee Chair

First, in a joint session with PAD and the Women's Centers Caucus, you will learn about how NWSA functions as an organization, what it can offer to you and your Women’s Studies program, and how you can get involved in NWSA activities. Then, the two groups will split and PAD participants will join a similar “How PAD Works” session.

B. THE NUTS AND BOLTS OF WOMEN’S STUDIES EVENTS PLANNING (015)
Location: Gem: Turquoise
Susan G. Cummings, Georgia College & State University
Phyllis Baker, University of Northern Iowa
Carrie N. Baker, Berry College

This panel will address all aspects of successful women's studies events planning, including issues such as program selection, funding, promoting events, and using events to connect to the larger community.

C. RECRUITMENT AND RETENTION OF DIRECTORS/CHAIRS IN WOMEN'S STUDIES (008)
Location: Broadway: B
Sarah H. Stenglanz, SUNY - Stony Brook
Gwen Raaberg, Western Michigan University
Jill Bystydzienski, Iowa State University
Carol J. Haddad, Eastern Michigan University

This panel will focus on recruiting and retaining effective heads of WS programs/departments. Topics will include internal/external sources of chairs, search committees, retention techniques, and prevention of chair “burnout.”

D. COMMUNITY PARTNERS AND NON-TRADITIONAL ALLIES (009)
Location: Gallery: Gaugin
"Allies in the Quest to Build Women's Studies—Going Beyond the Walls of Women's Studies on Campus"
Lisa Burke, Chair, Lesbian Caucus

This panel will outline several strategies for critical ally building across campus, including academic affairs administrators and student services professionals, staff from IT, the Library, and Campus Security.

E. TAKING WOMEN’S STUDIES ABROAD (010)
Location: Gallery: Picasso
Lisa Logan, University of Central Florida
Kelli D. Zaytoun, Wright State University
Sandra Spencer, University of North Texas
Kathe Davis, Kent State University (Moderator)

Panelists will discuss the value of study-abroad programs, such as theirs in Brazil, Ghana, and the U.K., in accomplishing major goals of WS, particularly the production of interdisciplinary, cross-cultural understanding and knowledge.
F. THE IMPACT OF BUDGET CUTS ON WS PROGRAMS AT STATE SCHOOLS: PROBLEMS AND STRATEGIES (007)
Location: Broadway: A

Tonia St. Germain, Eastern Oregon University
Barbara Scott Winkler, Southern Oregon University
Patricia Millhoff, University of Akron
Sally Winkle, Eastern Washington University (Moderator)

Women's Studies Directors/Coordinators will discuss the impact of budget cuts on WS Programs at state universities, including why cuts are happening and on-site strategies to deal with them.

11:15-11:30 MORNING REFRESHMENT DRINKS
ST. CHARLES BALLROOM, SALON V/VI

11:30-12:45 CONCURRENT SESSIONS

Location: Broadway: A

Wendy Hume, University of North Dakota
Pat Millhoff, University of Akron

In this session, participants will discuss the usefulness of mentoring in Women's Studies generally as well as within NWSA.

B. STANDARDS FOR REAPPOINTMENT, TENURE, AND PROMOTION FOR FACULTY IN WOMEN'S STUDIES: A PROPOSAL (018)
Location: Broadway: B

Tonia St. Germain, Eastern Oregon University
Susan Shaw, Oregon State University
Ellen G. Friedman, The College of New Jersey

Panelists will share findings from their study of various institutions and NWSA/PA&D websites, and make recommendations regarding possible national standards for reappointment, tenure, and promotion.

C. "MAKING IT SEXY": BRANDING, SELLING, AND PROMOTING WOMEN'S AND GENDER STUDIES (018)
Location: Broadway: C

Sarah H. Sterniglanz, SUNY - Stony Brook
Alison Pielmeier, College of Charleston
Karlyn A. Crowley, St. Norbert College
Jane R. Dickie, Hope College
Astrid Henry, Saint Mary's College
Martha McCaughey, Appalachian State University
Denise Witzig, Saint Mary's College

This panel will explore the public relations of Women's and Gender Studies. The panelists will share their "PR" experiences and successes with publications, promotion materials, alumni listserves and websites, graduation ceremonies/ gifts, and rituals and traditions, as well as logos, slogans, and branding.

D. FEMINIST ETHICS AND WOMEN'S STUDIES LEADERSHIP (020)
Location: Gem: Coral

Chris Cuomo, University of Georgia
Layli Phillips, Georgia State University
Catherine Raissiguier, New Jersey City University
Lisa Burke, Chair, Lesbian Caucus
Mary Carruth, University of Mississippi (Moderator)

Panelists explore how feminist leaders realize their ideals of "feminist ethics" within institutional hierarchies and power relations and how the work place shapes and compels a reconfiguration of "feminist ethics."

E. WOMEN'S STUDIES AT "HOME" AND "ABROAD" (021)
Location: Gem: Jade

The Minor Program: Examining the Dilemmas of Program Development in Louisiana and Guam
Helen Thompson, University of Guam

OPENING RECEPTION

Join us on Thursday June 28th for the opening reception of the NWSA 28th Annual Conference, following Sandra Cisneros’ opening presentation.

Meet other conference goers and enjoy an array of fine desserts and a cash bar!
THURSDAY - Student Pre Conference

STUDENT PRE-CONFERENCE

ABOUT THE STUDENT PRE CONFERENCE

The National Women’s Studies Association Student Pre-Conference will offer time to explore the unique concerns of the undergraduate and graduate student constituency of the NWSA.

This half-day pre-conference is intended to strengthen student involvement within the organization as part of NWSA’s 30th anniversary celebration and in conjunction with the General Conference theme, “Past Debates, Present Possibilities, Future Feminisms: A Women’s and Gender Studies Conference Celebrating 30 Years of NWSA.”

THE NWSA STUDENT PRE-CONFERENCE AIDS TO:

- Engage students in cross-disciplinary discussion
- Promote and increase activism among NWSA students
- Increase membership in NWSA among undergraduate and graduate students
- Promote mentoring for undergraduates considering women’s studies training in graduate and professional settings
- Offer professionalization sessions for graduate students

1:30-2:00 PRE-CONFERENCE REGISTRATION

2:00-2:30 WELCOME AND INTRODUCTIONS 027
Location: St Charles Ballroom: Salon II

2:35-3:50 CONCURRENT SESSION ONE

1) WORKSHOP (031)
GETTING IT DONE: USING PEER COACHING TO COMPLETE THE DISSERTATION
Location: Gallery Hall, Gauguin

Alka Arora University of Washington
Statistics reveal a grim picture for women’s completion rate in graduate school. What does this mean for Women Studies’ scholars?

On the one hand, we are resisting dominant constructions of womanhood that may contribute to non-completion: primary responsibility for family care, discourses of “femininity,” and compulsory heterosexuality.

On the other hand, we might be striving to do the impossible work of contributing to activist projects while being mired in the politics of academia. This workshop will address issues of completion and suggest one model of “keeping the course” based on my own experience in a peer coaching group. Statistics reveal a grim picture for women’s completion rate in graduate school. What does this mean for Women Studies scholars?

2) PANEL (032)
AN INTERDISCIPLINARY DISCIPLINE?: SITUATING WOMEN’S STUDIES IN THE ACADEMY
Location: Gallery Hall, Picasso

A. Rez Pullen: Interdisciplinarity and the Standardization of Feminist Methodology
Lisa Knisely: Crises of Interdisciplinarity: Residing on the Fault Lines
Brandy Simula: Disciplining Feminist Inquiry: Strategies for Finding Home

This panel will discuss theoretical and practical issues of interdisciplinarity faced by feminist scholars working in the traditional disciplines and in Women’s Studies programs. Particular attention will be paid to the interrelation between theoretical and practical issues. This panel is intended to introduce undergraduate students to key issues facing the field of Women’s Studies and will also be useful to graduate students and faculty interested in the relationship of Women’s Studies to traditional disciplines.

3) WORKSHOP (033)
PLAY READING TOWARD ACTIVISM
Location: Gallery Hall, Utrillo

Kryn Freehling-Burton Oregon State University

This workshop focuses on how to use Play Readings as a way for students to connect with faculty and staff in discussing relevant themes for activism on campus. Basic how-to’s addressed include selecting a play, reserving a location, securing royalties, “casting” on the spot, and facilitating discussion following the reading. We’ll discuss a bit of theatre theory and how this format fits perfectly with feminism and the goals of a Women’s Studies program. It’s easy, fun and everyone can be a star! We’ll demonstrate with a reading of a short one-act starring... you!
4) PANEL (043)
MOVING FROM THOUGHT TO ACTION: A STUDY CONNECTING FEMINIST SCHOLARSHIP AND ACTIVISM
Location: St Charles Ballroom, Salon III/IV
Jenell Rae Morrow Claremont Graduate University
Many women's studies programs aim to train students academically regarding the multivalent complexities with feminist theory, politics, sociology, theology, and the like. In addition, these programs introduce their students to women's activism. However, integration of women's academia and activism is in need of bridge building. This paper aspires to 1) collect data from current women's studies programs across the nation concerning their attempts to merge women's scholarship and activism, 2) draw on the experiences of women involved in both fields, and 3) examine ways in which women can develop an amalgamated approach to thought and action in their lives.

5) WORKSHOP (041)
WOMEN MAKE YOUR VOICE BE HEARD: USING THE MEDIA AS A TOOL FOR ACTIVISM AND EMPOWERMENT
Location: Gallery Hall, Utrillo
Christie Garton University Chic Media
Given the abundance of negative portrayals of women in the media today, there is a strong need for young women to have increased media access and media skills. This workshop will provide young women with the tools that they need to be effective activists and leaders in their communities by using their voice in the media. The format will begin with a short interactive discussion of current media trends and portrayals of women proceeded by a presentation of these topics:

1. Media literacy skill training: op-eds, letters to the editor, blogging, freelancing
2. Identify outlets for young women to find and develop their voice
3. Using one's voice for advocacy purposes in the media: Lifetime TV and Ms. Magazine as examples
4. Case study: my work as founder and publisher of UniversityChic.com, an online magazine for college and graduate student women nationwide

5:15-6:15 CLOSING WRAP UP DISCUSSION (049)
Thursday, June 28, 2007
7:00 PM
St Charles Ballroom

SANDRA CISNEROS BIOGRAPHICAL NOTE

Sandra Cisneros studied at Loyola University of Chicago (B.A. English 1976) and the University of Iowa (M.F.A. Creative Writing 1978). Her books include a chapbook of poetry, Bad Boys (Mango Press 1980); two full-length poetry books, My Wicked Wicked Ways (Third Woman 1987, Random House 1992) and Loose Woman (Alfred A. Knopf 1994); a collection of stories, Woman Hollering Creek and Other Stories (Random House 1991); a children’s book, Hairs/Pelitos (Alfred A. Knopf 1994); and two novels, The House on Mango Street (Vintage 1991) and Caramelo (Knopf 2002).

Caramelo was selected as notable book of the year by several journals including The New York Times, the Los Angeles Times, the San Francisco Chronicle, the Chicago Tribune, and the Seattle Times. Her novels have been selected for One City/One Book projects in numerous communities including Los Angeles, Miami, Fort Worth, El Paso, and Milwaukee. House on Mango Street has sold over two million copies and is required reading in classrooms across the country, including elementary, middle, high school, and university-level.

Woman Hollering Creek was awarded the PEN Center West Award for Best Fiction of 1991, the Quality Paperback Book Club New Voices Award, the Anisfield-Wolf Book Award, and the Lannan Foundation Literary Award. It was also selected as a noteworthy book of the year by The New York Times and the American Library Journal, and nominated Best Book of Fiction for 1991 by the Los Angeles Times.

Loose Woman won the Mountains & Plains Booksellers Association’s 1995 Regional Book Award in the poetry category.

Other awards include the prestigious MacArthur Foundation Fellowship, 1995; a Texas Medal of the Arts Award, 2003; an honorary Doctor of Humane Letters from Loyola University, Chicago, 2002; an honorary Doctor of Letters from the State University of New York at Purchase, 1993; two National Endowment of the Arts Fellowships for fiction and poetry, 1988, 1982; the Roberta Holloway Lectureship at the University of California, Berkeley, 1988; the Chicano Short Story Award from the University of Arizona, 1986; the Before Columbus American Book Award, 1985; the Texas Institute of Letters Dobie-Paisano Fellowship, 1984; and an Illinois Artists Grant, 1984.
The 2007 conference marks the National Women's Studies Association 30th anniversary celebration. Established in 1977 at a conference funded by the Ford Foundation, NWSA has survived and thrived in the context of fundamental shifts in higher education, an increasingly complex understandings of gender, and the transformative challenges of globalizing women's movements.

Feminist inquiry within women's and gender studies has broken new ground in the past three decades, while facing key social, political, and scholarly challenges.

NWSA 2007 will provide opportunities both to revisit past debates in light of today's priorities and to chart possible futures for feminisms in the academy and beyond. In particular, the conference will examine three sub-themes, each related to the past, present, and future of women's and gender studies: IM/Migration and Mobility, Performing Feminisms, and Girls' Studies and Activism.

SESSION FORMATS

The general conference has a variety of formats for examining women's studies education, scholarship, and activism: panel sessions, paper sessions, poster sessions, performances, workshops, and roundtables.

Panels provide an opportunity for examining specific problems or topics from a variety of perspectives. Panels may present alternative solutions, interpretations, or contrasting points of view on a specified subject or in relation to a common theme.

Paper Sessions were submitted individually and arranged into sessions by the Proposal Review Committee. In paper sessions, authors present 10-12 minute papers followed by audience discussion.

Performance Sessions have been scheduled throughout the conference and focus around particular themes, texts, or theoretical concepts.

Creative Writer's Series Poetry and Prose submissions have been arranged into sessions by the Creative Writer's Series Chair. Writers will read for approximately 15 minutes.

Sponsored Sessions have been submitted by NWSA Caucuses Task Forces and Interest Groups, on topics of particular interest to constituency group members and NWSA members as a whole.

Roundtables typically include a moderator and 4-6 presenters who make brief, informal remarks about a specific idea or project. It allows for extensive discussion and audience participation.

NWSA is pleased to announce two new session formats this year: we will inaugurate Engaging Scholarship, four simultaneous sessions on Friday intended to address the conference theme and sub-themes and provide opportunities for networking.

Invited scholars will explain how their work articulates, engages with, and theorizes issues key issues in the field of women's and gender studies and in today's world. Session participants will then break out in discussion sections to explore the various themes and issues in more detail.

NWSA is also delighted to introduce the Tribute Panel, a session format intended to honor past scholarship that has set new directions for the field.

The Conference also features a tribute to This Bridge Called My Back titled Bridge Inscriptions: Radical Women of Color Envision—Pasts, Presents, Futures.
SCHEDULE AT A GLANCE

This quick schedule is intended to give a brief overview of the conference, and showcase the sub themes.

As we have a Student Pre-Conference this year, a number of the presentations in the main conference are being given by students. This overview also highlights their work.

NWSA Conference 2007
053. PANEL
BODY IMAGE IN THE PUBLIC SPEAKING CLASSROOM
Broadway Ballroom: Broadway A

Using The Woman's Public Speaking Handbook as a case study, we will discuss the need to foreground women speakers as models, but we will also examine the harms in appealing to white-supremacist-heterosexist communication approaches. The classroom has the potential to force conformity of non-normative bodies, but it also has the potential to be a place of sanctuary where we can develop the tools to decolonize our body image and find our voice(s). This panel will explore the issue(s) surrounding body image and the notion of taking up space in the classroom, in our post-feminist, post-identity, and postmodern world.

Rachel Levitt, California State University Northridge
Allison Brownlow, California State University Northridge

054. PANEL
CRITICAL FEMINISMS: TRANSFORMATIVE PRACTICE AND IDENTITY POLITICS IN AN IRISH CONTEXT
Broadway Ballroom: Broadway B

In this panel we will discuss feminist processes of gendered identity construction within a contemporary globalized era. Each panellist has a unique standpoint in conducting research as an American living in Ireland. This social location, specific to a feminist transnational methodological approach, informs the papers presented. All are graduate students in Women's Studies at University College Dublin and are at various points in their careers.

Kate Antosik Parsons, University College Dublin
Leslie L Sherlock, University College Dublin
Diane Sabenacio Nititham, University College Dublin
Moderator: Kristina McCauley

055. PANEL
TRANSCENDENCE: BEYOND M, F, FTM, AND MTF
Broadway Ballroom: Broadway C

This two-person panel explores the unique challenges that remain for genderqueer individuals in a queer community approaching inclusiveness of transgender persons but still enforcing the gender binary. What is the situation of genderqueer individuals on college campuses in 2007? What feminist theory, put forth in past and current waves of feminism, can genderqueers employ to fuel a new movement for gender fluidity? Drawing on feminist theory, multimedia and our own experience, we will locate genderqueers within the queer community today and use our findings as a springboard with which to dialogue about a future free from the binary.

Laura Miller, Lewis University
Marissa Robillard, Northwestern University

056. PANEL
ECOFEMINISM AND SEXUALITY: NEGOTIATIONS OF EMBODIED WOMANHOOD
Gallery Hall: Chagall

Employing sexuality as a normative foundation on which to exploit particular populations, patriarchal power structures simultaneously misrepresent and ignore women's bodies for sexual commodification and consumption. Likewise, nature is constructed as an imperishable resource provided for hegemonic profit. Discussion also on ways women in Sub-Saharan Africa are seeking to take control their own sexual health in relation to HIV prevention and treatment programs. This panel offers an ecofeminist investigation of the complex mechanisms of sexuality through which women and the environment are similarly subordinated, with extensive implications for women's health and safety.

Krista Marie Danis, Roosevelt University
Moderator: Ann Brigham, Roosevelt University

057. Panel
REPRODUCING REPRODUCTION: PREGNANCY, IMAGING BELLY BUMPS & POPULAR MEDIA
Gallery Hall: Gauguin

This panel examines aspects of representations of pregnancy in popular culture, from the Othered pregnant body in Quentin Tarantino's Kill Bill, to pregnant celebrities in gossip magazines, to the media coverage of murdered pregnant women. These talks are drawn together using body studies, intersectional analysis and American popular culture as their sites of study.

“WOMEN BEHIND THE CAMERA” CAMERAWOMEN FROM THE PAST, PRESENT AND FUTURE SURVIVE IN A MALE-DOMINATED FIELD.
Gallery Hall: Picasso

The Chicago premiere of the film “Women Behind the Camera” accompanied with a panel discussion with the director, Alexis Krasilovsky, the editor, Katey Bright, camerawoman, Michelle Crenshaw and other Chicago camerawomen. This global, groundbreaking feature documents the struggles of camerawomen to survive the odds, featuring top female Directors of Photography from all over the world. Our documentary explores the vision and voices of the pioneers who were the first to film in war zones, from helicopters, underwater and on Hollywood sets, and the new generation of camerawomen who are achieving their visions now.

Alexis Krasilovsky, California State University, Northridge
059. Panel

ASIAN AND AFRICAN WOMEN'S MOVEMENTS IN THE BELLY OF IMPERIALISM, PATRIARCHY, AND RELIGIOUS FUNDAMENTALISM

Gallery Hall: Utrillo

This panel discussion focuses on the experiences of women in three different parts of the Global South: in Southeast Asia, Sub-Saharan Africa, and South Asia. Throughout history, women there experience both male domination and colonial oppression which negatively impact on their current role and status in society. Using critical post-colonial feminist theory, this panel discussion compares the role historical structures play in the oppression of women and the way by which women in underdeveloped countries surmount these obstacles for gender equality and social justice. In the final analysis, women play a crucial role in social transformation for all-rounded social liberation.

COMPLICATING THE VICTIM-AGENCY DUALISM IN REPRESENTATIONS OF TRAFFICKING AND MIGRATION AND PROTEST

Gallery Hall: Vermeer

Much of the discourse—both popular and academic-construct women who migrate from their home countries as “victims” of global process. These panelists point out, however, that the experiences of African women who migrate to the Middle East or so-called “mail-order brides” in various Asian locations demand more complicated understandings of women as both victims and agents in specific contexts. Also discussed is Marcha Por La Mujer Migrante, an immigrant rights march held on September 2 in Downtown Los Angeles, with a specific focus on how the march incorporated a gender conscious understanding of immigrant rights issues.

QUEERING SEX, THIRD WAVE FEMINIST IDENTITY, AND RADICAL WISDOM

Gem Rooms: Coral

Panelists problematize straight reproductive logics; explore Michelle Cliff’s now-classic novel “No Telephone to Heaven.” As well source of transgender resistance and radical wisdom; and contrast the anarchic punk rock approach to sexuality with the Carpenters’ mainstream pop of the 70’s by exploring the queer basis of Todd Haynes’ film, Superstar: The Karen Carpenter Story, in conjunction with Erica Rand’s work, Barbie’s Queer Accessories.

WOMEN IN WAR: LEBANESE AND PALESTINIAN WOMEN RESPOND TO ISRAELI MILITARISATION AND AGGRESSION

Gem Rooms: Jade

During the 2006 Israeli war on Lebanon, women were affected by and responded to the terror on the ground and the excessive use of force in very particular ways, as they have from the occupied territories and within Israel proper. This panel examines the political aspects of militarisation, the trauma to women coping on the ground, the forced multiple displacements, and the subsequent forms of violence that resulted from the war.

