LC Commissioned Composers Web Archive: Why this topic for a web archive?

1. Alignment with History & Mission

   - The Library of Congress Music Division has commissioned new compositions annually since 1925 with 10 funds.

   - Commissioned music is integral to the Music Division’s collection development.

   - Documentation of our funds’ commissioned composers simultaneously documents the Music Division’s legacy.

   - Web archiving is a way to obtain digital content not donated or purchased with composers’ papers.

2. Aggregate Value of Websites

- Websites document contemporary composers’ careers over time.
- Websites of deceased composers’ memorial foundations, research institutes, and awards document their legacies.
- The related non-LOC web archive and this one enhance research value of both with additional captures and contextual web content not in respective collection scopes.

3. Community

- As a performer who specializes in contemporary music, I’m an “embedded archivist” in this community.

- As an archivist working as a Reference Specialist, I have the subject expertise, research skills, and vocabulary to communicate with records creators and technical services staff.
My Challenges

- Lone web archives arranger of my division (no immediate community)
- Building a new community (working with a different division)
- PERMISSIONS! Bounced emails, finding heirs, OGC rules, etc.
- Compiling info from disparate Music Division resources for initial “backlog” ingest (research)
- Web archiving vocabulary learning curve
- Internal workflow tool kinks
- Incorporating item-level activity into daily duties (time management)
Where do I fit in?
There’s a Life Cycle Model for That!

Institutional-level areas to which I contribute as a Recommending Officer for Web Archiving.
Project-specific areas which are my responsibility as a Recommending Officer for Web Archiving
Selection of Collection Items

Composer Selection Criteria:

The composer must have been commissioned to compose a musical work with a fund in the Library of Congress Music Division.

That’s it!

Weekend Berio a Parigi

Dal 1° al 3 febbraio, alla Cité de la Musique / Philharmonie de Paris, è in programma un "Week-end Berio" che, oltre all’esecuzione di alcuni “classici” del catalogo berioniano (tra cui Sinfonia, Sequenza VIII e Opus Number 20), presenterà due novità di eccezionale rilievo: venerdì 1º febbraio (Salle des concerts, ore 20:30) verrà presentato L’Orfeo, nelabrazione del capolavoro monteverdiano ideata da Berio nel 1964 e realizzata in prima assoluta a Firenze con un collettivo di compositori tra cui Luca Francesconi, Ludovico Einaudi, Maurizio Dini Clacci e Betty Olivero. Nel 1966 l’opera fu ripresa sempre a

Tokyo Opera City Concert Hall / Recital Hall

Toru Takemitsu Composition Award

Tokyo Opera City Cultural Foundation aspires to promote and foster the possibility of more creative music culture for the future. As one sphere of our activities, to carry out the intention of the Foundation’s first artistic director, the late Toru Takemitsu, under the theme of “Prayer, Hope and Peace” and “Window to the Future”, the Foundation established the “Toru Takemitsu Composition Award” in order to inspire younger generations all over the world to contribute to the creation of new musical compositions.

Each year, one judge, without committee, reviews and chooses 4-5 compositions out of the submitted musical works to be performed in the Tokyo Opera City Concert Hall, where the judge will announce the recipients of the award during the “Composium” festival, which takes place in around May each year, focuses on the contemporary music and features musical performances of works by the current year’s judge.

For three years from 1997 to 1999, Mr. Toru Takemitsu himself chose three composers, one for each year, and then these three composers nominated the next three composers for the coming three years, one for each year. Since the year 2003, the judge has been appointed by the recommendation of the Foundation’s Advisor Committee (whose members are Oliver Knussen, Kent Nagano, Kazushi Ono, Simon Rattle and Esa-Pekka Salonen, and were the late Hiroyuki Iwaki and the late Hiroshi Wakasugi), and the last three previous judges.

The Ernst Bacon Society
Founded to promote the music and other works of American composer, Ernst Bacon

The Ernst Bacon Society was founded in January, 1996 to promote awareness and appreciation of the music and other works of Ernst Bacon. To that end, we arranged a highly successful series of concerts for the centennial year and are looking forward to many more. The Society feels strongly that a closer inspection will reveal a truly remarkable contribution to American music and that the world will be richer for hearing and knowing it.

Mr. Bacon’s work is remarkably pure in its expressive intent. It communicates its meaning with a straightforward and touching humanity. It is not got up with chromium-plated cadenzas or lace-curtain-like instrumental figurations. But it is full of melody and variety. It is honest and skillful and beautiful. -- Virgil Thomson, New York Herald Tribune, March 4, 1946.

"You are like the clear dawn wind in the midst of the foul smogs of contemporary cultural decay." -- Ansel Adams

Appraisal of Collection Items: The Logic of “Never”

Why not a music publisher’s page about a composer, especially if no website exists?

- Publisher content is not unique. Biographical information and repertoire lists are content that is or will be included in music reference sources.
- Composers are often represented by multiple publishers over time - no page will be complete.
- Publisher sites often require human interaction with a database format; web crawlers currently cannot capture that content.

Why not a composer’s faculty page? Isn’t that “evidentiary value?”

- A faculty page is one page that serves as a directory, not a collection of pages like a website that promotes the work and legacy of the composer.
- The information is not unique and will be maintained in records of the institution.
- Teaching appointments get referenced in website, album, & interview bios.
Appraisal of Collection Items: The Logic of “Never”

Why not a composer’s Wikipedia entry, especially if no website exists?

- Accuracy of Wikipedia entries varies
- Articles can be edited, changed, or deleted anytime without verification of information
- Sources cited are not always stable or active URLs
- Information is secondary or tertiary
- Information is not unique
- LOC is already has plans to archive Wikipedia. Composer pages can therefore be accessed in the future without duplication in the LC Commissioned Composers Web Archive

The Logic of “Never”

Most importantly...

This collection isn’t supposed to be a vertical file!

The absence of content is as important as the presence of content in the format specified by the collection scope.
