Welcome!

The Special Collections department of the Albin O. Kuhn Library & Gallery collects materials of enduring historical and cultural value -- housing, preserving, and making accessible materials that are original, rare, unique, fragile, and archival. Our collections and staff support UMBC's research and educational mission and its dedication to cultural and ethnic diversity, social responsibility and lifelong learning.

Our diverse collections include a wide variety of formats such as rare books, photographs, manuscripts, archives, audio and visual recordings, digital items and artifacts. They are available for research use on site by faculty, students, staff, visiting scholars, and the general public.

Why are these materials held in the Special Collections department?

- The item is unique or rare: many of our items are rare or even one-of-a-kind and require an additional level of security to make sure that they are available for future researchers.
- The item requires additional facilitation during access: archival collections come in many different formats and often require assistance from the Special Collections staff during use.

Visiting Special Collections

Please watch this video, or scroll below to see a text version, to learn about what to expect when visiting Special Collections. Many of our policies are similar to other special collection and archival repositories. Our department is open to the public - you do not need to be affiliated with UMBC!

Please use one of the methods below to contact the department staff:

- chat (select "Ask a Librarian" button on the right side of any webpage)
- e-mail (speccoll@umbc.edu)
- voicemail (410-455-2353)
- online research consultation with an archivist (schedule a consultation here).

Text overview

The Special Collections reading room is located on the first floor of the Albin O. Kuhn Library & Gallery, in the back of the Gallery. Because of the nature of the collections, the reading room is considered a secure area, and the materials are not in circulation. All materials must be used in the reading room. To ensure the safety and longevity of these items we have a few guidelines to assist researchers and protect our archives.

All coats, umbrellas, backpacks, and briefcases should be left at the entrance table. No food, drink, or bags are allowed in Special Collections to protect the materials. You may have up to

Use available content

Repurposed frequently used content

Used videos when possible to demonstrate actions and avoid text-only modules.

Thank you UT San Antonio for handling videos on Youtube!

Handling books

There are a few guidelines we follow when we use any book, regardless of the age or condition. We don't use gloves with books but should have clean, dry hands. All books should remain on the table in a book cradle. The purpose of the book cradle is to protect the spine, joints, and text block; these are very susceptible to damage. Please do not bend, force or pull on the pages, if a book is prone to closing we have snakes and book weights available.

Tools:

- Book cradle: A book cradle comes in many varieties and can be made from foam, molded plastic, or fabric. The soft book cradles are similar to pillows and they allow the book to open up at a natural angle. The firm book cradles keep a book opened at a predefined angle.
- Snake: A snake is a weighted string that is used to keep pages in place.
- Book weight: A book weight is similar to a snake, it is intended to hold a book open without placing stress on the binding or spine. They are usually more heavy and concentrated than the snakes.

Document analysis introduction

Working with original, primary sources for your research is different from reading a textbook or academic writing about a topic. Instead of reading another scholar's interpretation of an item, you are analyzing the item and forming your own interpretation. This is an exciting aspect of original research and one that we'll try out together in this section.

When you're analyzing or reading a historical document, there are several different levels of interpretation. The National Archives outlines it this way:

1. Meet the document.
2. Observe its parts.
3. Try to make sense of it.
4. Use it as historical evidence.

In addition to the information conveyed in the document (the facts, stories, or data) it is also important to consider the format of the item, the physical features, the role of the creator, and the intended audience. We'll go over these in more detail below.

Primary vs. Secondary sources video

Need a refresher on what the difference is between primary and secondary sources? Check out this short video:

Chez mon oncle
Baltimore

June 27. 1871

My darling wife

My own beloved Lally.

It occurs to me that I must write to you tonight in order to be in time for the Mail. Otherwise I should wait till I received your next letter.

I think I shall start for home on the 5th of July. O.V.

Of course I have not been idle about my dear children. I have had three long discussions with Uncle.

And today at last he has

Letter: Henry O'Donnell to Elizabeth Sarah (Mousley) O'Donnell, June 27, 1871. Box 1, Folder 23, O'Donnell family papers, Collection 100, Special Collections, University of Maryland, Baltimore County (Baltimore, MD).

View the full catalog record, with description and metadata, or see an enlarged image:

<https://collections.digitalmaryland.org/digital/collection/akop/id/203>

Let's take some time to closely examine this item. What are some features that you observe? These could include visual features of the item or the photograph, objects shown, people included, the topic of the photograph, etc. Here are some examples:

- Hand-written in blue ink
- Thin paper, you can see the ink bleeding through from the other side
- There is a stamp or sticker at the top: a crown with an arm holding an arrow. What is the significance of this?
- Location and date the letter was written is listed at the top
- June 27, 1871
- Spouse writing to their wife, "Lally"
- Informal, personal letter
- Handwriting is hard to read!

Who is the creator? Who is the intended audience?

The catalog record lists the creator as Henry O'Donnell - this would be a good name to look up during your research. This letter was written to his wife, who he addresses as Lally. The audience was likely only Lally unless Henry anticipated that she would share the letter with other family members.

Different methods for reviewing/submitting worksheets (Google Form with embedded images, Google Form with images on web, or PDF worksheet)

Expanded by Dec 2020 to 5 asynchronous exercises

Document analysis exercise #1: Japanese American incarceration during WWII

For this assignment, place yourself in the role of a student researching the lives of Japanese and Japanese-American children forced to live in internment during WWII. You will see two images, each from a different project: Dorothea Lange's assignment with the War Relocation Authority, and a similar project by Ansel Adams, both at the Manzanar War Relocation Center in Inyo County, California. Each image is accompanied by a detailed descriptive catalog record and a contextual piece of writing.