WOMEN, DISABILITY AND SEXUAL POLITICS

Gem Rooms: Ruby

Panel Abstract During this session, we will examine how some women with disabilities have framed gender and sexual issues when it comes to their interactions with medical professionals, intimate partners and the public at large. In particular, we will attempt to determine whether the official discourses of the medical profession and the media converge or diverge from the actual experiences and perceptions of women with disabilities.

BODIES ON THE EDGE: INVOKING, ERASING, AND REWRITING THE NON-NORMATIVE BODY IN POPULAR CULTURE

Gem Rooms: Sapphire

Employing the non-normative female body as a point of inquiry, the “Bodies on the Edge” panel examines the ways in which representations of deviant, subaltern, and racialized corporeality in contemporary culture work to disrupt the production of social hierarchies. Each of the panel’s four papers - drawing respectively from the films Moulin Rouge and Bridget Jones, the reality program So You Think You Can Dance, and the autobiography Gender Outlaw - offers an interdisciplinary and intertextual assessment of the non-normative body, assessing both the transgressive potential and the limits of its representability in popular culture.

WOMEN OF COLOR, TESTIMONIAL WRITINGS, AND THE POWER OF VOICE

Gem Rooms: Turquoise A

This panel proposal gathers five students and one faculty member to discuss young female student leaders’ perspectives on testimonial writings by women of color, strategies of success, and the power of voice vis-à-vis the NWSA main topic: “Past Debates, Present Possibilities, Future Feminisms”. Young female student leaders from Nazareth College will address the debate analyzing information rendered by written testimonials (Gloria Anzaldúa, Rigoberta Menchú, Alicia Partnoy, and Margaret Randall, among others), visual testimonials (by Anne-Christine d’Adesky, Shanti Avigand and Ann T. Rossetti), as well as spoken testimonials (in Take Back the Night and other students-sponsored events).

066. Panel

FUTURE FEMINISMS: FOCUS ON WORKING-CLASS WOMEN

Gem Rooms: Turquoise B

The proposed panel will focus on the fight against marginalization by women workers past, present and future. The first two presentations explore perceptions of women laborers from Great Depression through World War II. The third presentation looks at the current situation of dual-earning families and discusses the implications of a more egalitarian division of household labor for working-class women in particular. Finally, the fourth presenter describes how the work-family dilemma for low-wage workers is about basics, not balance, and offers a solution that requires systemic change.

WHITE PRIVILEGE, TRANSNATIONAL FEMINISM

Legends: Jack Nicklaus

Panelists explore connections between feminist theory, field research and ethnography as pedagogy in deconstructing white privilege within the feminist classroom, using participant observation and student feedback within a critical thinking course about gender, race, and class; discuss “transnational feminism” and how they can provide a unique opportunity to affect international organizations and nation states precisely because they destabilize boundaries of race, nation, and gender; explore the silences about second wave American feminist protest in 1970’s scholarly writing and argue that feminist scholars, like activists, were/are embedded in contexts shaped by discursive understandings of what is significant with a view to a dialogical process of identification and remedying silences by mirroring the ways that activists continuously challenge hegemonic understandings.

ASIAN TRANSNATIONAL ADOPTION: GENDER, RACE, MATERNITY, LOSS, AND IDENTITY
New Orleans Ballroom

This panel will explore representations, contexts, and dynamics of American adoption from Korea and China, drawing on memoir, novel, ethnography, and history. It will compare two memoirs of raising young Chinese daughters with a novel about a family in which the transracially adopted daughters are teenagers, showing ways they negotiate adoption and their identity. It will consider the global power relations that situate the construction of adoptive identity, mothering and family. It will explore how feminist ideals of adoptive parents interact with the gendered and racialized nature of public discourse and practice within and around Asian to American adoptions.

FEMALE POLITICAL AND SOCIAL AGENCY IN THE EARLY MODERN PERIOD
St Charles Ballroom: Salon VI

Early modern theorists such as Joanna Lumley (ca. 1537-1576), Mary Sidney Herbert (1561-1621), Elizabeth Cary (1613-1680), Damaris Masham (1659-1708), and Mary Astell (1666-1731) wrote texts in which they argued for female political and social agency. This panel explores these thinkers' lives, educations, views, works and metaphors. It also asks why and how texts by these women theorists have been excluded from traditional academic canons.

END 8:00 AM SESSIONS
ENGAGING SCHOLARSHIP SESSIONS

The Engaging Scholarship Sessions are intended to devote time early in the conference to offering timely scholarly perspectives on the various conference themes. Speakers will discuss what they believe to be the most important concern(s), stance(s), and/or topic(s) on which women's and gender studies practitioners should focus their scholarly and activist agendas and why.

Engaging Scholarship Sessions are divided into two parts, with the first half of the session devoted to the invited speakers' prepared remarks.

In the second part, the audience will break out in discussion sections to explore the various themes and issues raised in the talk. The goal is to offer conference goers an opportunity to 1) engage the speakers' ideas more fully in the presence of others and to 2) network with those who share their interests in the topic under consideration.

The session will end with a brief summary of what the various break-out discussions covered and speakers' closing thoughts.

Laila Farah, DePaul University

Dr. Laila Farah is a Lebanese-American feminist performer-scholar. She attended Lebanese American University and Eastern Michigan University while working toward her BA in Theatre and Communication Arts.

She continued at Eastern Michigan University in order to complete her MA in Performance Studies and Communication and received her Doctorate in Performance Studies at Southern Illinois University.

Farah is currently an Assistant Professor in Women's Studies at DePaul University and working on future performance pieces in Chicago, as well as touring with her production of "Living in the Hyphen-Nation."

Her research interests include research with and the performance of "Third World" women and women of color, postcolonial identities and "alien-nation," and ethnographic and autoethnographic performance.
078. PAST DEBATES, PRESENT POSSIBILITIES, FUTURE FEMINISMS
St Charles Ballroom: Salon I/III/IV
Barbara Ransby, University of Illinois, Chicago

Barbara Ransby is a historian, writer, and longtime political activist. She received her B.A. from Columbia University in New York and her Ph.D in history from the University of Michigan, where she was a National Mellon Fellow. Ransby is currently an associate professor at the University of Illinois at Chicago in the Departments of African American Studies and History. She is a recipient of a national Ford Foundation Post-doctoral fellowship for 2000-2001 and numerous other recognitions and awards.

She is most notably the author of an award-winning biography of civil rights activist, Ella Baker, entitled Ella Baker and the Black Freedom Movement: A Radical Democratic Vision (University of North Carolina Press, 2003). The book has received 8 national awards and distinctions. Ransby is also the recipient of the prestigious Catherine Prelinger Scholarship Award for her overall contributions to women's history and her unconventional scholarly career. She is currently working on two major research projects; a study of African American feminist organizations in the 1970s, and a political biography of Eslanda Cardozo Goode Robeson.

In addition to her academic work, Ransby is also a freelance writer who has had articles published in major newspapers and magazines. She is a guest contributor to the program Eight Forty-Eight on WBEZ, and writes regularly for the Progressive Media Project, which distributes opinion editorials to Knight Ridder Newspapers around the country.

079. PERFORMING FEMINISMS
St Charles Ballroom: Salon II/V/VI
D. Soyini Madison and Mark Anthony Neal

D. Soyini Madison is associate professor of Communication Studies at the University of North Carolina in Chapel Hill. During 2006-07 she is visiting professor in the Department of Performance Studies at Northwestern University.

Her published works focus on performance practices and the intersections between global economy and local activism in sub-saharan Africa. Her teaching centers on critical performance ethnography, social movements, and the political economy of performance.

Madison is a Fulbright Scholar and lectured at the University of Ghana from 1998-2000. Her current book project, Acts of Activism: Human Rights and Radical Performances, is an examination of local Ghanaian activists and their performance tactics in the defense of human rights and social justice as these performances are influenced by globalization and national development.

Mark Anthony Neal is Associate Professor of Black Popular Culture in the program in African and African-American Studies and Director of the Institute for Critical U.S. Studies at Duke University.

Neal is also the co-editor (with Murray Forman) of That's the Joint: The Hip-Hop Studies Reader (2004). A regular commentator on NPR's "News & Notes", Neal blogs at http://newblackman.blogspot.com/

"WHAT COULD YOU POSSIBLY TEACH ME?" YOUNG WOMEN CHALLENGING FEMINISTS AS MENTORS AND MUSES
Gallery Hall: Chagall
Our four-person interdisciplinary panel centers on projects that seek to link universities to young women and girls through feminist mentoring efforts. We describe three outreach programs we run that link to middle-school girls, 11th-grade girls, and young college women. We engage a conversation between our experiences, feminist mentoring research, and exemplary practices, offering insights about application, challenges and breakthroughs, and further research and activist opportunities.

GIRL POWER OR "WILD THINGS?": READING GIRLS' FICTION FROM ELSIE DINSMORE TO GOSSIP GIRL
Gallery Hall: Picasso
Current girls' fiction has been described as morally inferior and damaging to young women by feminists such as Naomi Wolf. This panel explores girls' fiction within the context of girls' studies and girl culture, reading contemporary and older girls' fiction and the ways in which girls are represented. Individual papers address sexuality, mean girls, feminism, and compliance in books as varied as the Elsie Dinsmore series, the "Weetzie Bat" books, young adult chick lit, and other contemporary girls' fiction.

WOMEN OF COLOR IN STEM CAREERS; GIRLS AND MATHEMATICS

Gallery Hall: Utrillo

A new project funded by the National Science Foundation will systematically create a synthesis of the research and evaluation literatures and narratives of women of color in STEM careers. The proposed paper describes the goals and objectives of this new and unprecedented initiative, and the rich research opportunities it will provide. The second presentation investigates gender socialization within the field of mathematics, using a model involving a Women’s Studies Program and a Mathematics department, with an aim to making mathematics “a girl centered space.”

CHICANA FOUNDATIONS, GENERATIONS, TRANSFORMATIONS: A MOTHER-DAUGHTER DIALOGUE

Gem Rooms: Ruby

How did Chicanas in the 1960s and 1970s negotiate between their roles as mothers and their political commitments? How did daughters and mothers negotiate new kinds of feminist relationships in the midst of radical social change? And what do these feminist relationships reveal about the past and future of feminist thought and action? These are the central guiding questions of this roundtable, which brings together Chicanas Latina mothers and daughters for a cross-generational dialogue about activism, feminism, radical women’s history, motherhood (and daughterhood) and the consequences of our political commitments.

Some of the most innovative and enlivened feminist discourse going on today is not found in Ms. Magazine or NOW conference rooms or even, to be frank, in women’s studies departmental meetings. It is on the web. Blogs, podcasts, video documentaries and vlogs are redefining the way that feminism is expressed and received—not just here in America, but globally. TEACHING GENDER STUDIES IN AN AFRICAN UNIVERSITY: PROSPECTS AND CHALLENGES

Gender Studies as a discipline is gradually being accepted in Africa. The study of Gender though elicits reactions from so many quarters on the issues of religion, morality, culture and at times the fear of ‘Imperialism’. However, younger Africans are finding gender Studies as an avenue to challenge old beliefs and views. The Faculty of Law, University of Lagos has recently introduced Gender & the Law to the Curricular, the idea being to gauge the perception of future lawyers on Gender Issues. The Panel will address the prospects of this new venture and also the obstacles confronted by some colleagues and students.

CREAMING THE CROP: WHEN HOSTILE CONFLICT IMPEDES FEMINIST MENTORSHIP

Gem Rooms: Turquoise B

Feminist mentorship is a cornerstone of Women’s/Gender Studies programs and Women’s Centers on university campuses; however, many students (and faculty) experience aggression, hostility, competition, and power struggles as unfortunate components of their mentor/mentee relationships. This presentation will explore the dimensions of feminist mentorship by: presenting a case study to illustrate the hostile and aggressive dynamics between “second wave” mentors and their “third wave” mentees; discussing the possible causes of intergenerational competition and aggression between women within the feminist movement; and describing the ways in which intergenerational conflict differs from peer-conflict in regard to the progression of the feminist movement.

PERFORMANCE

MegaCenter & Lobby: Exhibit performance

Miriam Reed, Independent Scholar

This one-woman theatrical performance “Louisa May Alcott: Living Little Women” takes Alcott’s personal and published writings as the script for the story of her life. Her story illustrates the power of one woman to overcome the constraints imposed on women by nineteenth-century society, the personal cost of doing so, and the lingering effects of her personal and artistic accomplishment in the nineteenth century on the lives of women in the twenty-first century.

ACCESS DENIED: A BLACK FEMINIST CRITIQUE OF THE RACIAL POLITICS OF CONSUMPTION AS A SUBSTITUTE FOR CITIZENSHIP

Courtney Walton, University of Cincinnati

My poster will explore the relationship between African-Americans, and access to desire. I will specifically be focusing on consumption as a system of exclusion that, still, however, manages to be successful at being presented as a substitute for citizenship rights. I will be examining the case of Hurricane Katrina from a black feminist perspective; critiquing exclusion, refraining from a demand for inclusion.

UNDERSTANDING “EVERYDAY COLORISM” IN THE LIVES OF YOUNG BLACK WOMEN

JeffriAnne Wilder, University of Florida

This research examines the perceived role of black men in perpetuating colorism among black women. Previous research on colorism conducted by the author reveals that black women perceived black men as an integral influence in the competition and bias among black women based upon skin color. The current study explores data generated from separate focus groups of black women and men in an effort to better understand the ways in which gender affects colorism in the lives of black women and black men, and the roles men are perceived to play in causing division among women in black communities.
“(RE)READING INTERSECTIONALITY AS A HEURISTIC: THE CASE OF BLACK MALE CRISIS NARRATIVE TEXTS.”

Keisha Lindsay, University of Chicago

That black males are “endangered” is a common theme in popular and academic texts in the U.S. and the U.K. Central to these texts, alternatively referred to as black male crisis narrative texts, is the presumption that black males are in crisis. I argue, first, that in constructing black men in this manner, crisis narrative authors broaden the boundaries of the intersectionally oppressed to include heterosexual black men. I further suggest these authors reject established understandings of intersectionality by revealing that intersectional theorizing can be anti-feminist and by demonstrating how interlocking social categories privilege and oppress the same social actors.

WOMEN WHO KILL: MODERN ANGLOPHONE WRITERS OF AFRICA DEBATE FEMINISM, WOMANISM, AND AFRICANA WOMANISM

Jaclyn Cruikshank, University of Nebraska-Lincoln

Amidst claims that female murders are rare, both in and outside of literature, such women surface repeatedly in the works of Modern Anglophone writers from Africa. Fictionalized depictions of women who kill play an important role in conveying the activist agendas of Modern Anglophone writers. Through the portraits of such murderous women, we can gain insight into the current debate surrounding the woman question in Modern African women’s literature. Such texts clearly serve as a rallying force, a call for “all exploited peoples everywhere” to assert themselves against the dominating forces that threaten both silence and exploitation.

MY BODY, MY LOVE, MY RELIGION: SOMATIC LIBRATORY PRACTICES WITHIN AFRICAN AMERICAN POST-COLONIAL SACRED DANCE

Loretta Green, California Institute of Integral Studies

The African American faith community has recently produced emancipatory female somatic movement through liturgical dance acceptance. I define liturgical dance as “outward somatic expression of one’s love for God; total somatic praise through fluid movement and continuous dance patterns that are considered within musical inspiration.” While dance can be considered ancient in observation, post-colonial liturgical dance enables the female dancer to uniquely express her faith, thus providing her with sociospatial empowerment that is supported through womanist theology. As a “Black Feminist and Womanist” panelist, I will examine black female somatic sociohistorical issues within the African American faith community.

THE WOMEN OF HIZBALLAH

Rawda Awwad, American University of Kuwait

An understudied aspect of the global debate on Islam is how the ideological and doctrinal distinctions amongst Islamist movements give rise to different attitudes about gender issues, and the role that Muslim women adopt in these movements, which have been oversimplified at best. My poster is a case-study about the women in Hizballah, Lebanon, and focuses on their role and experiences within the movement. I will investigate to what extent the women in Hizballah are mere passive consumers of ideology, and whether or not Hizballah, as a revolutionary Islamist movement, provides opportunities for an emerging Islamic feminist agenda.

ASIAN-AMERICAN WOMEN: CONSTRUCTIONS, RE/CONSTRUCTIONS, & DE/CONSTRUCTIONS OF BEAUTY & COSMETIC SURGERY

Diana Rhodes, University of Nevada, Las Vegas

The purpose of this research is to open a dialogue concerning Asian American women, beauty constructs, and cosmetic surgery. Asian American women hold a unique position in American society being the exotified “other”, negatively stereotyped, and being under and misrepresented in mainstream media. This research is a feminist exploration to give Asian American women a voice in their experiences negotiating their physical beauty in a society that rarely accurately represents their experiences. I am focusing on a few major themes: beauty ideals, constructions, and cosmetic surgery within the Asian American community.

WHO WILL SING OUR SONGS FOR US? EXAMINING THE GENDERED IMPACT OF INTERNATIONAL MIGRATION AND THE REDEFINED ROLES OF AFRICAN WOMEN

Josephine Jarpa Dawuni, Georgia State University

This poster will examine the theoretical and empirical implications of gendered migration through the following. First, by looking at the internal and external causes of migration, second, the categories of migration and third the consequences of such migration on women as givers of labor and their susceptibility to violence and human trafficking. Though migration provides an avenue for income for women and remittances for family members, these women are nonetheless confronted with many institutional, legal and social barriers which continue to marginalize their rights and reduce their productivity in the receiving countries.

PEDAGOGY
St Charles Ballroom: Salon III

The proposed panel aims to re/articulate possibilities and into academia by critically examining concrete practices sited in different geographical, sociocultural and economic spaces.

From disparate locations, disciplines and capacities, four papers on the panel unfold various ways in which this theoretical and methodological perspective is incorporated into academic practices. In addition, each paper presents critical examination of possibilities and challenges in creating a space for transnational feminist pedagogical practices in academia. The panel hopes to generate earnest conversations about rationale and strategies for promoting these and other transnational feminist efforts in

FEMINIST LENSES ON CONTEMPORARY CRAFTS
St Charles Ballroom: Salon V

This panel investigates contemporary crafts as traditions of the past that women revisit, reclaim, and revise to better understand how these crafts are re-emerging as feminist artistic expression.
Domestic arts as “women’s work” engages a long history of devolution within our society. This panel investigates the social constructs that make such devaluing possible, while simultaneously exploring the ways in which women reclaim these acts as feminist art forms. This reclamation must be recognized and examined as feminist critique of a patriarchal society to appreciate how “women’s work” is able to subvert such a society.

CONSTRUCTING FEMINIST HOSPITALITY

Broadway Ballroom: Broadway A

The world can be an inhospitable place. Despite the apparent necessity, hospitality remains relatively unexplored as a political ideal. Current debates over immigration intensify the need for clarifying and expanding the role of hospitality in interpersonal and international relations. A distinct notion of “feminist hospitality” is particularly underdeveloped and perhaps for good reasons given the historical burdens placed on women in the name of hospitality. Because feminists confront issues of inclusion, boundaries, and border crossings, hospitality is an appropriate and warranted avenue for feminist exploration. This panel will engage in an inquiry into the notion and possibility of feminist hospitality.

THIRD WAVE FEMINIST WRITING: A TRANSNATIONAL PERSPECTIVE

Broadway Ballroom: Broadway B

This panel discusses theories and practices of third wave feminist writing from a transnational feminist perspective. We seek to examine interconnections and network exchanges between Western and Third-World women in the context of third wave feminism. In particular, we are interested in exploring the interlocking forces of class, race, ethnicity, sexualities, and nation that inform and restructure a woman’s identity when she moves across borders. This panel intends to initiate a platform for dialogue among feminist scholars so that we may build stronger transnational alliance.

FEMINIST ENGAGEMENTS WITH RACIALIZATION AND MIGRATION
Gem Rooms: Ruby

Examining varied feminist interdisciplinary approaches to the interarticulations of racialization and migration, we ask: How do past and present feminist methodologies allow us to examine patterns of migration and racialization? What future possibilities exist in the formulation of new approaches? We deploy feminist theoretical frameworks and methodologies in three studies of migration that focus on different time periods and varying economic, social, and political contexts. Highlighting the importance of existing feminist methodologies, we demonstrate that these frameworks are necessarily transformed in the process of engaging complex mappings of multiple processes of racialization and migration.

AN EMPIRICAL DECONSTRUCTION OF THE TWO-SEX/TWO GENDER PARADIGM

Kand S McQueen, Indiana University

There are presumably two and only two kinds of people in the world: men and women. This work posits that the mutually exclusive and collectively exhaustive categories of male and female fail to adequately describe that part of human experience collectively referred to as sex and gender. In and of itself, this is not a new idea as the inadequacy of the binary approach has been disputed on abstract, theoretical, and philosophical levels before. This study, however, provides what is believed to be a first attempt to empirically deconstruct the gender binary by means of quantitative data.

