Media Coverage

Media Coverage of the UM/Banneker-Douglass Archaeological Dig, August 2001

Print Coverage

Washington Post. "Outhouse's Rich History Unearthed; Annapolis Dig Offers Glimpse of African American Lives in the Civil War Era." The story, written by Monte Reel, Washington Post Staff Writer, appeared Sunday, August 5, 2001 in the Metro section on page C-3.

Capital (Annapolis). "Dig brings the past to life Archaeologists' work details African-American experience." Jeff Horseman's 622 word story appeared on page A-1 on Friday, August 10. Two photos accompanied the story, including pictures of Banneker-Douglass Museum intern Chase Taylor and pictures of the dig.

Capital (Annapolis). The previous week Horseman ran a short item announcing the availability of public tours of the dig site. This appeared Thursday, August 2, page A-11.

Black Issues in Higher Education. "Maryland Archaeologists Dig Up Remains of Free-Standing Black Community. This full-page story, which quoted liberally from the news release, appeared in the August 30 edition in the "noteworthy/news" section on page 16.

Associated Press. "Archaeologists probe history of 19th-century black Annapolis," Tom Stuckey's 885 word story plus photo were fed on August 18, 2001 to affiliates on the Maryland state wire.

Among those carrying the AP story:

Washington Times, on Monday, August 20, in the Metro section, page C-3

Prince George's Journal, Sunday, August 19, on page A-2

Broadcast Coverage

Channel 13, WJZ-TV, Baltimore. Thursday, August 2.

Channel 2, WMAR-TV, Baltimore. Thursday, August 2.

News Channel 8, Washington (All-news regional cable station). Saturday, August 11.