Use the link below to access the exercise. The forms will be submitted at the end and reviewed (but not graded) by a Special Collections librarian and then forwarded to your professor. There is a comments/questions box at the end of the form.

- Japanese American incarceration document analysis exercise

Document analysis exercise #2: East Baltimore Documentary Photography Project

For this assignment, you'll be looking at four items pulled from one archival collection, the East Baltimore Documentary Photography Project papers. A series of questions follow each document; these questions will prompt you to examine the physical and informational features of each item. Consider how you can learn about the East Baltimore Documentary Photography Project by examining different item formats like reports, correspondence, photographs, and oral history interview transcripts.

Use the link below to access the exercise. The forms will be submitted at the end and reviewed (but not graded) by a Special Collections librarian and then forwarded to your professor. There is a comments/questions box at the end of the form.

Introduction to searching Special Collections

Text overview

In this video we will walk through how to search for the books, photographs, and archives available in the UMBC Special Collections department.

On the Library homepage, you can use the main Everything or Books, Music, Video tabs to search for books in Special Collections. This includes books on photography, Maryland history, science fiction, rare books, artists' books, and comic books.

You can see in the Location field that there is a non-circulating copy in Special Collections. Scans from books can be provided by contacting the Special Collections department.

Video tutorials for searching

“How to search” is a key part of most instruction sessions

Camtasia, Panopto, Screencast-o-matic, Adobe Premier, or record screen capture on video meeting software

Can use in advance of, in place of in-class instruction and available on Library tutorials webpage for everyone

Searching for Photographs

Searching the UMBC Archival Collections

Video tutorial tips

Write a detailed script that you can read as you record and repurpose for closed captioning features

Test out your search terms in advance

Use screenshots/still images or search results screens as needed to cut down on webpage load time

Editing the video is an option but not required - if figuring out editing software is preventing you from making the video, then just make the video

Be kind to yourself and remember that in-person instruction is not free of mispronunciation, flubs, stammering, "ums"

Reflection

Asynchronous services and social distancing measures are still in use for both reference and instruction

No remote classes scheduled for Fall 2022 semester

Planning review and video updates for next Spring (3 year review)

3 years?! Hard to understand time

Introduction to Archives Management for Museum Professionals

Purpose of the Course

- Provide a basic introductory overview of archival administration, historical documentation, and the management of historical resources.
- A special emphasis will be placed on archival-centered connections to museum and cultural repositories. In addition, the objective is to share a basic understanding of the archival functions of collection development, appraisal, arrangement and description, reference, outreach, advocacy, ethics, digitization and copyright, as well as records management, for both paper and electronic records.
- This course will include a variety of exercises, guest lecturers, and a site visit designed to illustrate the relationship between theory and practice will also be a major part of the instruction focus.
- The final goal will be to have students understand how to find and use archival resources for possible museum uses, as well as appreciating the connections and similarities between archives and museum work.

Assignments & Off-Site Factors

- Mid-Term Essay = Appraisal and Collections Development Paper. This will include reviewing documents, small collections and going through the study and application of reviewing the validity of the item(s) and going through the proper best practices approach to archival evaluation and preservation, (3-6 pages)
- Final Essay = Document Exhibition Project: Scour the web for digitized documents, photographs, and other appropriate material found in archival and similar repositories and construct your own online exhibition featuring a minimum of eight items found from at least three different sites on a theme of your choosing. Write all text for the exhibition, (5-10 pages)

Course Description / Overview

- This course is designed to provide the student with a detailed knowledge of how the Catholic Church developed within the context of New Jersey and American history over the past three centuries.
- The story of a distinctive Catholic experience has many dimensions which will be described not only through major milestones and eras, but through a growing socio-religious perspective which includes the laity, religious leaders, and key individuals.
- In addition, a review of specific aspects that cover the important points of religious expression including parish life, institutional support, intellectual content, and various areas of New Jersey centered Catholic traditions that add precise detail to the overall subject area will be covered in depth.
- Most importantly this course will not only provide broad historical perspective but is designed to encourage local and personalized connections to the subject matter. (* i.e.: Catholic and catholic)

What is a Primary Source?

A primary source is a first-hand or contemporary account of an event or topic. They are the most direct evidence of a time or event because they were created by people or things that were there at the time or event. These sources have not been modified by interpretation and offer original thought or new information. Primary sources are original materials, regardless of format.

Letters, diaries, minutes, photographs, artifacts, interviews, and sound or video recordings are examples of primary sources created as a time or event is occurring. Oral histories, newspaper or journal articles, and memoirs or autobiographies are examples of primary sources created after the event or time in question but offering first-hand accounts.

Primary sources may be transformed from their original format into a newer one, such as when materials are published or digitized, but the contents are still primary. There are many primary sources available online today, but many more are still available in their original format, in archives, museums, libraries, historical sites, and elsewhere.

Testimonial

- Your course was my first graduate level class in awhile and even more, in a field that is different than what I am used to. I was surrounded by so many talented classmates who were so well beyond me in their studies that I felt like a Freshman again. I appreciate how you laid out the basics for archival studies but also connected them with our own interests.
- One of my biggest struggles was constantly having to plunge into my own interests to put together our projects and I appreciate learning how to get a better sense of myself. What I loved most about our class is that there is a sense of there being an archive for everything. It's mind-blowing and a little scary – scary because there are so many possibilities, and it is hard to pick just one. Insert Robert Frost quote.
- I'm looking within the years to come to possibly pursue my Masters in Library Science or something similar, though I don't know how soon that will come about. I appreciate the solid stepping stone you gave me in exploring archival possibilities. I will make sure to keep in touch with you in the times to come and appreciate the foundations you have given us all.