SEXY MONSTERS: THE PAINFUL RHETORIC OF TRANS-AS-TRANSSEXUAL-ONLY

Kai Kohlsdorf, University of Cincinnati

The problematics of transmasculine desire and sexuality result from an essentialist and heteronormative rhetoric and discourse in which no trans bodies except those which are already surgically 'fixed' are acceptable bodies with which to enact desire. How their necessarily divergent sexualities are exacted can then serve to deconstruct the surgical imperative that surrounds trans discourse as well as the heteronormative bounds of identities that limit understanding the diverse array of trans sexualities.
Revisiting Cherrie Moraga’s Loving in the War Years: A Case of Postmodern/Postcolonial Hysteria?

Timothy P. Gaster, University of Chicago

The feminist movement in the U.S. has tended to overlook Cherrie Moraga’s Loving in the War Years or to assimilate it into a more universal perspective on female equality which tends to ignore class and race distinctions. I view Moraga’s situation in U.S. society as causing her hysteria. Her moment of writing is a session of psychoanalysis. By reading the text this way, I take emphasis away from the idea of a universal identity of the female, and I am able to argue that what the text really presents the reader with is a heteroglossic moment of unpressed language.

A RADICAL FEMINIST POLITICAL THEORY

Claudia Leeb, University of Chicago

In this poster I introduce the Lacanian concept of the Real and the Adornian concept of the non-identical in the context of the larger theoretical framework of these thinkers to defend my argument that these concepts imply a radical dimension for a feminist political theory.

INTERSECTIONAL FEMINIST DISABILITY THEORY AND PRACTICE: THE FUTURE OF WOMEN’S STUDIES

Angel Love Miles, University of Maryland, College Park

This poster presentation explores how Women’s Studies as an interdisciplinary field can incorporate a disability perspective into its analysis of gender and social inequality. Through examining the literature, and developing an intersectional feminist disability framework, I argue that an intersectional analysis of disability is most beneficial for feminist disability research. This discussion will allow Women’s Studies, Disability Studies and a variety of disciplines to imagine more possibilities for future inquiry and further development of feminist disability theory and practice.

CO-LOCATED AND COLLABORATIVE: WOMEN’S & GENDER STUDIES WITHIN A WOMEN’S CENTER

Sheila Hassell Hughes, University of Dayton
Lisa Rismiller, University of Dayton

This poster explores the challenges and possibilities for collaboration between women’s studies programs and campus women’s centers. Drawing from research and observation of other campuses, we overview the history and dynamics of such relationships. Rismiller and Hughes direct, respectively, the Women’s Center and the Women’s and Gender Studies Program at the University of Dayton, where we have formed a close and successful working relationship. We present the history of our two entities, provide examples of our most successful collaborative programs, and discuss the pros and cons of physical co-location. The poster highlights our two distinctive perspectives on the relationship.

TRANSFORMING MEAN GIRL DISCOURSE: IMPLICATIONS FOR GIRL STUDIES

Tracy L. Smith, Indiana State University

This poster will discuss how aggression among girls has become center discourse in western society as well as perceptions of feminism among girls, the role of feminism in this rhetoric surrounding mean girls, and future directions for girl studies. The socially constructed nature of girl relational violence, discourse of girl aggressive behaviors, patriarchy’s role in pitting girls against each other, and the role of girls in transforming this dialogue will also be discussed. Dialogue between the audience and the panel will be elicited to discuss implications for understanding these phenomena and transforming mean girls discourse in girl studies.

WOMEN WRITING RESISTANCE IN AFRICA & THE AFRICAN DIASPORA; SPONSORED BY THE NWSA INTERNATIONAL TASK FORCE

New Orleans Ballroom

This panel will explore some of the ways that African women, at home and in the diaspora, have used writing as a tool of resistance to the multiple challenges and oppressions they face today. Presenters will focus on the transition from oral storytelling to written literature; cultural continuity and change as expressed in music and theater; and poetry as a form of resistance writing. The panel will provide a space for African women writers and scholars to discuss the important socio-political challenges faced today by African women in general and African women writers in particular.

FROM IRAQ TO ISRAEL-PALESTINE: WOMEN’S AGENCY AND PEACE ACTIVISM
St Charles Ballroom: Salon IV
A performance based on three interweaving stories: my mother’s experiences in Baghdad in the 1930s; Iraqi women’s struggles for survival in the face of injustice and war; and my own peace activism, particularly in Women in Black. At the conclusion, two respondents will reflect on issues of women’s agency and activism raised by the piece: the first, as a Jewish feminist peace activist in a Midwest community, and the second, as a Jewish feminist peace activist addressing the Israeli-Palestinian conflict in a period of increased violence and suffering. The moderator will lead discussion with the audience.

FEMINIST ADMINISTRATORS: LOOKING FOR MS. MENTOR IN HIGHER ED
St Charles Ballroom: Salon VI
Usually, when the topic of mentoring is raised at NWSA the discussion is largely focused on the need for faculty mentors—both for Women’s Studies graduate students and junior faculty members. While the demand for this type of mentoring is certainly important, this panel will focus on a different aspect of academic mentoring: the search for feminist mentors in higher education administration. Each of the three panelists will explore different aspects of administrative mentoring, and will explain their personal and political assessments of why this type of relationship is particularly critical for Women’s Studies scholars-practitioners.

125. PRESIDENTIAL SESSION: HIP HOP FEMINISM
St Charles Ballroom: Salon V

Elaine Richardson, Pennsylvania State University
Moderators: camil williams, veronica precious bohanan, AquaMoon

Dr. Elaine Richardson is an Associate Professor of English and Applied Linguistics at Pennsylvania State University. Richardson, aka “Dr. E” has published several books. Her first book is entitled African American Literacies, a significantly revised version of her dissertation, focusing on teaching writing from the point of view of African American Language and Literacy traditions. Her most recent book is Hiphop Literacies, a study of Hiphop language use as an extension of Black folk traditions.

The book she is currently writing describes her experiences growing up as a girl from the hood of Cleveland, Ohio getting into the street life and how she climbed out of the underworld to further her education and become who she is today. That book is entitled PhD to PhD—from Po Ho on Dope to PhD: The Literacy Narrative of Dr. Elaine Richardson.

Richardson has also co-edited two volumes on African American rhetorical theory and one recently published anthology by artists, writers, scholars, and diverse women on Hiphop Feminism—Home Girls Make Some Noise.

In 2004, she was Fulbright lecturing/researcher at the University of the West Indies, Mona Jamaica. She is the single mother of three daughters: Evelyn, Ebony and Kalla. She is also an adviser to the African American Support Group, a high school extracurricular group that focuses on Black empowerment and higher education. Finally, Dr. E is a singer-songwriter and recording artist, using her voice to reach people who might be down, but not out.

CONTEXTS OF MASCULINITIES: FROM THE GLOBAL TO THE LOCAL
Broadway Ballroom: Broadway A

Varying global and local contexts shape men and women, boys and girls. These nuanced landscapes are explored through juxtapositions of history, geography, and culture in the US and Bangladesh. The role that feminist theory plays in men's studies in the US is examined through a historical lens. This backdrop illuminates intersections of patriarchy and gendered sexual identities for young American men today. Also documents the acute gendering of the anally emitting body in discourse, and analyzes that gendering through a revisionist reading of Freud.

GIRL POWER AS GENDER SUBVERSION: QUESTIONABLE SELF-DETERMINATION IN FEMALE ACTION HEROISM, PROFESSIONALISM, AND COMPULSIVE HETEROSEXUALITY
Gallery Hall: Gauguin

Weaving Loom versus Sword: Gender as Labor in Cross-Cultural Drag between Mulan and Ally McBeal Action heroism in Mulan reveals neither hypersexualizing nor distorting femininity amount to empowerment. Dovetailing into Madonna-whore dichotomy, I synthesize culture-specific and universal gender as outsider-within. Social construction means erasure of voices in indigenous characters, as does visual narratives in young women's magazines essentializing "girl power" as sexual free will. Mulan whose legend serves exotic storyline for Western feminist fantasy silences humanism that defies gender dimorphism. Ally McBeal her contemporary opposite, presents a walking contradiction of other stereotypes in professionalism contexts, modeling their reduction via psychological androgyny.

A campus with limited resources can nevertheless provide services for women students and faculty in science, technology, engineering, and mathematics (STEM). The Women’s Studies program can encourage female students to enroll in STEM courses and foster grant-writing, curriculum development, and retention of female faculty in STEM fields. A Women in Science course teaches about gender in scientific research and offers models of female scientists. A Calculus I class designed around research on women’s ways of learning successfully builds community and promotes self-efficacy among women for whom the course might otherwise be a barrier to careers in STEM fields.

BREAST CANCER AND ART: LEGACIES OF HOPE
Gallery Hall: Vermeer
Many of the thousands of women diagnosed with breast cancer each year aid their road to recovery through art. Sometimes the artist is also an activist. Art can have a powerful influence on the creator and the viewer. The presentation will include personal responses in the form of images that breast cancer inspired in both professional and amateur artists who have struggled with the disease. These will be discussed within the historical context of the expanding activism demanding further funding to find the cause and a cure for breast cancer.

AFRICAN AMERICAN, FEMINIST, AND LESBIAN LEADERS’ EXPERIENCES IN HIGHER EDUCATION ADMINISTRATION: MARGINALITY, POSITIONALITY, AND VOICE
Gem Rooms: Coral
The experiences of African American, feminist, and lesbian leaders in higher education remain under-explored and underrepresented in the literature. Previous research has traditionally grouped all women together as if their experiences are fundamentally the same. Three feminist researchers, through phenomenological studies, have begun to articulate these previously silenced perspectives. In this panel, we would like to bring these perspectives to light and explore how multiple identities shape and further complicate the experiences of these women in the academy.

EXTENDING FEMINIST THEORIZING AND ANALYSIS FOR CURRENT AND FUTURE WORK ON MARGINALIZED SEXUAL SUBJECTIVITIES

Gem Rooms: Turquoise B

This panel explores strategic use of various feminist theories and thought (on race, work and intimacy) to advance future understandings and possible conceptualizations of marginal sexual subjectivities. We offer suggestions for ways feminist theorizing about race can be used to both critique and extend sexuality scholarship. We discuss ways in which feminist writings on work and emotional labor can illuminate lived experiences of the women partners of transmen (female-to-male transgender-identified persons). We also explore how feminist notions of intimacy and romantic relationships can provide frameworks for understanding asexuality as a subject identity in a relational context.

MegaCenter & Lobby: Exhibit performance

Kimberly Dark, California State University, San Marcos

"Stripped and Teased: Scandalous Stories with Subversive Subplots" is a theatre performance that illuminates topics such as able body image, cultural beauty norms, the social construction of gender and the economics of being female. The show does this through engaging and humorous stories and performance poetry that are based on real-life experiences – ethnographic and autoethnographic data. The session will include performed excerpts from the show, with the interactive portions focused on the specific audience of NWSA in discussion of performance as a feminist pedagogy and how that's working, using the show itself as a departure for discussion.

DECONSTRUCTING HILLARY RODHAM CLINTON: A POSTFEMINIST PERCEPTION OF RODHAM'S GENDER PERFORMANCE PORTRAYALS

Dawn Marie Dennise McIntosh, California State University, Fresno

Although extreme traditional gender expectations are decreasing, there still exists a hierarchy that expects certain "sexes" to enact particular gender performances, and those that challenge these roles receive punishment. A particular example of this resonates in an artifact that pictures Hillary Rodham's face on a popular movie icon Rambo. This essay utilizes postmodern feminism (De Rida, 1967; Butler, 1988; 1990; 1992; 1993) as a lens to deconstruct two possible interpretations of the picture. The dominant reading of the text perpetuates binary gender norms, further subjecting "women" to oppression; whereas the resistant reading traces gender and deconstructs the binary hierarchies that exist within this patriarchal society.

Forever a Victim: The Lack of Visible Agency in Anti-Sexual Assault Material

Lauren Benatti, Roosevelt University

This poster presents material given to both survivors of sexual assault and members of the general community. This poster provides an analysis of the depiction of the women used in these materials and shows how these pictures lack any visible agency. This poster shows that women are portrayed as helpless victims who cannot take an active part in their own resistance. I argue that by providing material to survivors that show women as helpless these organizations are sending the message that they cannot be empowered. The pictures in this material support the idea that sexual assault victims are defenseless.

MERGING MARKET AND FAMILY: GENDERED BURDENS AND THE LIMITATIONS OF TITLE VII
Sara L. Zeigler, Eastern Kentucky University
Kendra Stewart, Eastern Kentucky University

This poster examines the impact of Title VII in equalizing the burdens employees face in compensation, with specific attention to non-monetary compensation, such as benefits and leave policies. We argue that although Title VII has enjoyed some success in allowing women to compete with male co-workers for advancement, significant discrimination continues to exist in terms of the absence of family-friendly programs and policies in most workplaces. The poster concludes by examining the efficacy of model programs and offering recommendations for employers seeking to equalize working conditions for male and female employees.

WHITE RACIAL PROGRESSIVES: DO WOMEN’S RACIAL ATTITUDES EXTEND TO IMMIGRATION?
Charlotte A. Kunkel, Luther College
Corissa Jean Sojka, Luther College

Racial attitudes and racism in the US have long been the foci of sociological study. In this poster we explore the contention that white racial progressives are more likely to be young, female, and working class. Using data from a 2006 racial attitudes and actions survey we explore attitudes toward affirmative action, interracial marriage, and racism. In addition, we examine how these attitudes are bolstered by behaviors that illustrate interracial interactions, and we extend analyses to include attitudes toward immigration.

COMPOSING GENDER AND SEXUALITY: READERS, WRITERS, AND (TRANS)FORMATIVE LITERACY ACTS
Erin Wyble, The Pennsylvania State University;
Jessica torten Raley, The Pennsylvania State University

These two poster presentations, submitted together because of their intersecting themes, examine adolescent and young adult interactions with texts that explicitly address issues of gender and sexuality. Dr. Wyble examines reading journals from post-secondary writers engaging with religious discourses and sacred texts that address issues of gender and sexuality. Raley looks to adolescent and young adult literature dealing with LGBT themes and proposes strategies for addressing the challenges and significance of teaching such literature in secondary-school contexts.

FEMALE GENITAL MUTILATION: THE WAY OF THE RITUAL OF DEATH
Abeer Ahmed Ibrahim, University of Colorado at Colorado Springs

Around the world, over 130 million women and girls have undergone one of several procedures broadly classified as Female Genital Mutilation (FGM), and every year, two million more are at risk. Efforts to prevent FGM have had minimal success, mostly because the traditions surrounding the practice are extremely complex. In order to sort through the problem, the present research focuses on just one of the many factors that have contributed to the prevalence of the problem: the erroneous idea that FGM is required by Islam especially in rural Egypt.

DIVINELY FEMINIST: HOW SPIRITUAL EXPERIENCES HAVE SHAPED FEMINIST MOVEMENTS IN THE U.S.
Alka Arora, University of Washington

This poster traces the role of spiritual thought in feminist theory-making in the US, interrogates the suppression of this thought in the secular academy, and, finally, offers some insights into the possibility of new, non-essentialist, spiritual feminist theory. These insights are the product of research dialogues among “third-wave” spiritual feminists. These feminists are at the forefront of articulating and living new ways of doing feminism, ways that integrate the personal, rational, extra-rational, and political.

GLOBAL TENSIONS, LOCAL RESPONSES: WOMEN’S MOVEMENTS IN MALAYSIA
Marjon Kamrani, University of Cincinnati

Members of various Malaysian women's organizations have worked within state and religious establishments to successfully challenge Shar'ia family law using communitarian arguments. Working at a distance from global women's organizations, they conceive of rights outside the western liberal tradition of individualism. The poster examines struggles by local women's organizations in majority Muslim countries to reform Shar'ia law. Local women led efforts to re-interpret existing law with examples of: 1.) resistances to "NGO-ization" (Alvarez, 1998) of women's movements; 2.) interrogations of a more critical understanding of human rights re-structuring; and 3.) constructions of the patriarchal hegemonies among Muslim communities.

‘HOORAY FOR MIDDLEDGE SPREAD’ EXPANDING AND EXTENDING A THIRTY-Four-YEAR-OLD WOMEN’S STUDIES PROGRAM
New Orleans Ballroom

This panel will explore strategies for reinvigorating long-established women's studies programs. The presenters will weigh the benefits of expanding a curriculum into new areas, such as Material Culture Studies, while extending its reach through Study Abroad and other methods of moving feminist learning beyond both academic and national boundaries. They will also raise questions about how to deal with new challenges, such as issues of “assessment” and “accountability,” that all programs are facing in the current U.S. political climate.

Migration is a common theme in white-dominated popular women's fiction - characters move from rural to urban areas, as the development of cosmopolitan mobility, knowledge, and "taste" signify a heroine's maturation. In women of color subgenres, however, migration and mobility have multiple and complex meanings, as such movements across space are enmeshed in racialized histories and experiences of displacement, exile, and economic dislocation. This session complicates dominant conversations about women's genre fiction by asking how women of color chick lit and popular fiction engage gender, sexuality, and im/migration in ways that are mediated by ethnicity, race, class, citizenship, and globalization.

WINNING THE VOTE: A PROFESSIONAL DEVELOPMENT SERIES ON THE SUFFRAGE MOVEMENT
St Charles Ballroom: Salon IV

This proposal for a panel presentation is based on a National Endowment for the Humanities sponsored professional development series for teachers on the U.S. suffrage movement. The series was designed to show teachers the social and political implications of the movement through primary documents, scholarly readings, historical reenactment, and literature. We hoped to expand teacher knowledge of a significant event in American history and provide instructional strategies for integrating this information into their classrooms. Along with an overview of the series, four series participants will present papers on the project they created and taught based on what they learned.

MEDICAL RHETORIC: AMPUTATING THE UTERUS DOES NOT PREVENT UTERINE ORGASM, RIGHT?
St Charles Ballroom: Salon V

Every thirty seconds of every minute of every day a woman's sex organs are removed. This presentation will establish the background and current medical, political, social and economic environment of an important issue confronting women today: Hysterectomy. How can Women's Studies programs access the information required to make this issue an educational imperative? This panel will discuss and provide the foundation for incorporating Hysterectomy and Female Castration into the curriculum. Women's Studies is in a unique position to help stop this shameful practice from being the legacy of the next generation of girls and women by educating students and colleagues.

TAKING BACK THE CONVERSATION: INTERDISCIPLINARITY, CRITICAL THINKING, AND FEMINIST PEDAGOGY

Gem Rooms: Jade

Feminist educators have struggled to make interdisciplinary courses "work," but ideological and practical problems persist. Interdisciplinary education is often absent of feminist analysis, pedagogy, theory and may lack a context for liberating thinking. Women's studies as a discipline must now claim its own curriculum, develop that curriculum in-house as both feminist and interdisciplinary, and ensure that women and gender are at the center of the curriculum. Women's Studies programs may be the last space in the university where education for democracy, critical thinking, and liberation of the student, is as much a goal as the teaching of the subject.

THE MESSAGE BEHIND THE MADNESS: SELLING ABSTINENCE, MARRIAGE AND HAPPY EVER AFTER

Gem Rooms: Ruby

This roundtable will discuss the nuanced and hegemonic rhetoric used to promote and justify two current and costly federal programs that developed from the 1996 Welfare Reform Act: Abstinence-Only-Until-Marriage education and the Healthy Marriages Initiative. We will expose the anti-woman and anti-LGBTQ motivation for advancing specific religious and political ideology. Namely, that girls should remain hymenal virgins until marriage and "mutually faithful monogamous marriage is the expected standard of human sexual behavior" (part of the current welfare law's infamous eight-point definition for what constitutes a fundable abstinence program).

In Coming of Age in Academe, Jane Roland Smith calls for women in the academy to support each other. Creating professional capital is crucial for female academics, particularly new and junior faculty. This roundtable discusses practical ways that women academics can mentor each other, collaborate (across departments, disciplines and institutions), and support one another as we develop our professional identities and learn to lead the academy. This session begins with four short talks about different aspects of developing professional identity, then moves into break-out groups and discussion designed to develop additional strategies for building professional capital.

This presentation will provide the necessary information about removal of the female organs to make it an educational imperative. Because the public is largely unaware that hysterectomy has continued at the same rate for decades, hysterectomy is viewed by many as a “past debate,” but the “present possibilities” of avoiding millions of unwarranted, damaging surgeries belongs in all “future feminisms.”

GIRLS' HISTORY ONLINE: EXPLORING FEMINISM, DIVERSITY, AND TECHNOLOGY THROUGH A MULTIMEDIA ORAL HISTORY PROJECT
Susan Freeman, Minnesota State University Mankato

Based on oral history projects conducted with undergraduate students between 2004 and 2006, this presentation assesses the ways in which group projects requiring students to use multimedia technology serve different goals in Women's Studies. The “Coming of Age in the Twentieth Century” project and website illustrate how students gain opportunities for learning about the lives of girls in the past while also acquiring experience with feminist research, affirmative action, and technological tools.

LESSONS IN LIBERATION: CITIZENSHIP, ACTIVISM, AND INDEPENDENCE IN 1970'S GIRL CULTURE
Kirsten Marie Pike, Northwestern University

In this poster, I examine the ways that teen television and magazines of the 1970s, including The Partridge Family, Good Times, and Seventeen, intertwined ideas about the new, feminist womanhood and traditional femininity. Specifically, I explore how protest themes encouraged girls to cultivate modern ideas about citizenship and activism alongside more traditional views of femininity, domesticity, and consumption. Despite race and class differences among girls represented in these media, activist narratives suggested that all girls could participate as citizens in a changing democracy as long as they upheld the ideals of feminine beauty and consented to patriarchal resolutions when problem-solving.

MOMMY FEMINIST: INTERGENERATIONAL CONFLICT IN CONTEMPORARY GIRLS’ FICTION

Gwen Athene Tarbox, Western Michigan University

I analyze Meg Cabot's The Princess Diaries and Susan Juby's Alice series, both of which incorporate descriptions of relationship faux pas and shopping expeditions, with an obsessive concern regarding weight and a guilt-complex regarding femininity. The central antagonist in these texts is the "feminist mom," whose second-wave feminist ideas are parodied or are only grudgingly accorded respect. I conclude that Cabot and Juby's portrayal of intergenerational feminist dialogue downplays the challenges that girls face in a culture that encourages them to focus so exclusively on the maintenance of their bodies, potentially at the expense of cultivating their intellects.

GADGET AGE GIRLS AND ANXIOUS ADULTS: THE UNEASY ORIGINS OF BABYSITTING IN THE U.S.

Minam Forman-Brunell, University of Missouri-Kansas City

This poster traces the apprehensions of middle-class adults as well as the ambivalences of teenage girls about babysitting from its origins during the 1920s through WWII. I examine how the expanding autonomy of teenage girls who practiced, negotiated, and contested gendered identities through wage earning and teen consumerism provoked anxiety in experts, employers, and other adults. I also examine how poor labor practices cemented during the Depression led wartime babysitters to seek out new opportunities for employment and entertainment. Alarmed by wartime female social and sexual autonomy, wartime experts tried but failed to recruit an "army" of teenage babysitters.

A FEMINIST GENEALOGY PROJECT: INTEGRATING TECHNOLOGY WITH FEMINIST SCHOLARSHIP

Rebecca Anne Bates, Minnesota State University Mankato
Cheryl Lynn Rodeloff, Minnesota State University Mankato

This pilot study collected anonymous data about the types of relationships members of the academic women's studies and activist feminist community have with each other. The information collected will be used to help conceptualize the links that will be used in an online resource which will be manifested in the form of a relational database. The resource will include contemporary scholars and authors and trace relationships between scholars and mentors, collaborators and working communities.

(IN)BETWEEN SPACES: HYPHENS, BRIDGES, AND BORDERS IN ANZALDÚA, VEGA AND DIAZ

St Charles Ballroom: Salon II

This panel offers a (re)conceptualization of space in the works of two women writers of color: Gloria Anzaldúa, and Ana Lydia Vega, and male writer Junot Diaz. By focusing on the (in)between spaces of hyphehs, bridges, and borders, these authors transcend traditional Western dichotomies of body/mind, rational/irrational, prose/poetry in order to locate women's identity in the interstices. We will explore the methods in which language, parody, and humor serve to deconstruct the metanarratives of their respective national histories. Diaz' strategies to engage with and the use of womanism are also explored.

INVESTIGATING MARGINAL SPACES: WOMEN AS CULTURAL PRODUCERS

St Charles Ballroom: Salon IV

How do women producers of popular culture create space for resistance and agency within male dominated communicative mediums? Mainstream media are often regarded as malestream and exclusive. However, in our investigation of various aspects of popular culture, we find that these female producers provide agency and resistance for women. That is, we understand women as cultural producers - romance novel authors, women hip hop artists, and feminist bloggers - that are all challenging the exclusivity of supposedly mainstream media. Our panel focuses on the legitimate transformative and feminist possibilities for the aforementioned cultural producers in the marginal space.

THE EDUCATIONAL ENVIRONMENT OF WOMEN'S CENTERS IN RESEARCH INSTITUTIONS
St Charles Ballroom: Salon V
This panel discusses the ways in which Women's Centers in research institutions contribute to the educational environment. How do we reach our constituents? How do students develop their perspectives of the roles of Women's Studies and Women's Centers and the relationship between these units? What is the relationship and in what ways could it be more productive? What challenges exist in working within a feminist model in an environment, or with students, who are not open to that approach? How do Women's Centers actualize the academic mission and educational outcomes of their institution in serving the needs of their constituents?

Aqua Moon is the writing, performance, and artistic team of camill williams and veronica precious bohanan, an entity of SpokenExistence, Inc. We bridge the gap between the streets, hip-hop feminism, performance activism, and academia. We are a voice for disenfranchised womyn and youth, until they are empowered to assert themselves and use their own voice. We generate and disseminate new discourse and dialogue on womyn and gender issues. AquaMoon works with educational and community-based organizations to effect social change that will result in greater equality, freedom, and fuller lives for womyn and youth.

Daisy Hernández writes personal essays, fiction and poetry. A Cubana-Colombiana, she is Managing Editor of ColorLines, the national newsmagazine on race and politics. Her writing focuses on race, gender, sexuality, and other issues affecting young women of color. Born and raised in New Jersey, she received a B.A. in English from William Paterson College in 1997 and an M.A. in Journalism and Latin American Studies from New York University in 2001. She is the coeditor of Colonize This! Young Women of Today’s Feminism (Seal Press, 2002). She has written for the New York Times, Ms. Magazine, and other publications. Her writing can also be found in the anthology Border-Line Personalities: A New Generation of Latinas Dish on Sex, Sass, and Cultural Shifting (Harper, 2004).

Barbara K. Ige is the Program Director for the National Science Foundation’s Alliance for Graduate Education and the Professoriate at the University of California, Los Angeles. Prior to her arrival at UCLA’s Graduate Division, she was an Assistant Professor at the University of Hawai‘i, Manoa, a Visiting Assistant Professor at Pitzer College, and an Academic Administrator for UCLA’s Pre-Graduate/Pre-Professional Undergraduate Mentoring Program (PUMP) where she mentored over 1,000 first generation, low income, undergraduates interested in pursuing advanced academic and professional degrees. She is currently co-editing an anthology with Maria Ochoa, “Shout Out!: Women of Color Respond to Violence,” which will be published by Seal Press.

AnaLouise Keating is a neapantlera, spiritual activist, and professor of women’s studies at Texas Woman’s University where she teaches courses on U.S. women of color, feminist/womanist epistemologies, and queer theory. She is co-editor, with Gloria Anzaldúa, of this bridge we call home: radical visions for transformation, editor of EntreMundos/AmongWorlds: New Perspectives on Gloria Anzaldúa and Anzaldúa’s Interviews/Entrevistas; and author of Teaching Transformation: Transcultural Classroom Dialogues and Women Reading Women Writing: Self-Invention in Paula Gunn Allen, Gloria Anzaldúa, and Audre Lorde.

Maria Ochoa received a Ph.D. in the History of Consciousness from the University of California Santa Cruz. While a graduate student, she co-founded the Research Cluster for the Study of Women of Color at the Center for Cultural Studies, so that she and others might find shelter from the storm of academic life. Ochoa’s dissertation was designated the 1994 First Place recipient in the Thesis/Dissertation category from the National Women’s Studies Association. Ochoa was twice honored as a Ford Foundation Fellow. In recognition of her contributions to the arts, the California State Assembly named her a Woman of the Year for 1999. Her numerous publications include Creative Collectives, a groundbreaking book that documents the work of Chicana artists, and the forthcoming anthology “Shout Out!: Women of Color Respond to Violence,” co-edited with Dr. Barbara K. Ige, which will be published by Seal Press.

Ochoa teaches at San José State University in the Department of Social Science/Women’s Studies Program. Prior to her involvement in academia, she was the executive director of a community based visual arts center and a development associate for a community foundation whose funds support programs for women and girls.

FEMINIST BORDER(S) CROSSINGS: PAST DEBATES, PRESENT POSSIBILITIES, FUTURE FEMINISMS

Gallery Hall: Chagall

This panel identifies some of the theoretical, pedagogical, and political implications of envisioning a global feminist consciousness from inside United States academic institutions. Panelists explore the contradictions of working, on the one hand, for inclusion and legitimacy in increasingly corporatized university structures implicated in global political crises, and, on the other, for the radical change envisioned by activists inside and outside the academy. Situating ourselves on this now almost clichéd division between theory/practice, inside/outside, north/south, “Feminist Border Crossings” poses the ethical responsibilities of global feminist consciousness in the age of U.S. led war of terror.

WALKING A PERILOUSLY FINE LINE: THE THEORETICAL CHALLENGES OF FEMINIST ACTIVISM ON AMERICAN COLLEGE CAMPUS

Gallery Hall: Gauguin

This panel session will explore how contemporary feminist epistemologies inform and subsequently complicate traditional conceptions of feminist activism on American college campuses. Drawing upon the works of Chandra Mohanty, Martha Nussbaum, Linda Alcoff, and Diana Fuss, this panel seeks to understand how college-aged feminist activists negotiate the following dyadic, countervailing relationships: “Western progress” vs. “Nonwestern ignorance”, Privilege vs. Disadvantage, and Essentialism vs. Nonessentialism. Case studies of the following feminist projects will be used to explore these dichotomies: The Emory Om Project (www.omforchildren.org), The Berkeley STOP (Sex Trafficking Obliteration Petition) Campaign, and Take Back the Night (Emory University).

RACE CITIZENSHIP AND DIASPORA: PRIVILEGE AND OPPRESSION, THE WORK OF ANNA JULIA COOPER AND THE DIARY OF AN AFRICAN AMERICAN SCHOOLTEACHER

Gallery Hall: Utrillo

A panelist explores Anna Julia Cooper’s 1925 Sorbonne dissertation, “L’Attitude de la France à l’égard de l’esclavage pendant la Révolution” merits closer attention. In focusing on the Haitian and French Revolutions as dialogic, she offers new ways to examine race, citizenship, and diaspora. A second presentation looks at a diary presumed to belong to a Mrs. M. Taylor, an African American schoolteacher in the 1930s in rural Florida. An intersectional analysis aids in locating Mrs. Taylor with regards both to the larger society as well as in relation to the mill workers she has come to educate, as she embodied both positions of privilege and oppression.

INTERSECTIONAL ANALYSES OF BLACK WOMEN’S HEALTH PERSPECTIVES FROM THE UNITED STATES AND BRAZIL

Gallery Hall: Vermeer

This panel examines key factors shaping black women’s sexual and reproductive health in the United States and Brazil. By adopting an intersectional approach to issues of race, gender, and sexuality, this set of papers provides new insights into similarities and differences in the health experiences of African-descendant women in the United States and Brazil. Scholars explore the multiple ways that Afro-Brazilian women have organized for better access to health care to arguing for new models of HIV-prevention for African American mothers and daughters.

WOMEN AND POLITICAL POWER IN INDIA AND RWANDA
Gem Rooms: Sapphire
It is only in the past fifteen years that India and Rwanda have taken steps to increase women’s participation in the political process. With the passage of the 73rd Constitutional Amendment Act, India required a 30% quota of women elected to the Panchayati Raj system of decision-making in the rural areas. In Rwanda, the genocide of one million citizens dramatically altered the population so that women’s participation in the political arena became necessary to the country’s survival.

STUDENTS SUCCESSES WITH ‘STORYTELLING’ IN THEIR DEVELOPMENT AS WOMEN LEADERS AND ACTIVIST GLOBAL CITIZENS
Gem Rooms: Turquoise B
The scholarly pursuit of leadership, citizenship, and feminist theory has been marked by a multiplicity of perspectives concerning the leadership process and its outcomes. Recent emphasis has been on leading rather than leadership, and on self-awareness and authenticity. Because historically visible leadership roles in society have been held primarily by men, models of effective leadership may not seem appropriate or accessible to women and minorities. This faculty/student panel will explore these issues, particularly focused on the intersection of research, theory, and applied teaching/learning utilizing storytelling, and on sample female students’ success stories in their self development as effective leaders.

RACE AND THE ACADEMY: WHY (SOME) WOMEN OF COLOR ARE (STILL) IN SCIENCE
Legends: Jack Nicklaus
The National Academies reported recently that women, especially women of color, are held back in science. One panelist argues that college and university science departments face a moral imperative to reform cultural structures that support relationships of moral subordination. Using the protagonist from Nella Larsen’s “Quicksand” as her gatekeeper a presenter theorizes on the classroom dynamics of the historically black university of Alabama. By combining a concept of standpoint epistemology that integrates tacit knowing with the epistemologically significant features of friendship, a panelist outlines the conditions that make it possible for white feminists to understand racism and white privilege in a way that makes them meaningful allies to women of color and effective agents for social change.

ABSTINENCE SOMETIMES: DISCUSSING MEDIA REPRESENTATIONS, RELIGIOUS CONNOTATIONS, AND GOVERNMENT REGULATIONS OF SEXUALITY WITH NYC GIRLS
New Orleans Ballroom
We invite you to a frank discussion, moderated by high school girls from New York City, of the assumptions that underlie abstinence only education policies and curricula. Each presenter will engage in discussion with the girls, testing our ideas against their lived experiences. Together, we will explore the ideas and messages that provide the foundation for the abstinence-only movement in the United States. These include assumptions about adolescents’ sexual decision-making abilities, media messages that champion virginity and promiscuity simultaneously, religious and cultural mores that underscore heteronormative archetypes, and a culture of silence surrounding government regulation of adolescent sexuality.

THE WOMAN MIGRANT: FICTIONAL, AUTOBIOGRAPHIC, AND FILMIC NARRATIVES + FEMINIST THEORY
St Charles Ballroom: Salon I
This panel will consider representations of women migrants as they have been imagined in the novel, autobiography and film using feminist migration theory. The transnational narratives that we will specifically examine embody what Avtar Brah describes as the “multi-axial” and “relational” character of women’s experiences of migration and diaspora. Some of the most critical axes are those of familial and sexual identity, both of which are constituted in relation to the national identities of the motherland and the new homeland.

IMMIGRATION AND WHITE PRIVILEGE: CONSEQUENCES OF ASSIMILATION
St Charles Ballroom: Salon IV
This panel of grandchildren and great-grandchildren of Irish Catholic and Eastern-European Jewish immigrants addresses the consequences of assimilation at the intersections of immigration and white privilege. All of us claim to “do” race/class/gender in professional and intimate contexts. Yet all of us clearly benefit from the consequences of assimilation available to second and third wave white women of once-stigmatized ethnic and religious origins. As we do not deny the absence of white feminist liberal guilt, we present research that interrogates subject positions encountered at the intersections of immigration and white privilege.

The panel includes faculty from a department that has moved an inconsequential minor in women’s studies with no faculty, no budget, and almost no enrollment, to a department with a growing major, budgetary parity with other departments, and significant recognition and respect within the larger university community. The panel will describe the strategies used to gain legitimacy in a traditional, resistant, academic environment. Discussion will focus on obstacles and difficulties, fighting traditionalism, political and pedagogical strategies, and measures of success.

362. RECOVERY FROM ADDICTION SHARING CIRCLE
Legends: St Charles Ballroom: Salon V
In this peer-led, informal sharing circle, we will discuss our struggles related to addiction to alcohol and other drugs and our recovery from substance abuse. At conferences where alcohol is served, those in recovery can face special challenges. This group will work to offer support, encouragement and reflection for those in recovery, as well as to family members and allies. The group is strictly confidential and is not affiliated with Alcoholics Anonymous.
Feminist girls' studies urgently needs to theorize citizenship, colonialism, migration, locality, place and space as these intersect to mediate racialised (Canadian-born, immigrant, refugee, and Indigenous) girls' everyday lives. Millions of girls around the world face the reality of displacement, homelessness, migration, and dislocation. While much of the discourse concerning uprooting and displacement has centered on movement from one country to another, uprooting and displacement are also a reality for many within national borders.

Dr. Jo-Anne Lee is Associate Professor of Women's Studies at the University of Victoria. She is past President of the Canadian Research Institute for the Advancement of Women (CRIAW), and a member of the research advisory panel of the Canadian Race Relations Foundation. Jo-Anne helped to found Anti-dote, a grassroots organization for racialised and Indigenous girls and young women in Victoria and Southern Vancouver Island that grew out of her research into social cohesion and identity. She writes and publishes in the fields of adult education, social theories of racialization, feminist urban history, community development and feminist and anti-racist girls studies. Jo-Anne's professional background includes social work, adult education, sociology and women's studies. She is a mother of three adult children and recently became a grandmother. She is easily distracted and distressed by her overly ambitious gardening projects that include raising Koi and transforming her West coast garden into a semi-tropical paradise full of palm trees, banana plants and crimson foliage.

Dr. Helene Berman is Associate Professor of Nursing Research at the University of Western Ontario. Her research has focused on violence in the lives of children. Her work has included children of war who have experienced war-related trauma and uprooting, and children who have witnessed violence in their homes. During the past four years, she has been the Principal Investigator on a national study examining how girls and young women are socialized to expect violence, its effects on their health, and implications for policy makers and programmers. A new study is set to begin that will examine intersecting sites of violence in girls' lives with attention to gender, race, culture, class, sexual orientation and (dis)ability. She is a Research Associate with the Centre for Research on Violence Against Women and Children.

Sandrina De Finney is an Assistant Professor in the School of Child and Youth Care at the University of Victoria. Her research focuses on the processes of racialization and youth identities; aboriginal, ethnic minority, and immigrant youth; youth of colour; and youth participation in practice and research.

Veronica Pacini-Ketchabaw is an Assistant Professor in the School of Child and Youth Care at the University of Victoria. Her research focuses on diversity in early childhood care and development, historically and politically embedded discourses of childhood, and Social and Educational Contexts of Culturally and Linguistically Diverse Communities in Canada.

Winnie Chow is the Executive Director of Anti-dote Multi-racial Girls and Women's Network in Victoria, BC. The organization brings together research, theory, practice and social action with racialised and Indigenous girls and women as they bring voice to their hidden realities. She is completing her graduate studies at the University of Victoria in First Nation's Education and Environmental Studies. Winnie is committed to decolonization and social justice work in the community through the use of participatory action approaches with Indigenous, immigrant and refugee, and girls and women's groups. She has produced several documentary films ranging from topics on immigrant girl caregivers, Indigenous health research, and facilitates film making workshops for youth and adults as a tool for social change.

Gallery Hall: Gauguin

Should militarization should be a central theme in women’s studies, especially post 9-11? A presenter examines the interplay between gender, race, and contemporary politics as well as the social construction of masculinities and femininities in a militarized culture. A second presenter examines how political protests can effectively impute past, present, and future bodies, and hence mobilize and privilege one set of bodies against another. Reflects on epistemologies of speech/silence and feminist approaches to silence Women in Black are highlighted. MOVING BEYOND THE “PORN WARS”: (RE)CONCEPTUALIZING PORNOGRAPHY AS AN INDUSTRY AND AS A DISCOURSE

Gallery Hall: Vermeer

The so called “porn wars” of the 1980s have not proved particularly useful in paving the way for new scholarship on the political economy of the contemporary porn industry, the variations in textual construction and the complex reading strategies that viewers adopt. In this panel we argue that it is time to develop new theories and methodologies that harness the powerful insights of Cultural Studies, Black Studies and Women’s Studies. Our aim is to move beyond the old labels of the porn wars by offering ways of (re)conceptualizing pornography that bring together feminists from different political and ideological positions.

CYBORG SELVES: PERFORMING GENDER IDENTITY IN VIRTUAL SOCIAL SPACES

Gem Rooms: Jade

Donna Haraway argues for the confusion of boundaries in construction of the cyborg self (151). Like Haraway, this panel argues that power is being reframed in dynamic media and that we must use this as an opportunity to challenge dominant narratives. By using invocational media to create new extensions of their personal identities users employ technology to create new cyborg selves - half real, human, organic and half virtual, digital and fantasy. As such, this panel seeks to unravel how gender and sexuality is constructed in virtual social spaces.

PESTERING STUDENTS WITH FEMINISM: TEACHING FEMINISM TO STUDENTS WHO DON'T SEEM TO CARE
Gem Rooms: Turquoise B

Students often think individuals are free to “choose” family, career, or a balance of both. I challenge these ideas by presenting the work/family conflict as a social, not personal, problem. In introductory level sociology courses, I distribute a case study of a lawyer who, to allow her more time at home, proposes a change to the traditional path to partnership. Students then act as her firm’s board of directors and decide whether they should attend to her work/family conflict. This exercise demonstrates how “choice” is structurally constrained and illuminates the importance of feminism in challenging such structures and ideologies.

POSTER SESSION

AN INVESTIGATION OF THE ELEMENTS REQUIRED FOR A CERVICAL CANCER AWARENESS CAMPAIGN IN MIRAFLOR, NICARAGUA

Rachael Elizabeth Hamilton, Grand Valley State University

Cervical cancer is a devastating disease, particularly within Latin America. The rural community of Miraflor, Nicaragua has expressed a need for a cervical cancer awareness and treatment program. The information gathered in this project is the first step in working with the people of Miraflor to design such a program.
On the surface, the breast cancer movement seems monolithic. However, ethnographic research reveals a surprising amount of diversity of purpose and vision among breast cancer activists. Rather than just being about pink ribbons, three-day runs and raising money for research, the breast cancer movement is poised to be an important leader in the struggle to frame health issues as social justice concerns, and health care as a human right.

Several significant, extreme social transformations have proceeded with a minimum of attention from anyone who is involved with or utilizes healthcare. The influx of female physicians over the past three decades, combined with Generation X physicians who assert different expectations about work and home-life compared to Baby Boomer physicians, has profound implications on the structure of the healthcare system. The entire system is now faced with different sets of expectations expressed by different genders and different generations at different times-and the disappointment felt when genders and generations confront expectations that may seem to have been invented for others’ well-being.

It is hard to miss them, dressed in purple and wearing large red hats. What has attracted more than 1 million women 50+ years old worldwide to join an organization that exists solely to “have fun?” Are they, as the Red Hat Society’s stated mission, gaining higher visibility for women as they age and reshaping how they are viewed by society today? This poster presents preliminary results of a cross-sectional U.S. study examining the social support network benefits Red Hat Society membership provides women in later middle age and beyond.

This poster purports to examine the abortion discourses in Taiwan spanning from the legalization of abortion in 1985 to the recent abortion debate. I will argue that the pragmatic rhetoric advocated by feminist groups during the legislative process for legalization under the authoritarian KMT regime can no longer provide a solid consensus in the post-authoritarian democracy. The pragmatic discourses which feminists advanced, although helped to eschew “the clash of absolutes,” has eventually backfired. I will propose that the Taiwanese feminists need to advocate a women’s right rhetoric when the religious antiabortion groups are advancing the fetus life rhetoric.

This poster will include a comprehensive cultural and historical study of the early history of Playgirl. I will engage the heuristic potential of Linda Williams’s work in film criticism by transposing it as the theoretical framework by which I will examine the still images and written content of Playgirl magazine in cultural context. My poster will examine Playgirl as a unique and significant part of American sexual culture and history, but one that had a complex relationship to movement feminism in the 1970s.

The lives of women are changed by conflict. Women often are forced to flee as refugees, subjected to rape, and recruited into militant groups as violent actors. However, post-conflict, the varied roles women assume during wartime frequently are overlooked, leading women’s voices to be excluded from the rebuilding process. This poster examines “post conflict” discourse in the Chechen Republic. It argues that state discourse disseminated characterizing a beauty contest as a “key factor” in “normalizing” the region has served to obscure women’s roles, highlighting women’s physical characteristics while ignoring vital debates regarding human rights in the republic.

The HERS Foundation will screen a video recording of the Off Broadway premiere of UN BECOMING. UN BECOMING premiered in New York in February 2004 and has been seen in 30 other cities since then. “Every woman, man, and child should see this play!” —Barbara Seaman, author of The Greatest Experiment Ever Performed On Women.

FEMINIST THEORETICAL PERSPECTIVES: HISTORICAL RESPONSES, CURRENT IMPACTS, AND CONNECTIONS TO SOCIAL JUSTICE

New Orleans Ballroom

This panel presentation offers a critical review of the literature surrounding three contemporary feminist theorists: Wendy Brown, Heidi Hartmann and Luce Irigaray. To understand the continuing impact of their work, we will look beyond the text of their actual arguments to find patterns in historical theoretical responses, addressing how their work has been built upon, critiqued, ripped apart and lauded. These continually-shifting theoretical responses depict historical changes within the academic field of Women's Studies, show the ongoing need to critique our current understandings of feminist texts, and also outline the ways feminist theory informs contemporary feminist social movements.

ONE SIZE DOES NOT FIT ALL: TEACHING DIFFERENCE AT THE 100 LEVEL

St Charles Ballroom: Salon IV

The focus of this panel is to discuss conversations regarding experiences of 'difference' between 5 first year Women's Studies graduate students. The discussions exist within the broader context of analyzing how graduate students teach difference at the 100 level and will overview dialogue between these 5 students over the period of 8 months in biweekly meetings. We will discuss ways in which individual experiences come together to create our notions of difference and will reflect how race, class, gender, sexuality, and ability intersect in our lives as students, teachers, and scholars. Panelists are members of the Women of Color Caucus.

PROVIDING OR DEFENDING ABORTION?: PRO-LIFE AND PRO-CHOICE DISCOURSE AND CLINIC PRACTICE

St Charles Ballroom: Salon VI

This panel contributes to an ongoing feminist examination of the discursive tactics pro-choice activists have had to use to defend reproductive rights, and how those tactics can erase some women's real experiences with abortion. Both presenters have worked in abortion clinics. Both are interested in rethinking the differences between "pro-choice" activist work and abortion providing in the U.S., and how those differences have been shaped by political necessity.

SURVEILLANCE AND SUBVERSION: ETHNOGRAPHIC ACCOUNTS OF GIRLS’ SEXUALITY

Gallery Hall: Gauguin

This panel presents analyses of girls’ sexuality based on ethnographic interview data. Each paper explores how girls’ sexuality is monitored, with particular attention to the importance of understanding girls’ agency. How do schools, reproductive health care providers, state institutions, youth organizations, women, and girls construct positive and negative images of girls’ sexual desires and experiences? The papers address how, in a range of cultural, ethnic, and class contexts, girls participate in and challenge others’ representations of their sexual selves. The panel promotes scholarly-activist conversation with scholars committed to research that emphasizes designing policies informed by girls’ perspectives on sexuality.

WOMEN AND GLOBAL ISSUES

Gallery Hall: Utrillo

The current wave of globalization has greatly improved the lives of women worldwide, particularly in lesser developed countries. The ways in which women and gender concerns intersect with globalization are complex and often contradictory; driven by economic policies and practices. Globalization constructs, represents, and incorporates women in diverse ways — in the realms of culture, morality, politics, labor, and the economy. Although significant gains have been made in many sectors of society, women remain disadvantaged in many areas of life.

LITERATURE, SOCIALIST AND PACIFIST POLITICS, AND THE POLITICS OF KNOWLEDGE

Legends: Jack Nicklaus

Research critiques politics of knowledge in the Thai women's movement through the study of a land-rights activist's archival materials. The analysis applies the frameworks of postcolonial and feminist research practice while deconstructing the dominant knowledge production process in Thai context. Australian author Miles Franklin worked in Chicago as secretary for the National Women's Trade Union League and was editor of Life and Labor, the 1914 novel reflects Franklin's audacious feminist, socialist and pacifist politics as well as her personal relationships with contemporaries during this period. A look at the ways Robin McKinley's novel "Deerskin" uses the conventions of fantasy to provide space for the heroine's healing and the mixing of psychological accuracy and elements of the fantasy genre.

WOMEN WITHOUT CHILDREN. WHAT DO WOMEN WANT? INTIMATE RELATIONSHIPS

"ONLY TO YOU, INTERNET": BLOGGING AS A RADICAL REDEFINITION OF MOTHERING

Lisa Hammond Rashley, University of South Carolina Lancaster
Thousands of women write daily about their children, partners, and themselves in weblogs, or blogs, a type of journal published on the Internet. This developing genre provides women an ideal venue in which to create authoritative maternal voices as both individuals and community members, building a unique online library of diverse, meaningful texts on mothering. In this presentation, I will discuss several widely-read blogs to examine the political implications of these women's radical redefinitions of motherhood as institution.

CONSTRUCTING "MOTHERHOOD" IN SECOND WAVE FEMINISM: A CONTENT ANALYSIS OF MS. MAGAZINE, 1972-1989

Jill Schultz, Frederick Community College
The purpose of this poster presentation is to present the preliminary findings of a study on the intersections of popular feminism and motherhood during the second wave of American feminism. Specifically, this poster presentation identifies and analyzes the distinctive ways motherhood was forged as a political identity in the feminist magazine Ms. from the first issue in 1972 until the sale of the magazine in 1989.

VIOLENCE AND MOTHERHOOD IN THE CONTEXT OF WELFARE REFORM BETTY

Jo Barrett, University of Windsor
This poster presents key findings from a study investigating the parenting experiences of adult survivors of childhood sexual abuse impacted by welfare reform legislation in Illinois. In particular, it explores the prevalence of other forms of childhood and adulthood violence in the lives of women receiving public assistance and assesses their impact on women's mothering experiences. Further, this study analyzes the role of economic and social supports in enhancing the abilities of survivors of childhood and/or adulthood violence to successfully meet the challenges of parenting in an increasingly restrictive and punitive public welfare system.

WHAT DO WOMEN WANT? INTIMATE RELATIONSHIPS OF WOMEN WITHOUT CHILDREN.

Grace Eileen Scrimgeour, Loyola University Chicago
Over the past 25 years the proportion of women who never have children has increased dramatically. This poster will look at how changing opportunities for women in work and intimate relationships have combined to tip the balance for those women who do not feel strongly maternal, giving them more support in their choice to remain childless. It also discusses how being childless affects women's priorities in choosing intimate partners, leaving some women free to reject the traditional power imbalance of heterosexual relationships.

MENTORING: WHAT GOES AROUND COMES AROUND

Nan E. Littleton, Northern Kentucky University
Climbing the professional ladder is hard enough. But, with a helping hand from someone on a higher rung, each step already has a footprint to steady the ascent. This poster presentation will focus on the benefits and principles of feminist models of mentoring. This poster presentation will highlight feminist strategies for finding a mentor, creating an effective mentoring relationship, targeting specific mentoring needs of women, and partnering within the community to target special groups in need of mentoring such as female youth and elders.

UNDERSTANDING THE INFERTILE IDENTITY WITHIN THE FRAMEWORK OF VOLUNTEERISM FOR THE NATIONAL INFERTILITY ASSOCIATION: RESOLVE

Dianne Lemos
The coping mechanisms that infertile women utilize to understand their health status has been examined through the paradigms of biological and psychological disciplines. From a sociological framework, this poster will examine the National Infertility Association: RESOLVE to understand social effects of infertility and its volunteers unwavering relationship to the organization. An overview of literature pertaining to identity, femininity, and health statuses that clarify the volunteers' narratives of infertility and volunteerism with RESOLVE and the phenomenon of their continual dedication after their reported fertility successes. The research offers a new construction of the infertile identity and how it intersects with volunteerism.

EXPLAINING THE WOMEN'S LIBERATION MESSAGE: RECOGNIZING THE ROLE OF WOMEN'S PAGE EDITORS

Kimberly Voss, Southern Illinois University Edwardsville
Lance Speere, Southern Illinois University Edwardsville
This poster is a re-examination of women's page content that finds women's page journalists were introducing a new role for women by using a different political and rhetorical approach than many of the more often studied alternative women's newspapers of the 1960s. The women's page journalists were negotiating the progressive messages by combining them with messages that were familiar to the middle-class homemakers who were the primary readership. The findings demonstrate that women's page journalists played a bigger role in spreading awareness of women's liberation issues than initially thought.
MYQUEERSPACE: QUEER CYBORG REPRESENTATION AND THE MEDIUM OF MYSPACE
Jessica Giusti, University of Minnesota

My analysis considers the position of the cyborg as it subsists within the medium of MySpace and, most importantly, crafts the formation of a queer cyborg subject whose existence and depiction of identity exceeds the hopes of feminist technoscientists in overcoming binaries of gender and sexuality. Through the radical manipulation of one's MySpace profile via the recoding of HTML, the queer cyborg subverts limited options of sexual orientation and gender, hence creating a wider breadth of identitarian possibility than that which currently exists offline for queer subjects.

SEX ROLES AND NARRATIVE STRUCTURE IN TELEVISION ADVERTISEMENTS: A CONTENT ANALYSIS
Rebecca Hains, Salem State College; Kimberly Eretzian Smirles, Emmanuel College

Since the 1970s, numerous content analyses have found inequalities in the treatment of sex roles in television advertisements. More recently, researchers have developed qualitative taxonomies of television commercials' narrative structure. This poster draws from both fields of inquiry to detail a content analysis of both the sex roles and narrative structures in television commercials. Two assistants coded all the prime-time commercials that aired on four networks over one week in December 2002. Statistical analysis revealed significant differences in commercial narratives featuring male versus female characters, which the authors will use as benchmark for a 5-year follow-up study in 2007.

(IN)VISIBILITIES: LESBIAN IDENTITIES IN NWSA & WOMEN'S AND GENDER STUDIES -- A STRATEGIC VISIONING ROUNDTABLE
St Charles Ballroom: Salon I

For a significant period of time, contemporary U.S. feminism worked hard to counter the popular stereotype that “all feminists are lesbians.” While these efforts seemed worthwhile, they also became detrimental as they have contributed to the invisibility of lesbian identities in both feminist activist and Women’s and Gender Studies circles. This roundtable will explore ways in which lesbian visibilities and viabilities within NWSA can enhance the future of feminism within and outside academia.

REPRESENTATION AND PHILOSOPHY FROM HEGEL’S ANTIGONE TO MARY DALY AND MARY BAKER EDDY
Gallery Hall: Picasso

The first presentation will look at Hegel’s treatment of Sophocles’ Antigone, which exposes a tension in our own landscape between religious and civil autonomy. This tension reflects a deeper tension between unreflective, implicit norms and explicit, reflective norms which can be autonomously endorsed and of particular importance to women. A Second presentation will examine the work of Radical feminist philosopher Mary Daly who deliberately moved “beyond God the father” with her 1973 eponymous book. Considered “philosophy in another realm” to the corpus of her work spanning five decades, Daly’s critique of patriarchy and her vision of a feminist community spark her move beyond the patriarchal foreground into another realm, the Background. A Third investigates Mary Baker Eddy’s 1875 best-selling book, “Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures,” Eddy founded Christian Science.
and was able to transcend dominant Victorian-era constructions of womanhood that relegated the "True Woman" to the home to fulfill the "feminine" virtues of piety, purity, submissiveness, and domesticity in the face of numerous, outspoken critics disdainful of Christian Science's "scientific" emphasis on faith healing.

Even though there is a rich tradition of Black feminist thought and activism that extends back to the early nineteenth century, not all Black women who recognize the intersectionality of race, class and gender oppression call themselves "feminists". For some, Alice Walker's term "womanism" represents a positive attempt to frame the reality of Black women's struggles in feminist theory; others find both "feminism" and "womanism" to be contested terms that do not speak to their experience. This panel explores some of the controversies that have accompanied these terms, including the perspectives of women in Africa and the African Diaspora.

245. PERFORMANCE
MegaCenter & Lobby: Exhibit performance
camilleri williams, veronica precious bohanon, AquaMoon
AquaMoon's first chorepoem ‘Aqua Beats and Moon Verses: Volume I’ was a celebration and acknowledgment of 21st century Black womanhood and sisterhood. The team listened to the constructive feedback from Volume I and decided to include male voice in Volume II, Brotha...Wasup Sun? Their mission was to spark dialogue between Black men and womyn on taboo subjects in the Black community and encourage healing. This performance-lecture will include the writing process and a performance of excerpts from the choreopoem. Volume II addresses multi-layered issues including Vietnam Vets, the informal economy, misogyny, family, power and image, and the prison industrial complex.
FOR COLORED GIRLS... "REVISITED: BLACK GIRLS AND THEIR OWN WORDS

Kristal Tatiana Moore, University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill

I analyze the impact of adapting Writing Center pedagogy to a writing program for teens in an urban library. What are the literacy identities of the urban teen participants in the program, particularly the Black girls who form the majority of the group? This question challenges the current preconceived notions that inner city students have low levels of engagement in their writing. This study draws upon personal narratives and action research. I found through this research, that inner city Black female students have a different experience with literacy and writing that is influenced by an early Black feminist literary tradition.

COMING OF AGE IN OKLAHOMA: STORIES GIRLS TELL OF LEARNING TO LIVE WISELY & WELL

Deborah S. Shinn, University of Oklahoma

How and from whom do Oklahoma girls learn to live? From what multiple educational agencies do they learn about living wisely and well (?LWW)? By what strategies and what do they learn about ?LWW? Interviews with fourteen women ages nineteen to twenty-one looking back at growing up between ages eleven and nineteen reveal "challenged, supported and protected" girls. This presentation will look at the "protected girls" growing up in Oklahoma, who are preparing to be teachers.

INVASION OF THE EVERYGIRL: THE DEATH OF TEENAGE STORYTELLING IN SEVENTEEN

Magazine Carley Moore, New York University

In this poster I argue that Seventeen magazine's adult female writers and the teenage girl writers who publish their stories in its most popular column, "Traumarama!" form a complicated partnership which on one level draws on feminist ideas of solidarity, sisterhood, and body image acceptance, but on another level subverts those very same ideas.

U.N.I.T.Y.? HIP HOP FEMINISM AND THE THIRD WAVE

Caryn E. Murphy, University of Madison-Wisconsin

This poster utilizes specific examples of hip hop feminist activism in order to analyze how contemporary feminist movements are politically engaged. My underlying research question seeks to analyze the third wave as a legitimately multicultural movement that is specifically engaged with social justice concerns that relate not only to gender, but also race and class.

SUGAR AND SPICE: THE DEVELOPMENT OF THE NYMPHET FROM VLADIMIR NABOKOV'S LOLITA TO SAM MENDES' AMERICAN BEAUTY

Tracy Wendt Lemaster, University of Wisconsin-Madison

My poster traces the development of the abstract, aesthetic, and critical representation of the nymphet figure in the novel Lolita into the literal, romanticized, and socially accepted nymphet figure in the film American Beauty. I recognize a trend in pedophilic media toward hyper-sexualized adolescent girls as acceptable muses and even partners for men lacking a certain artistic and psychic void. I deconstruct the metaphoric use of the nymphet into categories of duality, malleability, and emptiness that parallel the historic literary and social parameters of adult women.

EDUCATING WOMEN: A NEW INTERGENERATIONAL COMMUNITY OF INQUIRY ON WOMEN

Susan Laird, University of Oklahoma

Lucy Townsend (Northern Illinois University)

This project responds to a generation gap in scholarship on women and education and also to a limit-situation for this field: its senior scholars often lack opportunities for collaborative work, while junior scholars often lack opportunities for advanced studies of women and education. EW will combine distance-education technologies, meetings at NWSA, other national and international conferences, publications online and in print, face-to-face inter generational collaborations. EW's purposes are to broaden, deepen, and share scholarship on women and education--thus to construct opportunities for novice, mid-career, and senior scholars to undertake advanced learning and inquiry in this new field.

GENDER, RACE, AND CLASS: AN INTERSECTiONAL ANALYSIS OF BODY IMAGE DEVELOPMENT OF ADOLESCENT GIRLS

Linda Carolene Cleary, University of Michigan - Dearborn

A significant body of research currently exists on the issue of body image among adolescents. Yet little consideration has been given to how class might intersect with race and gender in the construction of an adolescent girl's body image. This poster aims to fill that gap by providing an intersectional analysis that takes race, class and gender into account. The poster will draw upon the methodological framework provided by Julie Bettie's "Women Without Class" to show how class subjectivity needs to be addressed in order to provide a more accurate account of adolescent girls' development in the United States today.

FROM CONSCIOUSNESS RAISING TO CREATING REVOLUTION: THE BUILDING OF FUTURE FEMINISMS

New Orleans Ballroom

Beginning with "consciousness raising groups," this panel will explore the unique concepts of organization developed by the Women's Liberation Movement. Panelists will look at the actual experience of women in the U.S.—including questions of race and class—and internationally, including Iran, Portugal, and Poland. We will address the questions: What is the relationship of form of organization to philosophies of freedom? What do the past and present experiences and experimentations of feminists with organization tell us about the relationship of form of organization to achieving freedom in our age of regression?

MIGRATION, BORDER SPACES, SOCIOECONOMIC INTEGRATION OF FEMALE MIGRANTS, AND THE ROLE OF TRANSNATIONAL / NGO FEMINIST PRACTICES
St Charles Ballroom: Salon I
Both limitations and opportunities for women's agency are considered by these panelists. Contexts include: social production of space for second-generation South Asian women, socioeconomic integration of female migrants and political refugees from Iran and relationships that have developed among Western and Russian women in NGO women's movements. Bicultural and bilingual living space along borders that transcend nations are also discussed.

CONVERSATIONS ON SOLIDARITY AND DIFFERENCE: WORKING CLASS WOMEN IN THE ACADEMY
St Charles Ballroom: Salon III
This workshop is based on a recent book, Telling Our Lives: Conversations on Solidarity and Difference, which explores how three working class women—from Jewish, African-American, and Irish-American backgrounds—connect across difference through the sharing of life narratives in conversation. We analyze our own life stories while interrogating static notions of identity, negotiating across the boundaries of our distinct identities through storytelling and conversation. In the workshop, we facilitate a further extension of our conversations — paying particular attention to class — within the larger Women's Studies community.

251. Panel
PERFORMING WOMAN-NESS, SEARCHING FOR SUBJECTIVITY
St Charles Ballroom: Salon IV
This panel attempts to answer what it means to perform "woman." In Bodies That Matter, Judith Butler writes that we all occupy names which are "situated in discourse" (122), and we cannot rise up from the historicity of the chain to say that this name is not me, but "only what others have made of me" (122). This panel will explore the ways women's roles and their performances of femininity are constrained and constructed by the nation-state and its socio-political environment. Our papers wonder where female subjectivity lies when it is mediated by and interpreted by the state and masculinity.

READING OUR HISTORIES, WRITING OUR FUTURES
St Charles Ballroom: Salon VI
"Reading Our Histories, Writing Our Futures" examines the issue of "women's history." This presentation addresses the importance of recovering lost, ignored, or rejected historical narratives that challenge hegemonic and nationalistic theories of masculine and white privilege. The panel looks at grassroots, academic, and artistic movements of historical agency, linking the past with feminist and anti-colonial activism of the present and future.

SOCIAL CONSTRUCTION OF DISCRIMINATION, CLASS, RACE AND FAITH
Gallery Hall: Chagall
Panelists analyse the institution of Ukrainian citizenship as a structure that marginalizes women doubly: as citizens of a country that is subject to numerous visa regimes as female citizens of a state with an oppressive patriarchal culture; use Patricia Hill Collins’ intersectional framework of race, class and gender to analyze interviews of women who have immigrated to the southeastern United States. Issues of identity formation, discrimination and emerging consciousness of US racial dynamics are examined through a gendered lens, seeking to add to the growing knowledge base on female migrants.

THE LIMITS OF LIBERAL SEX EDUCATION
Gallery Hall: Gauguin
This session contributes to the girls studies and activism subtheme by offering a critical exploration of sex education. The panel will open with a discussion the implications of federal promotion of abstinence-only-uptill-marriage policies for young women. Presenters will then explore liberal responses to these policies, highlighting, first, queer perspectives on sex education and, second, the evaded lessons about gender and power in abstinence-only and comprehensive sex educators’ classroom practices. The session will conclude with an argument for sex education that highlights critical thinking and explores how gender norms shape individual sexual experience and manifest as power differentials within intimate relationships.

TURN UP THE VOLUME: EMPOWERING GIRLS THROUGH THE PERFORMING ARTS
Gallery Hall: Picasso
This workshop will address the challenges urban girls face and how collaborative, all-girls, performing arts experiences can empower them to articulate what they need to say, speak up and be heard, and use their honest and heart-felt performances to advocate for social change. Participants will engage with the director of viBe Theater Experience, a performing arts organization that inspires underserved teenage girls in New York City to write and perform totally original theater and music that challenges the community to hear them and see them on their own terms in their own voices.

WOMEN, CASTRO, CONTEMPORARY ZIONISM AND LATIN AMERICAN MODERNITY
Gallery Hall: Utrillo
Panelists explore the socio-political arena in which women in Cuba struggle for gender equity providing an analysis of the structural pre-conditions and constraints that promote and hinder the advancement of women under the socialist/comunist regime of Fidel Castro; look at the relationship between culture, ethics and psychology by examining the goals and practices of three groups of women living in Egypt today from recent ethnographic fieldwork; examines the ways that Latin American and U.S. feminists used notions of modernity to pursue women’s rights; and present the political writings of the Israeli poet, Dalia Ravikovich, during the First Lebanon War in 1982, in which her protest challenges the national hegemonic discourse in regards to issues such as the Israeli self-image and national ego and super-ego, Jewish identity and morality, and the relationship between the Palestinian identity and the definition of contemporary Zionism.

RESISTING (NEO)COLONIZING GESTURES, BUILDING BRIDGES: DEVELOPING “GLOBAL FEMINIST” IDENTITIES AND PEDAGOGIES AS NON-AMERICAN AND AMERICAN FEMINISTS
Gallery Hall: Vermeer
Our panel, “Resisting (Neo)Colonizing Gestures, Building Bridges: Developing “Global Feminist” Identities and Pedagogies as Non-American and American Feminists,” speaks to the productive and necessary tensions from our differently located “feminist” identities. Our subjective experiences of being “women” and “feminist” have been strongly marked by how and where and when we have crossed or not crossed national and intellectual borders and this, in turn, has informed and advanced our global feminisms pedagogy in introductory Women’s Studies courses.

THE FUTURE OF CHOICE FEMINISM
Gem Rooms: Coral
A panel on the dominance of "choice" as a model for feminism. Has the act of choice displaced the values feminism once sought to advance, values of using your capabilities, being independent and doing social good. Has choice led to people claiming the mantle of feminism when they are not advancing such values in their lives and in the life of society? The panel would focus particularly on the choice to quit work and stay home with children as a feminist choice.

PERFORMING A MULTIVOICED AUTOETHNOGRAPHY: FRIENDSHIP AND INTIMACY IN RESEARCH RELATIONSHIPS
Gem Rooms: Jade
Our panel will explore the intricacies, obstacles, and possibilities of feminist methodologies that encourage collaborative social science research relationships. Drawing from our own experiences as researchers and researched, we will address the following questions: What are the implications of employing feminist methodologies that encourage friendship and intimacy in research relationships? How do research collaborators' institutional and social positions affect the enactment and construction of power and authority within research relationships? Performing our experiences as a multivoiced autoethnography-a series of interwoven, oral narratives-offers us a way to reflect on our embodied standpoints and trace our storylines discursively within our research relationships.

THE CONSTRUCTION OF GENDERED SUBJECTS: FEMINIST ANALYSIS OF TRANSNATIONAL DISCOURSES
Gem Rooms: Ruby
This panel examines the gendered impact of transnational discourses in the constitution of marginal subjects, such as mothers, children, and religious or homosexual citizens. By bringing together diverse feminist research grounded in distinctive historical and geo-spatial locations of Pakistan, South Korea, the United States, and transnational social movements, this panel illuminates how gender, race, class, and sexuality interplay in the construction of nation, morality, and citizenship through transnational discourses. This panel suggests that transnational discourses are contesting political sites where discourses of specific subjects collide and disrupt each other, and thus re/construct as well as de/construct the subjects.

VIOLENT LEGACIES AND FEMINIST FUTURES: RETHINKING FAMILY, NATION, COMMUNITY, AND THE BODY
Gem Rooms: Sapphire
This panel will address the 2007 conference theme, "Past Debates, Present Possibilities, Future Feminisms," through an examination of violent legacies of racism, imperialism, and misogyny, with a vision for feminist resistance against the oppressive past and present. Taken together, the papers forming this panel will challenge analytical paradigms developed in the field of Women's Studies and propose new models for how we can understand structures of family, nation, community, and the body politic. We hope to move forward in rethinking these formations to better address social justice pertaining to intersections of race, class, gender, sexuality, and nationality.

Gem Rooms: Turquoise B

This panel revisits the history of motherhood in the U.S., Mexico, and Germany, using historical studies in order to speak to the broader implications of the role of institutions, popular portrayals, and local contexts in defining motherhood and childhood. Panelists will examine normative models of motherhood and maternal experience in order to examine such concepts as the intersection between public and private, the relationship between public policy and social divisions of race, class, and gender, the use of motherhood in the name of nation and empire, and the historical specificity of women's roles as mothers.

GIRLS AND WOMEN SING IN CIRCLE
MegaCenter & Lobby: Exhibit performance

Singing in Circle is an opportunity to look into your sisters' eyes and share voice and spirit through song. While learning short, repetitive, women-centered and earth-based songs from a variety of traditions, power rises from the center of the circle as all voices create an energy that is both empowering and healing. This opportunity is intended to allow women, regardless of singing experience, to share their voices in a noncompetitive, relaxed, safe space. Come sing along! Percussion instruments are welcome!

Taiwanese national security and business relocation to China. I examine the policies of Taiwanese government on transportation and education and argue that they are nation-centered. Negative impact of these policies includes weakened fatherhood, formation of quasi-single-motherhood, and stigmatizations of men and women. I also discuss the ways the families of businesspeople define and project family security, which I consider as important information for the government to use for designing strategies of people-centered security.

WOMEN DRUG COURIERS AND THE TRANSNATIONAL MOVEMENT OF ILLICIT DRUGS: GENDERING SURVEILLANCE AND MOBILITY
Ilie Schemenauer, University of Wisconsin-Whitewater

The purpose of this poster is to examine the role of women and gender in the international trafficking of illicit drugs. Taking the international woman drug courier as an example, I will look at the gendered nature of the transnational movement of illicit drugs, the surveillance practices of state authorities, and the militarization of state borders. I ask: How does gender inform, shape, regulate, and legitimate the constellation of trafficking, surveillance, and security practices that come together at U.S. border sites like international airports?

Working for Wages, Working for Dignity: Caribbean Immigrant Women Transform the NYC Domestic Labor Market
Lavern McDonald, John Jay College

This poster examines a labor sector that has languished on the periphery, representing generations of marginalization for workers. The invisibility of domestic labor is further compounded when the workers represent groups that register deep on the marginalized fringes of society. Today in New York City, Afro- and Indo-Caribbean immigrant women — nannies, elder care-givers, housekeepers — are organizing to shift the balance of power in the labor market to secure greater rewards and greater respect for their work. Their self-advocacy is changing the immediate landscape of NYC domestic work and more generally, has significant implications for the labor market.

THE BRYN MAWR CLASS OF 1962: OPENING DOORS FOR WOMEN ENTERING THE PROFESSIONS
Alison Baker, Independent Scholar

This poster traces a small number of particular and representative lives, women from the Bryn Mawr College class of 1962. Photos and closely focused personal narrative show them navigating the turbulence of the 60s and early 70s, confronting crisis (divorce, sickness, getting fired), charting new territory for women in the professions. Along the top of the poster, a time line charts major events of the past 50 years, illustrating broad spatial and temporal patterns. In this way, the poster creates a (visual) dialogue between “history from above” and “history from below.”

ISSUES ENCOUNTERED WHEN USING A FEMINIST RESEARCH PERSPECTIVE
Lindann Maloney-Miller, Southern University

The purpose of the poster is twofold, the topic of the research, gender specific addiction treatment, requires increased awareness and two, the research method used, while intuitively correct, meet with skepticism in certain circles (read male researchers). To understand this problem it is necessary to understand the shortcomings of research into human behavior.

“WEEDS” A POSTMODERN PHENOMENON: PROMOTING AN AGENDA OF LEGALIZATION OR SIMPLY SHOWING AN ALTERNATIVE SIDE OF SUBURBIA? PERFORMING FEMINISM(S) AND MOTHERHOOD/MOTHERING ON “WEEDS.”
Roxanne A. Banuelos, California State University, Northridge
Judy E. Battaglio, California State University, Northridge

The satirical myth of socio-cultural oppression is clearly portrayed in “Weeds.” Nancy Botwin may be “desperate” but not in the same ways as her housewives’ counterparts. She still struggles with universal issues such as romantic love, widowng, mothering, domesticity, the issue of affluence, and the problem of work/family balance. Myths of socio-cultural ideals are brought to light. The theme of popular culture and art is central, not peripheral on this show. Fairy-tale brides of heterosexual couples are shown to both challenge and re-affirm cultural hegemony. Classical themes abound in “Weeds,” but with an interesting, exciting and refreshing postmodern twist.

GEORG W.F. HEGEL’S PHILOSOPHY DEBATED WITHIN FEMINIST THEORY
New Orleans Ballroom

In Georg W.F. Hegel’s philosophy’s contentious history within feminist theory, many find his exploration of the master/slave dialectic and his discussion of Antigone have meaning for women’s liberation. Others see his writings on the family and his discussion of women’s roles as signifying his acceptance of a 19th Century male chauvinist view of women. This panel will examine four feminist’s philosophic interpretations of Hegel who, each from a different perspective, view Hegel’s philosophy as a foundation for helping the women’s movement on its journey to full freedom. Panelist will discuss Raya Dunayevskaya, Kimberly Hutchings, Jessica Benjamin, and Seyla Benhabib.

TRANSNATIONAL (IM)MIGRANT WORKERS: DEFINING NATIONAL BOUNDARIES THROUGH LABORING BODIES
St Charles Ballroom: Salon II

This panel discusses the ways in which transnational or (im)migrant labor structures and practices purport to provide opportunities for those who might not otherwise find a livable wage within their home communities. Upon analysis, however, it becomes clear that the promise of transnational (im)migrant work functions to produce a racialized and gendered labor force that serves to help maintain national identities, and economic and political borders. Understanding national immigration and labor policies and debates as racialized, classed, and gendered sites can help us trace the symbiotic relationships between national and transnational hierarchies of labor power.

STRUGGLING WITH IDENTITY: ADVENTURES AND ADVANCES IN FEMINIST ETHICS
St Charles Ballroom: Salon VI

This panel explores three perspectives on the intersection of identity and ethics in feminist theory. Is identity a useful category in the progress of the feminist movement? What sort of personal identity might be necessary for a responsible feminist ethics? Our panel highlights the tensions between embracing and eschewing identity in feminist ethics while proposing some potential avenues for progress. In particular, we explore the value of troublemaking as advanced by Judith Butler, the need for an understanding of character and moral goodness in feminist virtue ethics, and the possibilities for solidarity across sexual identities.

MOTHERS IN MIGRATION: NEW DIASPORAS AND IMPLICATIONS FOR TRANSNATIONAL FEMINISM
Gallery Hall: Vermeer
“Mothers in Migration” examines motherhood within interdisciplinary frameworks provided by migration/diaspora studies and transnational feminism. By highlighting the experiences and narratives of mothers in migration, we globalize current Women’s Studies and feminist discussions about motherhood and establish connections between scholarship on motherhood and transnational feminist understandings of the gendered dimensions of displacement and diaspora. By focusing on mothers’ experiences as well as representations of these experiences in and across the diverse locations of South Asia, Africa, the Caribbean, and the U.S., our panel rethinks current academic and activist frameworks for understanding and addressing the gendered patterns of diaspora and migration.

PASSING THE BATON?: FROM COLONIAL TO NEOCOLONIAL PARADIGMS IN BELIZE, INDONESIA, AND SOUTH KOREA
Gem Rooms: Turquoise A

Education, beauty, and sexuality, as both concepts and systems, were used as tools to create and maintain colonial relationships and they continue to function in maintaining the role of the U.S. in the world. The panelists will investigate the past and present influence of religion in Belize, the categories of whiteness in Indonesia, and prostitution camps for U.S. soldiers in South Korea.

SEX, CLASS, AND MUSIC: MAPPING THE INTERSTICES IN POPULAR CULTURE AND THE EVERYDAY
Gem Rooms: Turquoise B

This panel looks at the interstices of race, sexuality, and gender across different media, and within the everyday. Each paper considers the dynamic relationship between marginalized and privileged positionalities - whiteness and race, queer sexuality and heterosexuality, class privilege and domination. By reading these experiences through the lens of television, the pulse of music, and the rhythm of the everyday, we seek to reveal sites of tension as well as resistance in popular culture and in the everyday.

286. Paper Session
CHILD PROTECTION, MILITARIZED MOTHERS, AND RETHINKING GENDER ISSUES
Legends: Jack Nicklaus
Panelists presents an alternative paradigm for child protection in the case of mothers with psychiatric disabilities, based on the feminist care model forwarded by Fischer and Tronat; examine the ways that militarized rhetoric of fear has manipulated mothers into believing that traditional family values are under attack from American culture as well as from terrorists; and discuss woman's role and duty as a mother through Susan Glaspell's play, "Trifles" (1916), which offers a rich text addressing and rethinking gender issues of the author's day.

287. PERFORMANCE
MegaCenter & Lobby: Exhibit performance
UNVEILING OF ISIS: A PERFORMANCE OF MADAME H. P. BLAVATSKY
Jeannie Rapstad, Purdue University Calumet
Now credited as the mother of New Age religion, 19th Century Russian born Madame Helena Petrovna Blavatsky was a gifted psychic and prolific writer on the occult. In this performance, Madame Blavatsky talks of her lifelong pursuit of religious truth while battling accusations of chicanery and promiscuity. When officious meddlers demand answers to exceedingly personal questions, are they entitled by rote to the (whole) truth? Must the concept of personal privacy dissolve upon notoriety? Must the life work of women be devalued, diminished or dismissed due to rumors of alleged sexual liaisons? In this piece, Madame Blavatsky takes a stand.

WOMEN'S STUDIES AND INTERDISCIPLINARITY IN JACQUI ALEXANDER'S PEDAGOGIES OF CROSSING
St Charles Ballroom: Salon IV
This panel examines Jacqui Alexander's Pedagogies of Crossing in order to consider the interdisciplinary synergies that might be realized through a practice of knowledge production which bridges the metaphysical and the material. While the text encourages us to pursue the Sacred in our various academic and activist locations, We build on this deployment of the Sacred to argue for a feminist pedagogy of the erotic as a form of liberatory politics within Women's Studies.

292. Panel
MOTHERHOOD, EDUCATION, AND FEMINISM
St Charles Ballroom: Salon V

The proposed panel will be an inter-generational gathering of four feminist scholars in religious studies, philosophy of education, history of education, and early childhood education. Recent feminist theorizing about motherhood (Rich, 1977; Chodorow, 1979; Trebilcot, 1984; Dinnerstein, 1977; Ruddick, 1988; hooks, 1984; Collins, 1991; Mullin, 2005) has scarcely recognized motherhood's educational significance. Therefore these panelists will discuss present and past educational thought on motherhood since the Enlightenment, to illuminate new questions that it may raise for contemporary feminist theory. The panel moderator will be a feminist scholar of sexuality education and girls' studies.

LEARNING AND TEACHING NATURE THROUGH KINGSOLVER'S CHARACTERS; LESSONS FROM INDIAN FEMINIST ACTIVISTS; LEARNING FROM ANZALDÚA AND LUGONES

Gallery Hall: Chagall

A critical look at Barbara Kingsolver's three powerful, educated women characters in Prodigal Summer, who know about nature and pass knowledge on to others. A second paper highlights the work of feminists rooted and grounded in Indian women's labor, anti-price rise and the environmental movements. A third paper looks at what we learn from Anzaldua and Lugones; that feminist coalitions must engage in the complicated task of simultaneously working on, and eventually moving beyond, the goals of our particular identity groups to form larger, more inclusive communities.

295. Workshop
FEMALE SKEPTICS AND HECKLERS: THE CHALLENGES OF TEACHING GENDER ISSUES IN MALE-DOMINATED PROGRAMS

Gallery Hall: Gauguin

It is one thing to teach gender issues to students in a Gender or Women's Studies program. Though there is no guarantee that you are teaching to the converted, the resistance to many of the concepts is most likely to be minimal. However, it is quite another thing to teach gender issues in a program other than Gender or Women's Studies, especially programs which continue to be male-dominated and based in patriarchal frameworks. This workshop explores pedagogical strategies in how to best deal with resistance and confrontation from female students in a classroom setting.

Karen Maria Keddy, Ball State University

296. Workshop
BLOGGING FOR GIRLS

Gallery Hall: Picasso

Blogging is a great vehicle for creativity, self-expression and activism for both women and girls. This workshop will introduce participants to the "blogsphere," other blogs by girls and women. The workshop will also cover how to create interesting, accessible and fun content for blogs, videoblogs and podcasts in DIY style.

RESEARCH ON THE IMPACT OF GLOBALIZATION ON WOMEN IN NICARAGUA - PART II
Gallery Hall: Utrillo
This panel session is the second of a two-part discussion covering field research in Nicaragua conducted in January of 2007 as part of a course on gender and globalization. In this session we will continue to examine the effects of globalization on various aspects of Nicaraguan women’s lives, including labor activism and unionization, farming and agriculture. Our session will pay particular attention to the ways in which neoliberalization and trade policies originating in the global north affect Nicaraguan social and economic policies.

298. Performance Session
GENDERED MOVEMENT IN EMBODIED RESEARCH
Gallery Hall: Vermeer
This performance piece will grow out of a course I’m teaching – “Gendered Movement and Embodied Research.” I will share my personal struggles as artist/scholar as I worked to develop a dance/movement course in Gender Studies while working on my own creative piece. Includes a brief discussion on how we can infuse performance arts in Gender studies.

PERFORMANCE SLAM—LET’S THROW DOWN SOME THEATER
Evette Hornsby-Minor, St. Lawrence University
The producing artistic directors of TAPIT/new works Ensemble Theater offer a participatory preview of their arts residency work with Women’s Studies students. Combining performance excerpts with sample workshop activities, the session shows how Company artists help students explore artistic expression as a form of cultural analysis, fusing the political and the personal through performance. Attendees will try out some exercises themselves and learn more about using performance practice in their own work.

299. Panel
SEXUAL VIOLENCE AND CONTEMPORARY MASS MEDIA
Gem Rooms: Jade
This panel explores representations of sexual violence in contemporary mass media. Panelists analyze the generation of sexual ideologies in selected fictional and non-fictional texts, the ways these texts are used in matters of sexual regulation including the construction of sexual norms, and how they figure in specific sexual political conflicts. Includes analysis of the TV series Law and Order: Special Victims Unit.

WOMEN OF COLOR FEMINISM IN A TRANSNATIONAL CONTEXT: RETHINKING SOLIDARITY, POSITIONALITY, AND POWER
Gem Rooms: Ruby
This panel interrogates the category of “women of color,” our respective positionalities, and our relationships to the categories “first world” and “third world” in the context of US imperialism. Although transnational feminism has become a dominant framework since the mid-1990s, does transnational feminist practice overcome the dangers of imperialist feminisms? Does transnational feminist solidarity change or alter our “transform” first-world positionality vis à vis third world subjects? As women of color feminists and scholar-activists, panelists will share our respective endeavors that attempt to bridge locations such as Iraq, India, Japan, Burma/Myanmar and the United States.

BLACK FEMINISM CHALLENGES SEXUAL ASSAULT: NO! A DOCUMENTARY FILM
Gem Rooms: Sapphire
Sexual violence incidents continue to challenge our campuses and communities. NO! is a new documentary film about assault and sexual violence against Black women and girls. The film addresses the special turmoil caused when Black men perpetrate these assaults. It reexamines the charges of “airing dirty laundry” that emerged from the very public controversies surrounding the Mike Tyson rape trial, as well as the continuing provocations in misogynist rap music and videos. Compelling testimony by survivors of sexual assault is juxtaposed with insightful and historical commentary from feminists such as Barbara Smith, Elaine Brown, Johnetta Cole and Beverly Guy Sheftall.

TRANS/FEMINISM AND WOMEN-ONLY SPACE: EXPLORATIONS IN GENDER POLICING, THE POLITICS OF SAFETY AND THE FUTURE OF SEXUAL DIFFERENCE
Gem Rooms: Turquoise A

Historically, the subjectivity attached to feminism was often unproblematically seen as a “woman.” Trans liberation, postmodernism, and the third wave have troubled this facile definition. However, identity politics continue to be a site of profound struggle in many feminist circles. What is a “woman” and who gets to decide? Is there still a need for women-only space in feminism and is this space inherently “safe”? These papers will discuss the Michigan Womyn’s Music Festival, Take Back the Night, transgender parenting and the radical-trans feminist impasse in order to analyze these thorny questions. Creative solutions will be proffered to encourage dialogue.

THEORIZING WITHIN/AGAINST HEALTH: THREE CONFERENCES, THREE DIALOGUES, IMPLICATIONS FOR WOMEN’S HEALTH
Gem Rooms: Turquoise B

Feminist theorizing on biomedicine (technoscientific perspectives, the intersectional perspective, and feminist ethics) opened up the interdisciplinary dialogue among feminists. Weber adds to this a call for dialogues between biomedicine and feminism. Following from this theorizing and the need for dialogue, we will discuss our experiences in organizing and conducting three conferences, held in University of Toronto, University of Michigan, and Towson University, that attempted critical dialogues on biomedicine. We will discuss the best ways to hold these dialogues, the theoretical implications of our dialogues on women’s health, and feminist strategies gained on entering a dialogue with biomedicine while resisting cooptation.

ETHICAL PERSONAL AND INSTITUTIONAL PRACTICES ACROSS DIFFERENCES
St Charles Ballroom: Salon V

Join the Ethics, Equity, and Diversity Committee of NWSA for a workshop to develop strategies for honoring the strength that comes with diversity. We hope for participants to come away with concrete ways to resist the “paralysis of fear” (Beverly Tatum) many people face when doing diversity work. We ask: How can anti-racist white people be allies to people of color? How do we move past guilt and denial into more productive responses? How do we promote social justice practices institutionally? How can NWSA live up to its promise of “working to end racism and all forms of oppression”?

REVISITING THE RELATION OF FEMINISM TO MARXISM
St Charles Ballroom: Salon VI

Debates about the relationship between feminism and Marxism dominated much of “Second Wave” theory, culminating in the 1981 publication of Heidi Hartmann’s “Unhappy Marriage of Marxism and Feminism” and the responses to it. Dual-systems theories came to predominate-theories that patriarchy determines the sexist character of society today, while capitalism determines the economic content. Marx’s contribution was subsequently relegated to the issue of class. One important exception is poet and essayist Adrienne Rich. In this panel, two generations of women will revisit the debates and their influence on the trajectory of feminist thought.

PRESIDENTIAL SESSION: BIRDS OF A FEATHER FLYING NORTH: LATINA IMMIGRANTS AND THE IMMIGRANT EXPERIENCE IN THE UNITED STATES
St Charles Ballroom: Salon IV

Yvette Louis, New Jersey City University
Lourdes Torres, DePaul University
Juanita Diaz-Cotto, State University of New York, Binghamton
Mirtha N. Quintanales, New Jersey City University

This workshop examines questions of identity, age, race, class, gender, sex and sexual orientation, religion/spirituality and political organizing among others, as they touch the lives of, and are reflected in, the work and creative expressions of Latin American immigrant women in the United States.

Workshop organizers—all Latina immigrants—share their personal journeys and their insights as academics, writers, editors, translators and political organizers in this country. Participants are invited to join them in the exploration of the Latina immigrant experience in the United States.

Yvette Louis is Assistant Professor of English at New Jersey City University. She holds a doctorate from the Department of Comparative Literature at Princeton University and a B.A. in Comparative Literature and Literature/Writing from Columbia University. Her field of specialization is the African diaspora in the Americas with particular focus on literature written in the United States and the Caribbean in English, Spanish, French, and Dutch.

She is currently revising a book projected titled Body Language: The Slave Body and the Word in the Literature of the African Americas for publication.

Mirtha N. Quintanales was born in Havana, Cuba, and immigrated to the United States in 1962. She received her PhD in Anthropology in 1987 from Ohio State University, Columbus Ohio.

Among her most recent publications is Telling to Live: Latina Feminist Testimonios, Duke University Press, 2001, co-edited with the Latina Feminist Group.

Telling to Live...was awarded the 2002 Myers Outstanding Book Award presented by the Gustavus Myers Center for the Study of Bigotry and Human Rights in North America.

Dr. Juanita Díaz-Cotto is an Associate Professor of Sociology, Women's Studies, and Latin American and Caribbean Area Studies. Within Latin America and the Caribbean, her areas of interest include: revolutionary movements; state formation; political economy; peasants; the military; feminist and lesbian feminist movements in Latin America and the U.S.; and the African Diaspora. Additional specialties include: Latinas(os) and other women of color in the U.S. and the impact of the criminal justice system on women and men of color in the U.S. and Latin America. One of Dr. Díaz-Cotto's primary academic and scholarly objectives is to help students bridge the gap between theory and practice inside and outside the classroom.

Lourdes Torres is an Associate Professor of Latin American and Latino/a Studies at DePaul University. She is the author of Puerto Rican Discourse and co-editor of Tortilleras: Latina and Hispanic Lesbian Expression and Third World Feminism and the Politics of Feminism. She is a board member of Latinas Amigas, a Chicago-based activist organization serving Latina lesbian, bisexual and transgender women.
311. PERFORMANCES
St Charles Ballroom / Salon I/III/IV
7:00pm - 9:00pm

PART I: JANE: ABORTION AND THE UNDERGROUND
Paula Kamen, Northwestern University

A half-hour performance of the critically acclaimed and widely performed play Jane: Abortion and the Underground, by the 20 Percent Theatre Company. A timely and provocative drama about "the best-kept secret" in Chicago, "Jane," an underground abortion service that operated from 1969 to 1973. This network, run by a feminist collective of mostly middle-class housewives and students, was the one safe alternative for about 11,000 Chicago women of all backgrounds.

In all those years, "Jane," which boasted no fatalities and operated in private apartments throughout the city, was well trusted by and commonly received referrals from police, university administrators, social work, clergy and hospital staff.

Paula Kamen, a Chicago journalist, is the author of All in My Head: An Epic Quest to Cure an Unrelenting, Totally Unreasonable, and Only Slightly Enlightening Headache. In theater work, she has had three plays produced. This includes Jane: Abortion and the Underground. The play was excerpted in several anthologies, including The Best Women's Monologues '99 and The Best Stage Scenes '99 (Smith & Kraus, 2001).

The original interview and archival research that Kamen conducted in the course of writing this play was used by the makers of the documentary Jane: An Abortion Service and is on file with the Special Collections Department of the Northwestern University Library.

EQUAL TREATMENT AND/OR EQUITABLE OUTCOMES: (WHEN) IS UNEQUAL FAIR?
Broadway Ballroom: Broadway A

This roundtable will address interrelated questions which have arisen from research exploring the means to achieve gender equity through education: Are risks of sex discrimination in educational processes necessary in some cases to decrease sex differences in outcomes valued by society? When is discrimination in educational processes likely to help provide needed advantages for countering later inequities? Is different inherently unequal or educationally valuable? Roundtable facilitators will draw upon their own experiences as educators, researchers, and activists to lead a discussion of the benefits, challenges, and liabilities related to equal and disparate treatment as they relate to educational equity.

FROM RACIAL SCRIPTS TO PEDAGOGIES OF RESISTANCE: CONTESTING & DISMANTLING WHITENESS IDEOLOGY & PRACTICES IN NWSA/USWS/LOCAL-GLOBAL
Broadway Ballroom: Broadway B

The Roundtable will focus on, but not be limited to, the following questions: Q. HOW can the RACIAL SCRIPTS that we can all narrate from lived experience, be used to build RESISTANCE PEDAGOGIES of Scholarship and Activism? Q. WHAT specific RACIAL SCRIPTS from the many we have assembled, are most effectively utilized to construct anti-supremacist, antiracist, antioppression PEDAGOGIES OF RESISTANCE in Women’s Studies syllabi, curriculum, coursework, administration and organizations?

FUN AND GAMES IN FEMINIST THEORY AS INFORMED BY FEMINIST PEDAGOGY
Broadway Ballroom: Broadway C

Throughout the semester, graduate students in a feminist theory class encountered a variety of social thought and social theorists. Students were asked to connect feminist theory on a variety of levels: thematically, chronologically, and categorically. From class discussions, students expressed interest in developing a game to not only put feminist theory into practice, but also design a pedagogical tool to encourage dialogue. In essence, students created a “cognitive map” to aid and illustrate how they could make sense of course material. This roundtable will explain the assignment and present examples of the games developed by students.

315. Paper Session
FEMINIST PEDAGOGIES
Gallery Hall: Chagall

Panelists discusses “Teaching Masculinities” as a women’s studies course as well as the challenges and possibilities of locating feminist critiques of men and masculinities within the women’s studies curriculum; ideas for teaching LGBT Literature curriculum in a Madison area public high school; and the debate among pro-choice feminists on “morality” and abortion, drawing upon the rich tradition of philosophical and legal discourse on abortion, and the more recent emerging psychological, historical and religious commentary.

316. Workshop
GENDER ISSUES IN SECONDARY CURRICULA
Gallery Hall: Gauguin

This workshop will begin with a presentation of two approaches to secondary curriculum: one that integrates gender themes into a broader unit of study, and an introduction to an interdisciplinary elective that is constructed around the theme of gender. After these two brief presentations, participants will be encouraged to share materials, experiences, and strategies.

317. Paper Session
WOMEN IN SPACE: GENDER AT WESTPOINT: INSPIRING GIRLS
Gallery Hall: Picasso

In the early 1960s, American women made their first push to qualify as astronauts. Presented is a detailed analysis of the transcripts of the 1962 House of Representatives hearings that debated whether or not there was gender discrimination in NASA’s establishment of qualifications for astronauts using gendered conceptions of time and history and how these terms were used by both sides of the debate. A second presentation focusses on why women at West Point were never referred to as “women” but instead, “female cadets," and explores the indications of how men still struggle to deal with the intrusion of women in "their world." Using findings from a pilot study a third presentation challenges a provocative feminist text book designed to empower girls.

BITCHING FEMINISM: STUDENTS MAKING WAVES ON CAMPUS

Gallery Hall: Utrillo

The officers of the Eastern Illinois University's Women's Studies student organization will discuss projects and events they have hosted on campus to raise awareness and promote activism among students, faculty, and community. The students strive to break down the negative stereotypes of feminism and make it more tangible to the community by hosting these events and getting people involved. The projects and events that will be discussed are the "Bitch" magazine reading group, Gender and Popcorn Film Series student club, interviews they have done for the media, and their "Sex in the Dark" program.

321. Paper Session
WOMEN IN PRISON AND THEIR CHILDREN

Gem Rooms: Jade

Panelists look at the experiences of incarcerated mothers, and illustrate the ways in which ideas about the conflicting roles of incarcerated mothers construct their social identity in such a way that it promotes a lack of understanding of women's lived experiences with motherhood regardless of their history with illegal activities; explores the material reality of undergraduate student mentors assisting in college level courses offered to incarcerated women, drawing attention to boundaries and barriers; address difficulties encountered and examined while conducting quasi-ethnographic research incorporating feminist principles in a women's correctional institution and talk about "Grace House," a transitional home in Chicago for mothers transition back into society and bonding with their children.

TRANS-BODIES, RELIGION, AND SEXUALITY
Gem Rooms: Sapphire

The first presenter proposes that Women’s Studies should emerge as a leader in the process of integrating GLBTQ issues into the curriculum and cultural events on campuses in the U.S. to produce a rhetoric of sexual diversity that can intervene in the culture of shame, stigma, and sexual repression that continues to characterize the dominant ideology of the Bible Belt.

The second presenter looks at transgender protagonists in manga (Japanese print cartoons) are visually and textually cited in conjunction with several mind/body identity theory and psychoanalytic works on the ‘bodily ego,’ in an effort to contextualize and critique debates on not only what it means to be a ‘boy’ or ‘girl,’ but also how an individual’s identity is affected.

324. Workshop
POWER, SEX & VIOLENCE: S&M IN THEORY AND PRACTICE
Gem Rooms: Turquoise

‘Deviant’ sexualities, revenge and retribution, and performative and/or imaginative violence have all been marginalized in many forms within the larger movements of feminism. Our workshop is an effort to focus on empowering people within a feminist framework while simultaneously illustrating that these marginalized realities are critically important, useful, cathartic and present in many people’s day to day lives. Through opening dialogue using feminist pedagogical tools around these areas and the performance and representation of violence, queer sexuality and S&M we hope to engage discussion around whether or not such realities can be positively represented within current and future feminist discourse.

327. Paper Session
REGULATING REPRODUCTION AND THE IDEOLOGY OF PURITY
Legends: Jack Nicklaus

Panelists trace a genealogy of the regulation of women’s reproductive capacities through a reading of Vina Delmar’s Bad Girl and argue that access to abortion and contraceptives must be seen within the racist and paranoid history of abortion and birth control’s regulation; examine new work from ethicist Margaret Little who argues that mainstream discussions of abortion are dissatisfying because they do not address the embodied phenomenon of gestation which is ultimately unsatisfactory; and explore the idea of the “defilement” of women’s bodies as having created an “ideology of purity.”

WOMEN'S AND GENDER STUDIES IN LIBERAL ARTS COLLEGES: A ROUNDTABLE
New Orleans Ballroom
This round table will bring together women's and gender studies faculty from liberal arts colleges to consider such questions as: What are the challenges and opportunities - practical, structural and intellectual - for women's and gender studies programs and departments in liberal arts colleges? How do we build a truly interdisciplinary curriculum on a foundation of largely disciplinary cross-listed courses with a faculty primarily housed in disciplinary departments? Is women's studies the quintessential liberal arts discipline?

329. Paper Session
WOMEN, RELIGIOUS LAW AND FEMINISM
St Charles Ballroom: Salon I
Panelists explore past and present debates over the use of the Bible to limit female religious participation within various mainstream churches and suggest a role feminist biblical interpretation can play in resolving these disputes; analyze feminist reinterpretations of Islamic scriptures, the unreading of patriarchal interpretations of the Qur’an and how Muslim women implement these interpretations in their everyday life; and examine the current debate in Pakistan over the validity of the Hudood Ordinances, especially the ‘Offence of Zina (Enforcement of Hudood) Ordinance,’ and what implications a debate of this nature holds for the future of the status of women in Pakistan.

331. Paper Session
TRANSNATIONAL FEMINISM, WOMEN’S LEADERSHIP, AND FEMINIST AGENTS OF CHANGE
St Charles Ballroom: Salon VI
Panelists focus on the nationalist Quit India Movement of 1942, examining the significant contribution of women’s leadership to both the anti-colonial struggle and the nascent feminist movement in India and their contribution the status of Indian women today and for theories and praxes of global feminism; explore contemporary feminist discourse regarding Indigenous women in Central America under assault from a number of modernizing projects that have the effect and or goal of producing docile feminine bodies capacitated to participate in an increasingly feminized global labor pool; discuss how home becomes a site of oppression for many women who sacrifice their livelihood in exchange for the family and how in Cuba, the methods for securing women’s identity challenge patriarchal systems to create feminist agents of change.

END 8:00 AM SESSIONS
332. Paper Session
FEMINIST RESEARCH SCIENCE AND SURVEILLANCE
Broadway Ballroom: Broadway A

Panelists argue that in their desire to exclude junk science, our courts have accepted wholesale the positivist presumptions, and thereby effectively excluded feminist voices from the truth-givers in the courtroom; explores suggested guidelines and analyzes the use of strict scientific methodologies and data as one strategy to combat conservative assaults on Women's Studies and other social justice oriented programs; examine the No Child Left Behind Act's ideological underpinnings of surveillance and control; and call into question the dominant framework for understanding the ethical and social implications of genomics found in the discourse of bioethics.

333. Roundtable
CHALLENGING GENDER DISCRIMINATION THROUGH ACTION PROJECT: A WOMEN’S STUDIES COURSE ASSIGNMENT
Broadway Ballroom: Broadway B

Women's Studies faculty discuss the successes and setbacks implementing a new group letter-writing activism project, Challenging Gender Discrimination through Action, in our Introductory Women's Studies Course. We will explain our original ideas for the project, describe its implementation, analyze the outcomes, and assess the impact with handouts covering the assignment, our conclusions and plans for future improvements.

Laurie Fuller, Northeastern Illinois University

334. Roundtable
CREATING SAFE LEARNING SPACES FOR SURVIVORS OF SEXUAL ASSAULT: A FACULTY AND STUDENT ROUNDTABLE
Broadway Ballroom: Broadway C

In this round table, several Women's Studies students and one faculty member-most of whom are survivors—will discuss their experiences in classrooms where explicitly violent material is used. We will discuss the kinds of materials that may cause flashbacks or extreme emotional responses and brainstorm ways of teaching about violence against women while also maintaining a reliable climate of safety in the classroom.

335. Sponsored Session
GENDER, SEXUALITY, MASS MEDIA AND THE STATE IN POST-SOVIET BELARUS (INTERNATIONAL TASK FORCE SESSION)
Gallery Hall: Gauguin

This session examines the performance of gender and sexuality in Post-Soviet Belarus. Emphasis is on patriarchal and homophobic strategies the state media use to legitimize, consolidate, and perpetuate the Belarusian political hegemony and their impact on LGBT populations in Belarus.

Colette Morrow, Purdue University-Calumet

336. Workshop
INTERDISCIPLINARY ASSIGNMENTS: WHY NOT?
Gallery Hall: Picasso

Connecting a discrete segment of courses provides an interdisciplinary experience based in faculty expertise and poses another model for curricular infusion. A literature, political science, and Women's Studies course could examine the use of metaphor in politics or advertising; a Disability Studies, Women's Studies, health, and pre-law course could analyze a film like “Million Dollar Baby.” With technology, the courses can even be in different time zones. Imagine the opportunities for feminist infiltration. We will develop an interdisciplinary assignment for your own campus and explore the possibility of connecting campuses through, for example, strategy simulators like A Force More Powerful.

Deb Hoskins, University of Wisconsin at La Crosse
337. Paper Session
SEXUALITY, BISEXUALITY, AND SEX WORK
Gallery Hall: Utrillo

Panlists examine part of a larger research project on representations of female sexuality within popular literature from 1945-1975, focusing on one particular question - Who controls female sexuality? and how notions of acceptable female sexuality were constructed and publicly presented in each decade; taking a theoretical journey of sexuality and politics, using personal experience, scrutiny and analogy to argue that understanding sexuality as "taste" might fill in certain gaps that are both created and unexpectedly resolved by the same "Bisexual Problematic"; and critiques the rhetoric of sex tourism discourse demonstrating how examples of transnational intimacy in the Middle East sharpen theoretical understandings of sex tourism.

338. Workshop
SO WHAT DOES FEMINISM HAVE TO DO WITH ME?
LEARNING ABOUT GENDER IN A LEARNING COMMUNITIES FORMAT
Gallery Hall: Vermeer

For this generation of college women, exploring issues of gender can seem irrelevant or unrelated to their experience. For those of us charged with raising awareness regarding the importance of gender in terms of the paths women take and the doors that are open academically and in the workplace, it is essential that we identify the venues in which we can reach women students on these issues. Learning Communities have been successful in facilitating collaborative learning across traditional boundaries and can be an effective means of teaching about the meaning of gender and multiculturalism in women's lives.

Katherine Rose-Mockry, University of Kansas

339. Workshop
THE FEMINIST POSSIBILITIES OF DISTANCE EDUCATION
Gem Rooms: Coral

In a workshop format, six feminist teachers in online classrooms, members of the NWSA Distance Education group, will share feminist strategies, examples, and handouts for bridging divides in online learning, including divides between teachers and students, faculty and administration, university and community, movement and place-boundness, and rural and urban and virtual and material divides.

340. Roundtable
MEN DOING FEMINISM: BALANCING POWER & RESPONSIBILITY WITH ACCOUNTABILITY
Gem Rooms: Jade

Men and women working together in the movement to end interpersonal violence is necessary if we are to achieve change, and rewarding for those involved in the work. It can also present several challenges, including placing men with unexamined privilege at the center of the work, unfairly promulgating "instant credibility" of pro-feminist men, unintended chauvinism, and a shift in allocation of resources -- all of which may be counterproductive to the forward momentum of the anti-violence movement. This session will address ways to create genuinely shared space, to challenge gender socialization, and to offer strategies to ensure accountability.

Chris Linden, Colorado State University

341. Paper Session
NEW DATING, FRIENDSHIP, AND SEX IN THE CITY
Gem Rooms: Ruby

Panelists present an ethnographic study of the culture of dating in Los Angeles and the avenue for women's liberation that is created via dating in the 21st century such as blind dating, speed dating, online dating; examine how and why seven childhood friends remain friends thirty years later; and discuss how HBO's "Sex and the City" has proven itself as much more than a commercially successful television show with its explored topics of feminism, sexuality, and cultural politics in a bold, unapologetic, and unique way.

WOMEN’S STUDIES FACULTY AT WORK: LESSONS FROM A LEARNING COMMUNITY

Legends: Ben Hogan

This roundtable will discuss the collection of essays that various faculty members who teach Women’s Studies classes at [University X] and who are members of a Learning Community are in the process of polishing. Each essay considers the significance of either a favorite or an important lesson that the professor teaches in his/her respective class. Sharing our pedagogical strategies in this way has helped to build coherence in our Women’s Studies minor and has also inspired us as teachers in important and meaningful ways.

DO WE KNOW BETTER?: DISCUSSING THE STATE OF FEMINIST EPISTEMOLOGY

New Orleans Ballroom

In the past 30 years feminist theory has made enormous contributions to epistemology and philosophy of science, generating the now mature field of feminist epistemology and science studies. This roundtable seeks to discuss the current state of feminist epistemology, addressing the ways in which feminist knowing provides a “better” way of knowing than standard modes of knowledge gathering, the ways in which feminist inquiry extends to the sciences, the materiality of knowledge gathering, and the politics and ethics of located knowing.

Catherine Hundleby, University of Windsor
Nancy Arden McHugh, Wittenberg University
Moderator: Carla Fehr, Iowa State University

344. Paper Session
FEMINIST CONFLICT, FEMINIST COLLABORATION

St Charles Ballroom: Salon III

Panelists critique the ways authorship and collaboration function in academia. In response, we explicate and present a case study for a feminist-based methodology of collaboration, re-articulating collaboration as involving shared creation, experimentation, dialogue and labor; explore the transformative role that feminist pedagogies can have on classrooms and the decision of the student to switch majors; and revisit ideas about labor, bureaucracy, gender, and feminist liberation that emerge in feminist theory, particularly as they are viewed across generations in the work of Emma Goldman and Kathy Ferguson.

PROMOTING WOMEN’S INTERCULTURAL ENGAGEMENT, TRANSFORMATION, AND AGENCY: A NEW PORTFOLIO-BASED CERTIFICATE IN INTERCULTURAL LEADERSHIP

St Charles Ballroom: Salon IV

This interactive roundtable will facilitate a discussion around the Center for Women’s Intercultural Leadership’s new certificate in Intercultural Leadership, which operationalizes our theoretical model of such leadership. The certificate will provide students a structure to demonstrate through e-portfolios their mastery of six proficiency areas, organizing many curricular and co-curricular learning opportunities. Educating at the intersection of anti-racist feminist theory and women’s leadership, the certificate integrates theory with practice, action with reflection, and knowledge of self and others into effective agency for social change. Roundtable participants will reflect upon their best-practices, as well as examples of their students’ transformative intercultural engagements.

This roundtable describes projects emerging from a partnership between the Claremont Colleges and a community organization, the Women & Criminal Justice Network. We will describe the Network’s goals of addressing the needs and interests of incarcerated women and its strategy of bringing people outside into the prison to build relationships and organize with women on the inside, focusing on how the Network and the Colleges have worked together. We will also discuss how students have participated in this work, developing a campus organization to engage in consciousness-raising and in relationship-building with young incarcerated women.

TELLING STORIES ABOUT GIRLHOOD: FROM VIRGINS TO NYMPHETS TO BLACK GIRLS’ RESISTANCE

Stories about girls and girlhood—both fictional narratives and social scripts—are discussed in these papers. Participant observation and interviews with girls at the Girls Empowerment Project (GEP) to explore the relationship between Black girls’ resistance and the organizational context in which it occurs; Girls’ fiction and the impact of stories on young girls as they absorb our stories; and interrogating/deconstructing the ways in which ‘virginity’ is constructed as a symbolic transformation from girlhood to personhood.

CHANGING BOUNDARIES AND IDENTITIES IN WOMEN’S STUDIES: CURRENT CHALLENGES AND FUTURE POSSIBILITIES

In this roundtable, academics located in Women’s Studies departments in the United States and Canada will reflect on the shifting parameters and narratives of the discipline. Through a series of short reflections on some of these issues [e.g. Women’s Studies and Gender Studies, narratives and practices of Women’s Studies, (im)possibility of theorizing feminisms, globalization] and in the spirit of a self-reflexivity this roundtable’s participants will engage each other and the audience in an ongoing conversation about the field’s current and contentious—definition(s).

“EMBODIED REVOLUTION: A NATIONAL LOOK AT GENDER BASED AND BODY CONSCIOUS ACTIVISM”

Gallery Hall: Chagall

Screening of the new documentary, “Embodied Revolution,” a film exploring gender based and body conscious activism across the U.S. The documentary highlights twenty different activists engaged in direct action, community organizing, performance art, and everyday revolution. Each tackle a variety of issues from gender stereotyping and discrimination to body image, fat identity, queer femme visibility, transgender rights, representations and objectifications of women in the media, safer communities, and more. An open discussion will follow with the filmmaker concerning movement work and what this type of activism means in terms of a larger and more inclusive revolution.

Erin Remick, Warren Wilson College

356. Paper Session

GENDERED PERFORMANCE IN POLITICAL ACTIVISM, RESEARCH AND COLLABORATIVE ART

Gallery Hall: Gauguin

Papers examine queer subjectivities in the film “Better Than Chocolate”; view the work of four women artists of color as an important epistemological act; the “collaborative art” weblog PostSecret.com and what the weblog can tell us about fostering feminist community; and the challenges and advantages that including men in feminist research and the specific contribution that transmen can potentially bring to a critical feminist discussion about gender inequality and gender transgression.

357. Paper Session

LITERARY TRADITIONS

Gallery Hall: Picasso

Panelists present stories of the immigration/emigration event in the lives of French speaking women coming into the U.S. via the land bridge between the U.S. and Canada; explore the grotesque/ nauseating/subversive language of exiled Cuban author Zoe Valdes to understand the opposition/binaries/hierarchies intrinsic to linguistic discourse that lead to the construction of absolute categories like masculinity/femininity; and analyze the struggles Margaret Morrissey faced as a lesbian, nun, and a woman struggling with mental illness, arguing that given her sexuality, her relationship with the Catholic Church, the Newfoundland/Irish heritage, and mental health, Margaret was positioned both inside and outside the spheres of family, Church, and society.

358. Workshop

VIOLENCE AGAINST WOMEN - RECLAIMING OUR POWER

Gallery Hall: Utrillo

This session furthers understanding of the impact of violence against women, and more importantly, allows us to see how women can help each other to reclaim our power and discover that inextinguishable light within, to conquer fears and find strength, hope and healing. Learn why viewing violence against women from the perspective of women’s strength is crucial to women’s studies, and how we can implement the model set forth here, in our own work.

359. Workshop

SPIRITUALITY AND POLITICS: THE RIGHT AND THE LEFT

Gallery Hall: Vermeer

This workshop offers an overview of the Christian fundamentalist and neo-conservative coalition, which reveal an anti-woman and women’s rights agenda. Second, the workshop demonstrates that the power and successes of the current women’s spirituality movement have strengthened resistance in our communities. After presentation on the results of Bush administration gender politics and a PowerPoint presentation, “Women’s Spirituality and Liberal Politics,” workshop presenters will lead a discussion and address strategies for resisting and confronting gender politics in our own communities.

THEATER IN MOTION: AN EXPLORATION OF THE IMPACT OF COMMUNITY ON BODY IMAGE

Gem Rooms: Coral

Through the use of dramatic activities, this interactive theatre workshop provides teachers, community workers, women's studies faculty, and teaching artists with new resources to open dialogue with the women they work with. These resources will be used to explore feelings and ideas surrounding the impact of our communities and environments on self-perception and body image in a safe and supportive space of creation.

Rebecca Jubelirer, New York University

361. Paper Session
WOMEN'S RIGHTS, HUMAN RIGHTS

Gem Rooms: Ruby

Panelists investigate the extent to which domestic violence professionals within the U.S. have adopted a human rights framework given that historically the U.S. has been a leading proponent of human rights yet has not ratified many of the primary United Nations human rights conventions; and question the effectiveness of a narrow, legal, rights-based approach to the international protection of women suggesting that incorporating Rorty's concept “literalization of selected metaphors,” may lead to a more fruitful investigation of ways to protect women and, also, provide a normative foundation from which to extend our very particular local attachments to include imagined others.

363. Roundtable
IDENTIFYING WITH RACE IN THE WOMEN'S STUDIES CLASSROOM: THE ROLE OF IDENTITY IN DISCUSSIONS OF RACE

New Orleans Ballroom

Race tends to be a sensitive topic in general and can be difficult to navigate within the classroom. One's ability to facilitate and maintain an effective, informative, and objective discussion surrounding race and racism is often influenced by the dynamic that takes place between the instructor's identity and the make-up of the student body. We seek to discuss how our diverse identities have affected our individual approaches to race and racism in class discussions. We also wish to address student reactions to the material and to each of us as individuals presenting the material.

364. Paper Session
GENDER QUEERS AND WOMEN’S STUDIES

St Charles Ballroom: Salon III

Panelists explore the need to bring queer and “trans” perspectives to traditional women’s studies; introduce pedagogical strategies that utilize the intersection of race, gender, class, and age as equal participants in the creation of a queer pedagogy; and explore feminist theories around gender identity and expression through queer theory and multicultural feminist works.

HUMAN RIGHTS, PUBLIC POLICY, AND FEMINISM

St Charles Ballroom: Salon V

Maria Bevacqua will explore the benefits and drawbacks of incorporating a human-rights framework into anti-rape activism and service provision as practiced in the United States today. Carrie Baker will focus on how feminists in the United States are attempting to use international human rights principles and forums to combat domestic violence. Alesha Durfee will present research focusing on the gendered paradox faced by men when filing for a protection order against a female partner. Tonia St. Germain will present a case study of issues faced by a feminist running for public office.

Donna Lisker, Duke University
Amy Jacobson, Alfred University
Shannon Doran, Public Leadership Education Network

To address the advancement of women’s leadership on campus, many universities have created innovative programs that embed a single-sex experience in a coeducational setting or that aim to support and advance women in leadership positions. Leadership educators in the past decade have also increasingly emphasized the importance of social activism as a tool for leadership development.

In many ways, this link between leadership and social change is nothing new for women’s centers. Students involved in women’s centers have been learning leadership through activism for many years. But consciously and intentionally using activism as a tool for teaching leadership can present its own challenges. This session will focus on discussing women’s leadership programs and centers on campus, as well as the ways such programs/centers use social activism as a means of leadership education.

Participants will share the research that led to the creation of the program or center; describe the process of proposing, justifying, and designing it; share data on the program’s/center’s impact on campus culture; and discuss the rewards and challenges of integrating leadership and activism into their programs.

349. CRITICAL ISSUE SESSION: PUBLISHING IN WOMEN’S STUDIES: A PUBLIC VOICE

Gem Rooms: Turquoise A
Session Format: Workshop

SESSION LEADERS:
Deborah Siegel, Author and Consultant
Jean Casella, Editor
Nancy Crossman, Crossman Literary Agency

Women’s studies scholars and students write about topics central to public debate. Yet too often our work fails to reach an audience outside of the academy. At the same time, to write a book in today’s competitive publishing climate, scholars must appeal to a broader audience than was necessary in the past.

This session brings together the people who can help facilitate these translations—literary agents and editors—with scholars who are currently negotiating the traverse. Panelists will discuss the components of a successful book proposal, the writerly and professional payoffs of “crossing over,” and the scholarly challenges of writing “pop” while pursuing tenure.

Jean Casella has worked in independent book publishing for more than 20 years, most recently as publisher of the Feminist Press at CUNY. She is coeditor of two anthologies, Almost Touching the Skies: Women’s Coming of Age Stories, and Cast a Cold Eye: American Opinion Writing, and coauthored the introduction to Baghdad Burning II: More Girl Blog from Iraq. She is currently a freelance editor and consultant, working with authors, publishers, and nonprofit organizations.

351. CRITICAL ISSUE SESSION:
COLLABORATIVE RESEARCH: A PRACTICAL
INTRODUCTION TO PARTICIPATORY ACTION RESEARCH

Legends: Jack Nicklaus

SESSION FORMAT: Workshop

SESSION LEADER:
Alaka Wali, The Center for Cultural Understanding and Change, The Field Museum

This session will delve into how to create effective Participatory Action Research (PAR) projects, how to represent distinct voices in engaged research, and how to deepen research collaborations. Participatory Action Research is a way for professional researchers and community residents to collaborate on investigations into issues such as housing, healthcare, and environmental conservation—with the goal of achieving positive social change.

PAR values both scholarly and community-based perspectives to address questions related to living conditions, services, and policy, in order to make life better for people living in a given community, as defined by that community.

As director of the Center for Cultural Understanding and Change (CCUC) at the Field Museum, Wali is responsible for coordination of a range of programs designed to enhance interdisciplinary work at the museum, strengthen public programming on cultural issues, and promote efforts to link the museum to the greater Chicago community. Her research program has concentrated on understanding the impact of global economic restructuring on the ways in which people organize themselves and constitute their social identities. As an applied anthropologist, my aim has been to use the results of the research to formulate more humane solutions to social problems.

Dr. Wali was born in India and received her B.A. from Radcliffe College and a Ph.D. in anthropology from Columbia University. She is the author of several monographs and more than thirty articles and, with co-author Leith Mullings, wrote Stress and Resilience: The Social Context of Reproduction in Central Harlem (2001). Her work, which has been supported by the National Endowment for the Humanities and the John D. and Catherine T. MacArthur Foundation, currently focuses on the changing nature of ethnic and class formations in urban areas of the U.S.

Feminist Teacher
a journal of the practices, theories, and scholarship of feminist teaching

Since 1984, Feminist Teacher has been at the forefront of discussions about how to fight sexism, racism, homophobia, and other forms of oppression in our classrooms and in the institutions in which we work. A peer-reviewed journal, Feminist Teacher provides a forum for interrogations of cultural assumptions and discussions of such topics as multiculturalism, interdisciplinarity, and distance education within a feminist context. Feminist Teacher serves as a medium in which educators can describe strategies that have worked in their classrooms, institutions, or non-traditional settings; theorize about successes or failures; discuss the current place of feminist pedagogies and teachers in classrooms and institutions; and reveal the rich variety of feminist pedagogical approaches. The journal also remains committed to addressing issues that face educators today, including anti-feminism, anti-academic backlash, and sexual harassment.

Editorial cartoons are a great way to generate discussion. Let Elaine Miller, PhD, professor emerita of women’s studies and foreign languages at SUNY Brockport, show you an approach she’s developed that is sure to engage learners. This powerful teaching tool will:

- Deliver serious cultural commentary with punch and humor
- Provoke passionate discussion and debate
- Facilitate understanding of world views on critical social and political issues

Dr. Miller has interviewed dozens of cartoonists, both US and Latin American, and has produced three videos on the subject. She will highlight the work of some of the best cartoonists today for:

- Classes in subjects like women and gender studies, history, communications, foreign languages and cultures, and political science
- Workshops for teachers
- Presentations for community organizations

To learn more about the art of using editorial cartoons in the classroom or to schedule a presentation, call Elaine Miller at 585-350-9365.

Visit www.ekmillerproductions.com for more information.
Public policy teaching cases tell a real public policy story that is short, stripped of theory and analysis, and allows for many possible solutions. Case teaching thus provides:
- vigorous, participatory, discussion-based learning where students discover lessons for themselves
- an opportunity for students to learn the stories of the women’s movement’s struggles and organizations, too often lost to history
- an examination of public policy issues that draw on women’s experiences

Less than 1% of the thousands of existing cases explore gender, raise a women and public policy question or even have a female protagonist. The Center on Women and Public Policy is working to change that --

The Veiled Monologues
Tom Sellar, editor

This issue features the first English translation of Adelheid Roosen’s sensational play The Veiled Monologues. The play, based on Roosen’s interviews with hundreds of Muslim women from around the world who emigrated to the Netherlands, powerfully reveals the challenges they experience as they reckon with issues of intimacy, sexuality, and love.

Read the introduction for free at theater.dukejournals.org/content/voI37/issue2.

Truth Commissions: State Terror, History, and Memory
a special issue of Radical History Review (number 97)
Greg Grandin and Thomas Miller Klubock, special issue editors

The essays in this special issue examine the role of history in truth commissions organized to investigate political violence, state terror, and human rights violations around the globe and consider the different kinds of history produced by commissions.

Read the introduction for free at rhr.dukejournals.org/content/vol2007/issue97.

The New Women’s Labor History
a special issue of Labor (volume 3, number 3)
Eileen Boris, special issue editor; Leon Fink, Julie Greene, Joan Sangster, and Mercedes Steedman, special issue coeditors

Offering the latest scholarship in the field of women’s labor history, this special issue suggests new directions for labor history—ones that address the study of gendered bodies at the intersection of the politics of class, race, and citizenship.

Read the introduction for free at labor.dukejournals.org/content/vol3/issue3.

Journal of Women’s History

Jean Allman and Antonette Burton, Editors

The Journal of Women’s History is the first journal devoted exclusively to the international field of women’s history. It does not attempt to impose one feminist argument but recognizes the multiple perspectives captured by the term “feminisms.” Its guiding principle is a belief that the divide between “women’s history” and “gender history” can be, and is, bridged by work that is sensitive to the particular historical constructions of gender that shape and are shaped by women’s experience.

Annual Subscriptions: $42.00, individuals (paper or online); $37.00, students (with copy of student ID); $110.00, institutions (paper or online); $154.00, institutions (paper & online).
Print ISSN: 1042-7961; E-ISSN: 1527-2036.

GETTING OFF
PORNOGRAPHY AND THE END OF MASCULINITY
ROBERT JENSEN
In his most personal and difficult book to date, Robert Jensen launches a powerful critique of mainstream pornography that promises to reignite one of the fiercest debates in contemporary feminism.

BLACK GEOGRAPHIES
AND THE POLITICS OF PLACE
EDITED BY KATHERINE MCKITTRICK & CLYDE WOODS
An essential intervention into the understanding of race and space. Black Geographies maps the political development and origins of black spaces from the Middle Passage and the signposts of US apartheid through contemporary black aesthetics movements.

NEW paper, $20

WHAT LIES BENEATH
KATRINA, RACE, & THE STATE OF THE NATION
EDITED BY THE SOUTH END PRESS COLLECTIVE
Short and accessible, What Lies Beneath, featuring such voices as Common Ground, INCITE!, and Ross Gelbspan, takes readers beyond the Superdome. It explores the complexity of this turning point in US history as a terrible but instructive mirror of the nation history as well as its future.

NEW paper, $14

OUTSIDERS WITHIN
WRITING ON TRANSRACIAL ADOPTION
EDITED BY JANE JEONG TRENKA, JULIA CHINYERE OPARAH, & SUN YUNG SHIN
Through compelling essays, fiction, poetry, and art, this landmark publication carefully explores this most intimate aspect of globalization. Finally, in the unmediated voices of the adults who have matured within it, we find a rarely-considered view of adoption, an institution often presumed benevolent despite its heavy cultural, emotional, even economic tolls.

AVAILABLE NOW paper, $20

HEAT
HOW TO STOP THE PLANET FROM BURNING
GEORGE MONBIOT
Climate change is the greatest problem facing our world. Is the problem too big? Is it too late? In Heat, one of the world's leading environmental activists and journalists proves with rigorous analysis—and great passion—that there is a way forward.

NEW hardcover, $22

THE REVOLUTION WILL NOT BE FUNDED
BEYOND THE NON-PROFIT INDUSTRIAL COMPLEX
EDITED BY INCITE! WOMEN OF COLOR AGAINST VIOLENCE
Urgent and visionary, The Revolution Will Not Be Funded is an unholden expose of the "non-profit industrial complex" and its quietly devastating role in managing dissent.

NEW paper, $18

COLOR OF VIOLENCE
THE INCITE ANTHOLOGY
EDITED BY INCITE! WOMEN OF COLOR AGAINST VIOLENCE
Springing from the work of the nation's largest grassroots multiracial feminist organization, this collection expands understandings about violence against women, clarifying how violence operates through race, class, gender, and nationality, and exposing the state's role in condoning and furthering gendered violence against people of color and their communities.

AVAILABLE NOW paper, $20

CONQUEST
SEXUAL VIOLENCE AND AMERICAN INDIAN GENOCIDE
ANDREA SMITH
In this revolutionary text, Smith, a prominent and award-winning scholar/activist, reveals the connections between different forms of violence—perpetrated by the state and by society at large—and documents how Native women are impacted. An instant classic, Conquest ultimately dares us to imagine a world without violence.

NEW IN WOMEN’S STUDIES

ENTITLED to the Pedestal
Place, Race, and Progress in White Southern Women’s Writing, 1920–1945
by Nghana Tamu Lewis

“Nghana Lewis’s redirected spotlight on White Southern Womanhood’s productive uses for modernity shines beyond the literary, inspiring us to scrutinize how Plantation Mythology and the Southern Lady’s card shape the work of not only female authors 1920–1945 but also contemporary figures ranging from Queen Latifah and Oprah Winfrey to Elizabeth Dole, Kay Bailey Hutchison, and even Laura Bush.” — BONNIE JAMES SHAKER, author, Coloring Locals: Racial Formation in Kate Chopin’s “Youth’s Companion” Stories
